BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

QUICK RECOVERY FROM TIE-UP FOLLOWING SLUSH-STORM RAILROADS CROWDING LUMBER DEPARTMENT FOR POLES.

Coal Should Be Carefully Used—
Record Wire Orders Expected.

THE slush-storm of Sunday and Monday occasioned an enforced expenditure of a great deal of money for wire, poles and crossarms at a time when railway interests were holding back on supply orders. The lumber market began to feel high pressure inquiry from railroad supply houses for quick deliveries as the week closed. Big wire and cable companies were taxed to supply wire to take the place of that torn and tangled along the railroads between this city and points as far as 100 miles west and north. One railroad, the Central of New Jersey, will require about 2,800 poles with 8,000 crossarms. The Pennsylvania will need about 1,000 more poles; the Erie will take approximately 4,000, and the Lackawanna approximately 2,000. No estimate was obtainable regarding the volume of copper wire and steel cable that the telephone, telegraph and railroad companies will require; but it was estimated at not less than 5,000 miles of telegraph wire and 500 tons of steel cabling.

At the offices of the big steel companies no information could be obtained as to the probable effect of this heavy buying movement upon mill capacity; but, owing to the fact that capacity has been gauged close to current requirements, it is possible that it will result in opening other furnaces.

New York came nearer having a fuel famine this week than in generations. The coal distributing companies were just getting down to a working schedule again, following the heavy snowfall of last week, when the storm of Sunday threatened to tie up carting worse than ever. Even now, according to one company, the chaos prevailing on the coal-carrying railroads may cause a scarcity of coal at the Port Reading, Amboy and Elizabethport trestles, and managers of buildings are urged to conserve their present coal supplies as much as possible until something like normal telegraphic communication can be restored so that freight trains can be moved regularly, or about the middle of next week.

With reference to the present state of the basic building market, it is neither worse nor better than it was a week ago. There is little construction work going ahead, because materials could not be moved during the week. Prices have not changed, but the inquiry continued fairly steady.

Title companies say that the enforced retarding of building construction in the metropolitan district during the last two months will have a beneficial effect upon construction when the weather is more settled. Applications for accommodation are more numerous, but, in accordance with the general policy of financiers, there is a tendency to postpone operations of a speculative nature until later in the season. Specialty building projects are having no difficulty in getting accommodation, although interest rates are still stiff. In the meantime, inquiry for building materials, while fair, has not developed as distributors here had anticipated. Few look for active contracting until the latter end of the month.

The 1914 building season opens with bright prospects as far as the volume for new building construction is concerned, although it is problematical whether the actual cash outlay will compare with that for a corresponding period last year. Supplies, such as naval stores, lubricants, linseed oil, pairts, glass and hardware are easy to firm on prices and demand is improving. No great price-list changes are expected for a fortnight.

MORE BRICK RIDDEN.

Supply Adequate to Meet Any Demand District May Develop.

BRICK riding showed to better advantage this week, although trucking companies were not disposed to risk over-working their horses in the still heavy conditions of the streets. The result was that builders could not get as much brick as they wanted, which leads to expectations of a continued sharp riding movement early next week if weather conditions prove favorable to construction work.

In fact, a sharp demand for brick is expected next week, which is the official opening of the 1914 building season, but the supply is so great that there is not the least prospect of anybody experiencing any difficulty in getting all the brick they require at prices now prevailing. A few days of continued warm weather will reopen the river and a fleet of brick barges that have been lying in Newburgh bay all winter will move on toward this market, despite the fact that there were at the wholesale docks Friday morning 79 barge loads, or approximately 27,650,000 common brick, all of which is protected from the weather and can be ridden at once.

Official transactions for Hudson common brick covering the week ending Thursday, March 5, in the wholesale market, with comparisons for the corresponding period last year and a comparative statement of Hudsou brick unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

MILLIKEN BROS.' REPORT.

Steel Fabricating Concern Free From Mortgage Indebtedness.

BUILDING material and architectural interests are advised in the first annual report of Milliken Brothers, Inc., for the year ended December 31, 1913, that it is free from mortgage indebtedness and that while the restrictions imposed by the receivers of the old company had left it with little or no work on hand, trade conditions are gradually improving and a prosperous year is looked forward to. The output of the shops during 1913 was 34,389 tons.

The buildings and equipment of the open-hearth steel plant and rolling mills, with the exception of such buildings and equipment as are considered of special value to the fabricating plant, have been sold for dismantling and removal. With the buildings and equipment retained, and a nominal expenditure, the fabricating plant will have an annual capacity of more than 100,000 tons. There is no necessity to dispose of any part of the company's surplus real estate holdings at present. Such surplus consists of about 140 acres situated on Staten Island and in New Jersey. It is the plan of the company to retain this land until such time as real inducements are offered to sell. The common stock of the company has been deposited under a voting trust agreement under which William Salomon, Jules S. Bache and Andrew Morrison are the voting trustees and the Guaranty Trust Company of New York is depositary.

NEW YORK'S COAL SUPPLY.

Burns Bros. Shown to Control Practically All Anthracite Used Here.

BUILDING managers, who yearly contract for large quantities of anthracite coal for steaming and heating purposes, will be interested in the revelations brought out at the hearings in a Government suit against the Reading, Jersey Central and Lehigh Coal & Navigation companies recently.

T. B. Koons, vice-president of the Jersey Central, described the routes over which the road hauls coal. It was stated by Mr. Koons that this road handles all the tonnage of the Lehigh & Wilkesbarre Coal Company, and that it has the richest anthracite fuel consumption traffic territory in the world.

It was shown by this witness that Burns Brothers have a ten-year lease with the Jersey Central as lessor and the coal firm as lessee, bearing date of June 15, 1910. Among the covenants of this arrangement is the use by Burns Brothers of certain parcels of land and a pier in Jersey City, for which Burns Brothers pay $30,000 annually.

Burns Brothers agreed to purchase all anthracite handled over the leased property from points north or west of Mauch Chunck and all bituminous coal and coke from such points as would give the Jersey Central the longest possible haul and to handle no less than 500,000 gross tons of coal and coke a fiscal year, giving preference on equal terms to Lehigh & Wilkesbarre Coal Company and paying the average market prices ruling from time to time at shipping points in New York harbor.

The Jersey Central, for its part, agrees to maintain the property and to deliver all coal and coke by placing loaded cars upon trestles or piers, and removing the empty cars without charge, with the stipulation that Burns Brothers should furnish at their sole cost all the labor and other services required to unload and ship the coal. The Jersey Central, however, by the same agreement grants an allowance to Burns Brothers for such services, 12 cents a ton on all soft coal, and steam sizes of hard coal at 15 cents a ton.

STEEL LINES SHOW ACTIVITY.

Structural and Equipment Departments Reflect Improved Inquiry.

METAL for building construction or equipment has proved to be the barometer of the spriug building movement during the last two weeks when building has been more or less stagnated in this city. Fabricating plants are figuring a better grade of custom, mill capacity has been increased and pig iron orders have been developing into larger tonnages than prevailed during the corresponding period last mouth. Hardware orders for merchandise reflect a wider scope of specifying in architects' offices. Nails, while still moderate, are nevertheless showing an improvement in demand and reinforcement is being sharply spoken for.

THE LUMBER MARKET.

Material Scarce and Deliveries May Be Slower As Demand Increases.

LUMBER wholesalers are discovering that they have misjudged the requirements of the metropolitan district for the spring, mainly because dealers have kept their supplies low during the winter months. This has led producers to believe that the market was well supplied, and in consequence the manufacturers have ridden fewer logs than they otherwise would have done had they known that the retail stocks were low. This accounts in some degree at least for the stiffening tone in prices of spruce, which, during the last month, topped the highest price f. o. b. mills Canada; white pine, which is reported to be bringing $15 Canadian mill as against only $10 last year. Yellow pine prices have slightly advanced and will go higher as the spring movement develops. Eastern spruce shows signs of opening strong, hemlock is being sold at base rate.

ENORMOUS COAL PRODUCTION.

U. S. Geological Survey Reports An Increase Over Record-Breaking 1912.

A PRODUCTION of between 565,000,000 and 575,000,000 short tons of coal in the United States during 1913 is the official estimate of the United States Geological Survey, an increase over the record-breaking production of 1912 of 30,000,000 to 40,000,000 tons, of which about 4,500,000 tons was in anthracite and the rest in the output of the bituminous coal mines.

There were a few labor disturbances, local in extent and effect, the most pronounced was in Colorado, where a general strike was called about the middle of September, and coal production in that State during the last quarter of the year was but about 50 per cent. of normal. There was general complaint, particularly in the eastern States, of shortage of labor and inability on the part of the operators to keep their mines working at full capacity. This was probably the reason for the less than usual complaint of the inadequate or insufficient transportation service. Coal mining, like all other industries in the Ohio Valley States, was seriously interfered with by the floods in that region during the spring, and probably from 5,000,000 to 10,000,000 tons of coal would have been added to the year's output but for this. As there were no violent fluctuations in manufacturing industries, the demand for coal for industrial purposes showed only a normal increase. The continued decrease in the production of fuel oil in the mid-Continent oil field and the strike in the Colorado coal mines resulted in an increased output of coal in the southwestern States. The total quantity of coal consumed in this market is approximately 19,000,000 tons a year, of which 7,000,000 short tons are bituminous, or soft coal, and 12,000,000 short tone are hard coal.

REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS GUIDE.

NEW YORK, MARCH 14, 1914

SHOULD ELEVATORS HAVE SAFETY DEVICES?

The Herrick Bill Opposed on Various Grounds by Building Authorities and Representative Owners—Urged that Existing Buildings be Exempted.

MUCH opposition has developed to the Herrick bill in the State Senate which provides that every passenger elevator, except those in private residences, shall be fitted with an automatic safety appliance so that the car cannot be started while the elevator door is open. The installations must all be made within one year, in both new and old buildings, under a penalty of five dollars per day for every day thereafter that the law is violated.

The opposition is based on several grounds, principally because the law would be retroactive and affect existing buildings as well as those to be erected hereafter; and would therefore be a great hardship, as is claimed, upon the owners of existing buildings containing passenger elevators. Not only would the installations be costly, but the safety-appliances would have the effect of slowing up elevator traffic and causing congestion. The president of an elevator manufacturing company agrees that this diminished efficiency would follow and that it would probably compel the installation of more elevators in tall buildings than is now necessary.

The Superintendents of Buildings are all opposed to the bill as it stands, Supt. Miller of Manhattan holding that it would be quite impossible to equip every elevator in the city within the prescribed period of one year. A strong feeling prevails, moreover, that the owners of old buildings are being too severely treated by the Legislature, and that there should be more consideration shown for those buildings which complied with the building laws fully at the time of their erection.

On the other hand, there are those among builders and owners who favor the fundamental principle of the bill, or some fair and moderate means through which elevators should gradually be equipped with safety devices.

Driving Landlords Into Bankruptcy.

B. E. Martin, president of the Building Owners and Managers' Association, said he presumed that the bill intended to compel the installation of safeties for levers and doors of elevators, and if this was the purpose of the bill, he considered it entirely unnecessary. He added:

"On referring to records you will find that the percentage of elevator accidents is small, particularly such accidents as might be avoided by the devices in question. It is my belief that this bill would not have been brought before us but for the death of a prominent citizen recently through a very unsual elevator accident.

"The fact of the matter is that after very careful investigation I have not found a device that is absolutely reliable. If the authorities continue to compel what many consider unnecessary expenses, to business and apartment buildings in New York City, it will have a tendency to increase rents, or drive some poor landlords into bankruptcy.

"I always have and will continue to support the authorities in their endeavors to protect human life; however, it has not been proven that the devices referred to will assist in this good work."

Favorable Opinions.

John C. Knight, manager of the Metropolitan Building, said the elevators in that building had been protected by safety devices for over six years. He had advocated an installation of this kind and has been in favor of safety devices of this type. He added:

"There may be some details about this bill with which I would not agree, but the 'handwriting on the wall' has been plain, not only in this State but in several of the other States, that this device will soon be required. I think that at this time it is only appropriate to congratulate those who have done this before they were required to."

Messrs. Bing & Bing, large builders, said they thought the equipment of elevators with safety devices a good thing, but that a little longer time than one year to install them would be advisable, as comparatively few elevators are at present equipped, and crowding the work into a short time would necessarily increase the expense.

Will Slow Up Traffic.

Lawrence B. Elliman, of Pease & Elliman, said it would mean delay for elevator traffic, and he was therefore opposed to it:

"This bill, as I understand it, requires the owner of the building to put some device on the gate of the elevator and the gate of the landing so that the elevator cannot be started until they are both closed. This would mean a great delay in the moving of people up and down in the building, and besides I do not know of any device which will do this and which would not be getting out of order all the time, when you consider the calibre of men operating the elevators in the city.

"It would undoubtedly tie up the elevator system in the buildings very often and cause untold trouble between the landlord and tenants. Besides this, in my opinion, it is not necessary, as the number of accidents which happen in comparison to the number of people carried in the elevators in the city is very small."

Supt. Carlin Opposed.

Supt. Carlin, of the Brooklyn Bureau of Buildings, does not believe that an automatic device should control an elevator car, but he agrees that the doors to the elevator shaft should be controlled automatically by closing the moment the car leaves the floor level. The automatic control called for in the bill cuts out the operating machinery. Suppose these devices had been in use in the Ashe Building at the time of the fire when the shaft doors were pried open and the operator called and tried to respond but found that the car was out of his control, due to the shaft door being opened, and therefore could not bring the elevator car up to the landing—if this had been the case, how many would have been saved of the number that actually were saved by the elevators? Supt. Carlin further said:

"The operation of elevator cars should never be out of the control of the operator and the responsibility put right up to him. Automatic devices encourage carelessness, and verv often fail to work when required and are very often the cause of accidents."

An Estimate of the Cost.

President E. B. Boynton, of the American Real Estate Co., which owns many buildings, said when interrogated:

"The evident intent of this bill is to make it impossible for an elevator to be moved when any door opening into the elevator shaft is ajar. A great number of elevators in New York City are electric, and in order to conform with the requirements of this bill, in cases of electric elevators, it would mean providing a switch or point of contact at each floor which would close when the door was closed and break the current connecting with the controller when any door is opened. Such an installation would probably not cost less than $25 per opening, and in the case of a 12-story building with three elevators the expense would be approximately $1,000 for an installation.

"It is easy to imagine frequent repairs on an electrical outfit having so many points of contact which are frequently opened and closed, subjected to rough use. In case of the contact failing to work on any one of the floors, the elevator would be out of commission until this was repaired, and it could not be repaired while the elevator was in use. No elevator door can be repaired with this apparatus and still run the elevator. The expense of maintenance on such an apparatus will necessarily be high.

"A building which has now barely sufficient elevator service for its occupancy will, if this law goes into effect, be unable to handle the traffic because of the longer time each elevator will take in making the run from the ground floor to the top and return.

"There is undoubtedly a strong feeling that some safety appliance should be applied to all elevators, but in my opinion this bill is not wholly satisfactory."

Retroactive Consequences Objected to.

G. Richard Davis, chairman of the Building Committee of the Allied Interests, is opposed to the bill, for one reason because it is retroactive.

"Such safety devices may be properly required on all new elevators installed," said Mr. Davis, "but on old ones there should be no such a requirement made until the present devices, which are still in their experimental stage, are perfected.

"Elevator enclosures and doors must be built to receive the present device. To be compelled to alter the present enclosures and doors, so as to make the safety device now on the market work properly, will be in some cases a prohibitive expense.

"There is no doubt that we will have to have some safety device on elevators, particularly on high-speed elevators, such as they put in office buildings. Elevators which travel slowly, such as those in apartment houses, do not need the same protection.

"It is clearly not a matter for the Legislature to interfere with, but should be one of municipal regulation. I would approve a bill which would give power to the Superintendent of Buildings to require a safety device upon all new installations. Devices to be of two kinds, one for high-speed elevators and one for low-speed elevators.

"The first device would prevent the car being operated unless every door in the shaft was closed. The second device would only require the collapsible gate of the elevator door to be closed before the car could be operated.

"This latter is a simple device and could be put on any car. I would approve of requiring this device put on all cars within one year from date, but I absolutely disapprove of requiring the first mentioned device, to wit, the one that the Herrick bill calls for, being installed by compulsion on elevators already built.

"After a year or two of experimenting with some new cars with the present device, it may be that we will then be prepared to put them on old cars, but at the present time I believe it would be impossible in a great many cases, except at a prohibitive expense, and that the courts would prevent the enforcement of such a law. In any event, it would be an unnecessary hardship, and I assure you that the real estate owners suffer from too many laws and requirements without having further ones imposed upon them."

INCOME TAX QUESTIONS STILL UNSETTLED

How Much Shall Be Written Off for Depreciation? The Chicago Real Estate Board Suggests a Schedule as a Guide to Uniformity.

THE Federal income tax schedules which real estate corporations and owners had to file previous to last week raised the question as to what sum should be charged off for depreciation of buildings. Every property owner who was called upon to make a return had to take into consideration this question, and decide in his own mind what percentage of the total value of the building he should fix upon.

No guide was supplied by the Government, or any indication given as to what percentage would be allowable as an annual charge. Neither was any explanation given as to whether economic as well as physical depreciation should be accounted for. A building may be good physically for one hundred years to come, but its economic value may not endure for more than a generation, when it will have to be removed, in order that its place may be taken by a structure capable of producing an income in proportion to the increased value of the site.

It is only in recent years that real estate owners have recognized the necessity of making an annual charge on their books for depreciation, and some still adhere to the theory that the depreciation of the value of the building need not be taken into account in view of the appreciation from year to year in the value of the land. It is within the knowledge of every reader that many buildings physically sound are annually torn down to make way for others, and that sometimes very costly buildings are scrapped. The Government requires that owners shall separate these two forces at work upon real estate and set down one sum for appreciation (under Item No. 3) and another sum for depreciation (under Item No. 4). Where depreciation of physical property is made good by renewals, replacement repairs, etc., and the expense of such renewals is charged to the general expense account of the owner, no deduction for depreciation can be made in return of annual net income. Where a depreciation reserve is set up, all renewals and replacements must be charged to such reserve, and the addition to this reserve each year must be a fair measure of the loss which the corporation sustains by reason of the depreciation of its property.

The Chicago Schedule.

The Government's instructions leave unanswered many queries natural under the circumstances, and corporation executives were free to write off for depreciation any sum their conscience permitted, provided they made an identical charge upon the books of the concern. Under these circumstances the Chicago Real Estate Board resolved to establish a schedule of percentages for depreciation for use in Chicago, and the following rates were adopted and circulated during the last two weeks in February:*

"Fireproof steel buildings and reinforced concrete buildings: Depreciation one per cent on buildings five years old or less, and two per cent on buildings more than five years old.

"Mill constructed buildings and fireproof apartment buildings: Depreciation two per cent. on buildings five years old or less; three per cent on buildings more than five years old. Brick and lath buildings, including ordinary flat buildings: Depreciation three per cent. to four per cent.

"Old frame and nearly obsolete buildings: Depreciation 5% and upward.

"Where the value of the power plant and machinery, including elevators, can be separated from the total value of the building, compute depreciation at ten per cent. on it; the remainder being figured at the percentage heretofore named."

Many Uncertainties Still.

When the time for filing returns of annual net income expired last week the uncertainty regarding parts of the new law was as widespread and profound as when the law was first promulgated. Persons making returns answered to the best of their ability or as their counsel advised, and are waiting for the courts to interpret the law for them. Among lawyers the opinion prevails that the courts will have to bring order out of confusion, and in the meantime one guess seems to be about as good as another.

The form which the president and treasurer of every real estate corporation were required to fill in and sign required (1) the total amount of paid-up capital stock outstanding or the capital employed in the business; (2) the total amount of bonded or other indebtedness and then (3) the gross income.

By gross income is meant the total of the gross revenues derived from the operation and management of the corporation business and properties, together with all amounts of income from other sources, including dividends received on the stock of other corporations, as shown by entries in the books of the corporations. Gross income also includes any increase in value, by appraisement, adjustment or otherwise, of the assets which has been taken up on the books as income or credited to profit and loss during the year. Dividends received upon the stock of other corporations, it is clearly stated, are not deductible in the ascertainment of the net income on which the tax is computed.

The Deductions.

The next entry to be made (Item 4) in filling out the form was a figure covering all expense items under the various heads acknowledged as liabilities by the corporation making the return and entered on its books during the year. Income expended in paying dividends or in making permanent improvements was not a proper deduction in ascertaining annual net income. Interest paid on mortgage indebtedness on real estate occupied or used by a corporation could be deducted, if the interest was paid as a rental or franchise charge. This item included "all rentals or other payments required to be made as a condition to the continued use or possession of the property," and has given rise to much difference of opinion.

Depreciations.

The fifth item under the head of deductions is the total amount of losses sustained during the year not compensated by insurance or otherwise. Decrease in the book value of securities owned are deducted under this item.

A further deduction is made for the depreciation in the value of buildings and other property on account of wear and tear, exhaustion or obsolescence, as referred to above. The amount taken credit for on this account, in order to be allowable, should be so entered on the books as to constitute a liability against the assets of the corporation, and the amount claimed should not cover losses in value of stocks and bonds.

A deduction is also made (Item 6a) for interest accrued and paid during the year on an amount of bonded or other indebtedness not exceeding one-half the sum of its interest bearing indebtedness and its paid up capital stock outstanding at the close of the year; or, if no capital stock, the amount of interest paid within the year on an amount of its indebtedness not exceeding the amount of capital employed in the business at the close of the year. And a further deduction (Item 6b) for the total amount of interest received from municipal, state or national obligations.

Finally (Item 7) State, national and foreign taxes are deducted, and then the total of the deductions is figured and subtracted from the gross income, leaving the net income on which the one per cent. tax is calculated.

The question has been asked if the Government intends to accept the returns as made out in every case at their face value, and the answer was made at the office of the internal revenue collector that the Government would check up the returns and in due time would take up the case of any corporation making erroneous reports.

*The Record and Guide is indebted to Secretary Arthur C. Leuder for a copy.

—When so many interests are lobbying for the passage of bills by the Legislature that will impose more burdens upon and extract more money from taxpayers, it is fortunate for real estate owners that they have at least a few alert defenders on guard. The work of the Allied Real Estate Interests, of which Allan Robinson is president, in opposition to the Herrick-Schaap bill, scarcely received from the public the measure of appreciation which it well deserved.

WOULD TAX UNEARNED INCREMENT

Senate Bill Places a Supertax of 1 Per Cent. Per Annum on Increase of Land Values—Assessment of March 1, 1914, Taken as the Starting Point.

THE recent hearings, both before the Board of Estimate and the Cities Committees of the Legislature, brought out a very general opposition to the Herrick-Schaap bill to submit to a referendum vote a measure reducing by 50 per cent. the tax on buildings. However, not a few of the civic associations which took a stand against the half-tax on buildings expressed themselves in favor of an "unearned increment" tax on land, a measure previously recommended by Mayor Gaynor's Commission on New Sources of City Revenue.

A bill in line with this recommendation has therefore been expected. It has now made its appearance in the Senate in the form of an amendment to the Greater New York charter (Simpson, Int. No. 824), which provides for a tax of 1 per cent. per annum upon all future increments of land values. The tax is superadded to the existing general tax upon real estate.

Under the Simpson bill two new columns are to be provided in the books containing the annual record of the assessor's valuation of real estate. In the first column shall be entered the "basic value" of each separately assessed parcel of real estate, except special franchises; in the second, there shall be set down the amount, if any, by which the assessed value of such real estate for the current year, assessed or if wholly unimproved, exceeds such basic value. This amount shall be deemed the unearned increment, which is subject to the special annual tax of 1 per cent. imposed in addition to the regular tax on market value.

Unearned Increment Defined.

The basic value of any parcel of real estate shall always be the assessed valuation of such parcel, assessed as if wholly unimproved, as the same appeared on the annual record of assessed valuations of real estate on the first day of March, 1914; provided, however, that such basic value shall be increased from time to time by adding to the valuation as of the first day of March, 1914, the amount of any and all assessments for public or local improvements becoming due after said date, and the reasonable cost (when incurred) of bringing the land to the established street level, of making connections for water, light and sewage and street openings, when made at the expense of the owner of the parcel.

In case any separately assessed parcel of real estate is divided after March 1, 1914, the Board of Taxes and Assessments shall apportion the basic value thereof; and in case separate parcels shall be combined into a separately assessed parcel, appropriate combinations of the resulting basic values and unearned increments shall likewise be entered. Applications for additions to basic values shall be made to and determined by the Department of Taxes and Assessments at the same time and in the same manner as applications for reductions of the assessments of real estate, and the determination of said department thereon shall be similarly reviewable by certiorari.

Other bills of special interest to the real estate and building interests are:

Int. No. 855. Simpson. Changing the boundary between New York and Bronx Counties so as to include in the county of New York Manhattan Island, Nuttin or Governor's Island, Bedloe's Island, Bucking or Ellis Island, the Oyster Islands, Blackwell's Island, Randall's Island, Ward's Island and sunken meadows in the East and Harlem Rivers. The change made in the boundary is as follows: From a point where 190th street in the borough of the Bronx extended westerly intersects the present boundary between the counties the new boundary is to run easterly along such extended line and along the northerly line of West 190th street to the west side of the right of way of the New York & Putnam Railroad, then northerly along the railroad to the southerly line of Van Cortland Park to the southwest corner and north along the west boundary of the park to the city limits on the north. To Internal Affairs Committee.

Int. No. 929. Healy. Amending the Laws of 1905 (Chapter 646) by authorizing the commissioners appointed to construct a sanitary trunk sewer and a sanitary outlet sewer in Westchester County to pay the cost of operating such sewer system, and increasing the amount which may be raised by the sewer commissioners from not exceeding $3,550,000 to not exceeding $3,866,170. The bill also provides that the money may be raised by temporary ceritficates issued by the county treasurer. There are also other provisions. To Internal Affairs Committee.

Amending the Public Service Commissions Law (Subdivision 8 of section 49) by empowering the public service commission in cities of the first class to compel the interchange of transfers between surface, elevated and subway cars and trains, at intersecting points, between lines operated by railway companies and systems between which arrangements exist for the interchange of such transfers at other intersecting points. To Judiciary Committee.

Int. No. 977. Carroll. Requiring inspectors employed by corporations furnishing gas or electricity in New York City to write down on a slip of white paper the exact figures showing the amount of gas or electricity consumed since the last reading, and attach such slip in a conspicuous place on such meter. Violation is made a misdemeanor. To Cities Committee.

A Department of Markets.

Int. No. 1018. Pollock. Amending the Greater New York Charter (Sections 3, 4, 96 and 151; new section 110-a and new chapter 18-a) by establishing a department of markets. The new department is to be under the control of a board of five market commissioners. The commissioners are to be appointed by the mayor, one from each borough. The salary of the commissioner designated as president of the market board is fixed at $7,500 a year and the salary of each other commissioner at $6,000 a year. The board is authorized to appoint a secretary and such subordinate officers as may be necessary. Each commissioner may appoint and remove, subject to municipal civil service regulations the necessary market masters, market inspectors and other subordinate officers, assistants and employees. The present employees of the city engaged in the construction, repair, cleaning or maintaining of public markets, are transferred to the new department. The powers and duties of the market board are set out in detail in the bill. A free information bureau is to be established for the convenience of producers and consumers. To Cities Committee.

The prohibition applies to employees performing the work as well as to the owner, occupant, contractor or builder having work done. To Public Health Committee.

In the Assembly.

Int. No. 1144. Dunlop. Establishing a minimum wage commission of five members to investigate the wages, hours and conditions of labor and the living wage of women and minors in the state and to fix the minimum living wage for such persons. Two members are to be representatives of the wage earners and two are to be representatives of the employers and the chairman is to represent the public at large. They are to hold office for three-year terms except that in the first instance two are to be appointed for one year, two for two years and the chairman for three years. The commission is to establish a wage board for any industry, when in its opinion the wages of women and minors employed in the industry are below a living wage. The wage board is to consist of three representatives of the employers to be appointed by the employers, three representatives of the employees to be appointed by the employees and three other members to be appointed by the commission to represent the public. The wage board is to recommend to the commission the minimum wage which should prevail. After public hearing the commission must approve, disapprove or modify the recommendation. It may, however, take additional evidence on its own motion. Determinations of the commission are, unless set aside by court, to remain in full force for three years unless otherwise provided by the commission and its determinations may not be reviewed by certiorari. $25,000 is appropriated. There are also other provisions. Same as Assemblyman Birnkrant's bill of last year (A. Int. 1806, Pr. 2071).

ONE YEAR'S PROGRESS ON THE DUAL SYSTEM

The Sum of $366,000,000 To Be Spent—One Half of City's Share of $200,000 Contracted For During the Year—Rapid Transit For All Parts of the City.

A YEAR ago next Thursday the City of New York by the Public Service Commission entered into separate contracts with the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and the New York Municipal Railway Corporation for the construction, equipment and operation of the Dual System. New lines will add 324.9 miles of track to existing trackage, making a total of 620.9 miles. While this will be about double the existing mileage (296) the present facilities will be more than trebled, as the third-tracking and extensions of existing elevated railroads will materially help the service.

Hundreds of Millions to Be Invested.

Of the total of $366,000,000 which will be expended on the new system the City of New York will supply about $200,000,000, all of which will be devoted to construction work upon lines to be owned by the city. Toward the cost of such lines the Interborough Company will contribute $58,000,000, and the New York Municipal Railway Corporation about $14,000,000. The cost of additional construction upon the elevated railroads, as well as that of the new equipment for both subway and elevated lines, will be borne by the companies, although the equipment for the city-owned lines will be owned by the city. It is estimated that the Interborough will spend about $25,000,000 on construction and equipment of privately owned elevated lines, and about $22,000,000 for equipment of city-owned lines; and that the Brooklyn company will expend about $21,000,000 for elevated construction and about $26,000,000 for equipment. If these estimates are borne out, the total contribution of all parties for new work on the dual system will be as follows:

N. Y. Municipal Ry. Corp...	61,000,000

In addition to the above, the City of New York has already invested between $55,000,000 and $56,000,000 in the existing subway for its construction, and the Interborough Rapid Transit Company reports that it has expended about $48,000,000 in equipment on the same line. When the dual system is completed, therefore, the city will have invested in rapid transit lines upwards of $256,000,000.

Construction in Progress.

Sub-contracts for the construction of nearly $100,000,000 worth of subway and elevated extensions of the existing systems have been entered into. Much work has already been done; there have been some notable additions to the previously existing lines and before another twelve months roll around very substantial additions in many directions, especially in Brooklyn, will be assured for active operation by both the B. R. T. and the I. R. T. corporations, which will divide the underground and overhead traffic in both Brooklyn and Manhattan.

The city's construction work now going on includes the Fourth avenue subway in Brooklyn, the greater part of the Lexington avenue subway in Manhattan, with five sections in The Bronx, the Seventh avenue subway in Manhattan, the Centre street loop subway in Manhattan and the southern portion of the Broadway subway in Manhattan, covering that part extending from Morris street and Trinity Place northward to Broadway and 26th street. The Lexington avenue line, the Seventh avenue line and the Steinway Tunnel line will be operated by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company; the Fourth avenue, Centre street and Broadway lines by the Brooklyn company.

In Brooklyn the dual contract system includes not only the Fourth avenue subway, to which its West End and Gravesend avenue (Culver) elevated roads, and the depressed Sea Beach route will be feeders, but also the Fort Hamilton extension and the future tube to Staten Island, and a subway connection running out Flatbush avenue, alongside the Interboro extension, as far as Prospect Park plaza to afford the needed underground link for real rapid transit from a large part of Flatbush by means of the Brighton Beach Railroad, whose four-track system will be extended to the subway junction.

Queens Contracts.

In Queens seven separate contracts have been let to date, at a cost aggregating $5,601,842, and providing for 42 miles of trackage.

To complete all the rapid transit lines in Queens that are part of the dual subway system, the following work still remains:

(a) An appropriation by the City of New York of $350,000 for the equipment of the two upper deck tracks of the Queensboro Bridge to connect the Second avenue elevated railway; an appropriation of $1,164,000 for the relocation and reconstruction of the two tracks on the lower deck of the Queensboro Bridge for the service of the rapid transit subway trains.

(b) The legalization of the elevated extension from Cypress Hills, Brooklyn, to Grand street, Jamaica. Until this line is fully legalized by property owners' consents, the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company will be unable to construct it. The abutting property values on Jamaica avenue from Cypress Hills to Grand street, Jamaica, are $13,206,650. To date property owners' consents have been obtained to the amount of $5,707,4450, leaving only $895,880 in consents necessary to be obtained to secure the required 51 per cent. of the total.

The Flushing-Bayside line was approved by the Public Service Commission April 26, 1913, and by the Board of Estimate June 12, 1913. Progress is being made in securing property owners' consents for the legalization of same. The cost of this line is estimated at over $3,000,000.

The Seventh Avenue Subway.

With the exception of two small connections and the two-track spur to Brooklyn, the Seventh avenue subway in Manhattan, for operation by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, is now entirely under contract from Vesey street on the south to Times Square on the north. The total amount of the contracts awarded for this road up-to-date is $11,776,562.25. North of Park Place the line will be a four-track underground railroad, with two tracks south of that street. The contract for Section No. 5, extending from 16th to 30th streets, originally awarded to the Canavan Brothers Company, has been assigned to the United States Realty and Improvement Company, the successful bidder on Section No. 4, the adjoining section on the south.

A Sign of the Times.

The fact that the firm of Francis H. Leggett & Co. will move their main office from the historic wholesale grocery center, as well as their various warehouses and manufacturing departments, makes their move particularly significant to real estate interests. The head of the firm has explained this change to the Record and Guide by saying that the location of the main office of such a business as theirs is not the matter of high importance to customers that it once was. The telephone, the telegraph and the typewriter, as well as the traveling salesman, help to render personal visits to the office unnecessary. Firms can now more than in times past, consult their own convenience in respect to location, and this is one reason why so many other big firms, to whom good transportation facilities are of first importance, have moved to the same locality. Spurs from trunk line railroads enter the big terminal building on the east side of Thirteenth avenue, between 27th and 28th streets, to which Francis H. Leggett Co. are moving, and solve the transportation problem which has become a serious one for large merchandise houses on the lower West Side, and is obliging other firms also to make new arrangements.

WHERE REAL ESTATE IS MOST ACTIVE

The North End of the Island Was the Most Progresssive Section of Manhattan Last Year—Remarkable Increase in Values in Five Years.

THE section of greatest activity in real estate development in Manhattan last year was not the midtown section, as in 1912, but the upper end of the island, north of 155th street, sometimes designated as Tax District No. 8. This was a natural consequence of the falling off in commercial construction, as the north end is essentially a residential section, and includes the newly active Dykman section, as well as the greater part of Washington Heights. In the last five years, to go no farther back than 1908, District No. 8 has had a remarkable growth, in values both of land and improvements. The taxable land which was valued at $63,254,700 in the assessment roll for the year 1909 had risen in value to $85,635,000 in the assessment roll of 1913, and the value of improvements from $21,930,000 in 1909 to $449,585,200 in 1913, or from a total valuation of $85,184,000 for both land and buildings in 1909 to $135,221,090 in 1913.

Figures from the Superintendent of Buildings show a decided activity for this section in 1913 over 1912, in material improvements, represented by 81 buildings commenced during the year 1912 and 118 commenced last year, which was an increase of 46 per cent; 113 were completed in 1913, compared with 92 completed the previous year, or 28 per cent. increase; and at the beginning of the current year there were 53 buildings in progress to compare with 46 under way a year before.

Business Movement Indicated.

A table which Superintendent Miller has compiled shows the continued tendency of business to move uptown to the region between the two great railroad terminals where the second most active section is found. This volume of this movement can be estimated better from the statistics of new buildings and alterations than in any other way. The alterations of old dwellings for business purposes has been a marked feature of the movement.

Dist.	Location.	New Buildings. Commenced.	New Buildings. Completed.	Alterations Completed.
1	South of Grand and Watts streets	21	26	626
2	Between Grand and Watts streets and 14th streets	35	52	673
3	Between 14th and 40th streets	59	98	771
4	Between 40th and 96th streets west of 6th avenue and Central Park	61	79	587
5	Between 40th and 96th streets east of 6th avenue and Central Park	80	82	471
6	Between 96th street and Harlem River, east of Central Park and Lenox avenue.	34	50	340
7	Between 96th street and 155th street, west of Central Park and Lenox avenue.	59	81	298
	Total	467	581	3,814

The decline in building operations in 1913 were quite general throughout the city, estimated from the latest compilations by Superintendent Miller at 33 per cent. for Manhattan, 39 per cent. in the Bronx, 14 per cent. in Brooklyn, 9.9 per cent. in Queens, and 4.8 per cent. in Richmond. The operations in Manhattan exceeded those in all other sections combined by 8.6 per cent. Tenement house construction last year amounted to 1432 buildings out of a total for all kinds of 10,698. Among the new building projects there are always some that are abandoned before the end of the year (amounting to 9 per cent. last year), but these are excluded from the figures under consideration.

Fireproof Construction.

While the proportion of fireproof construction continues to be large, there was yet a falling off in this type of construction last year. While only a little more than one-third of the total of new buildings planned were to be fireproof, yet more than two-thirds of the new floor space to be provided by all is supplied by the buildings of the fireproof class. Two-thirds of the fireproof construction was planned for midtown and one-fourth of all the new buildings, and three-fourths of the ordinary construction, for that part of the borough above 155th street.

In the district north of 40th street and west of Sixth avenue (Tax District No. 4) 63 per cent. of the buildings of the section planned during 1913 were to be of fireproof construction, and supply 92 per cent. of all the new floor space to be provided, and 98 per cent. of the capital invested for new construction of all descriptions.

The 182 fireproof buildings planned in Manhattan Borough last year will cover 1,550,160 square feet, or about 45 per cent. of the area of all the buildings planned, and 67 per cent. of the total amount of new floor area, according to one of the tables compiled under Superintendent Miller's direction:

OWNERS SAVED FROM LOSS.

Surety Company Held to Be Liable For Loss Due to Carpenters' Strike.

By the rendition of a verdict for $16,374.50 on Thursday of last week in the New York Supreme Court, before Mr. Justice Delany in favor of the Riviera Realty Co. against the Illinois Surety Company, a number of questions of vital interest to owners and those engaged in general building construction were settled.

In 1910, the Riviera Realty Company was constructing the large 12-story fireproof apartment on the site on Riverside Drive, between 156th and 157th streets, covering about fifteen lots. Officers of the company made a contract with one John Barba to furnish the labor for the rough and finished carpenter work, and exacted a bond for the performance of the contract, which was furnished by the Illinois Surety Company. The bond given for the performance of the contract provided that the surety company, among other exceptions, should not be responsible for losses resulting from "labor difficulties called strikes." The contract was the Uniform contract, adopted and recommended by the American Institute of Architects and the National Association of Builders and contained the usual provisions that if the contractor failed to supply a sufficiency of properly skilled workmen during performance, the owner should be at liberty, upon notice, to provide the labor and deduct the cost from any money thereafter to become due to the contractor; and if the architect certified that the failure to supply the sufficiency of workmen was adequate ground for such action, the owner should also be at liberty to terminate the employment of the contractor and complete the contract; and if the expenses incurred for such completion should exceed the unpaid balance due the contractor, the latter should pay the difference to the owner.

The contract also contained the customary clause for the protection of the contractor that if he should be delayed in the prosecution of the work by the "combined action of workmen in nowise caused by or resulting from default or collusion" on his part, then he should have an extension of time to complete his work, to be determined and fixed by the architect.

The surety company, upon the trial rested its defense upon the clause before mentioned in its bond, that it was not liable for loss due to "labor difficulties called strikes," and produced evidence that after the contractor had been at work for some little time, the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America called the carpenters off the job, and that the contractor could not get any other workmen to take their places.

The contract provided that the carpenter was to use "labor only of a recognized labor union, having affiliations with labor unions and other building trades, in order to avoid strikes." The counsel for the surety company insisted that the provision in its bond before cited, relieved it from liability as soon as a strike was declared, without regard to the cause of it. On the other hand, the Riviera Realty Co. urged that the clause in the bond was designed to cover general strikes, and did not exempt the liability of the surety company for a strike brought about by the fault or collusion of the contractor.

Evidence was produced by the plaintiff that the strike was called by the labor organization for the reason that the carpenters employed by the contractor were not paid the union rate of wages of $5 per day.

Mr. Justice John J. Delany, presiding, took the view that a proper interpretation of the bond in connection with the contract, which was made a part thereof by express provision, did not cover a strike which was produced by the fault of the contractor, and left it to the jury to determine upon the evidence whether it had been shown that the calling out of the men on the building was due to the fact that the contractor was not paying his employees union wages. The jury found for the plaintiff on this issue, and gave a verdict for the full amount of the claim. Mark Ash was counsel for the Riviera Realty Co. and L. Laflin Kellogg, counsel for the Illinois Surety Company.

—Twenty-story buildings on side streets uptown are not so numerous that the project of the Acon Realty Company for 31st street between Madison and Fourth avenues is not a significant testimony to the continued appreciation of the district among large investors and operators.

—Firmer rates for money are predicted as the first of April approaches.

The Real Estate Board, in pursuance of plans recently adopted for extending its activities, particularly in the matter of safeguarding real estate owners against discriminating legislation, has appointed Mr. Richard Osborne Chittick executive secretary with a view to having him take charge of the board's new functions. Those who have watched Mr. Chittick's work as real estate editor of the Globe, work noted for originality and effectiveness, will congratulate the board on its choice.

The Citizens' Street Traffic Committee of Greater New York is about to undertake a broad study of the various subjects related to the use of the city's streets, including not merely the police regulation of traffic but such matters as street cleaning, proper width of roadways, etc. The size, weight and load of vehicles and their effect upon pavements under given conditions are among the topics to be investigated; and perhaps none is more important from the point of view of upkeep of pavements. The giant trucks of to-day not infrequently damage pavements, in a single trip, far beyond the value of the loads transported.

Something over a month ago a party of seventy-two representatives of manufacturing establishments in Illinois left New York by steamer for a trip to Brazil, Uruguay, Argentine and other Latin-American republics. Since then news items have been published with growing frequency relating to plans on the part of American manufacturers to investigate new outlets for trade. The study of foreign markets, impelled by tariff revision, will undoubtedly bear fruit before long in a large-scale expansion of American industry; and New York, as the foremost manufacturing and shipping center of the country, cannot fail to be the chief beneficiary of the enlarged water-borne commerce brought about by the new tariff and by the Erie and Panama canals.

The Assessment Rolls and Real Estate Values.

Those tax reformers whose plans for changing the prevalent method of local taxation are based on the expectation of an increase each year in the assessed valuation of real estate of $150,000,000 should consider carefully the assessment rolls for the current year. The net increase in the assessed value of real and personal property over the totals of the preceding year was about $58,000,000, of which only $43,000,000 was chargeable to real estate. Inasmuch as there must have been added to the volume of taxable property at least $175,000,000 of new buildings it appears that instead of an increase in the land during the current year amounting to $150,000,000 there has been a decrease of somewhat near that amount. It must be remembered also that the assessment rolls do not take any account of the depreciation in the value of buildings, so that according to any careful system of accounting even the small increase in real estate value which has been supposed to accrue would actually be wiped out.

The answer will of course be made that the current year is an exceptional year. From the point of view of the real estate history of the city, it is undoubtedly exceptional, but the exceptional conditions which have brought it about are unfortunately by way of becoming normal. Last year the result was not any better; during the coming year it is likely to be worse. The Tax Department has not even yet fully written off the decrease in the value of real estate between Houston and 23rd streets in Manhattan. The real estate market is more stagnant than ever, and the assessors will certainly have no increases in ground value to report at the end of the new year. A smaller amount of building is under way than at any time since consolidation. The tax rolls will lose the benefit which they have been receiving from the great building movement of the past few years. It should be clearly understood also that the situation is not the result of one of the ordinary waves of depression which take place periodically in every department of business.

It is at least in part the result of a permanent change of underlying conditions, to which real estate values are struggling to readjust themselves. It is at bottom the result of the increased tax burdens which have been placed upon real estate since the various boroughs of Greater New York were consolidated in 1897. During that whole period taxes have been increasing more quickly than population and wealth. Under ordinary conditions the prevailing tax rate applied to the increase in the assessed valuation of taxable property might be expected to pay for the increasing expenses of a growing city. But such has not been the case in New York. Every unit of population or wealth is carrying twice the burden of local taxation which it carried seventeen years ago.

The consequence has been that during that period the increase in taxation has been appropriating for the benefit of the city by far the larger part of the augmentation of land values which has taken place. Of late real estate owners have not only been unable to reap any increase in ground value to compensate them for depreciation in the value of their buildings, but they have been suffering losses which could not be shifted to their tenants. The smaller prices which real estate situated between Houston and 23rd streets brings is the result in part of the increase in taxation. That increase stimulated an excessive amount of building in competing districts further north. The market became over-stocked with accommodation for mercantile trade and rents had to be lowered, particularly in the old buildings in the less favorably situated districts. This process has not yet worked itself out. Presumably the existing stagnation in building will enable property owners eventually to recover some of their losses. But no one can tell how soon or how far any recovery can be made, and in the meantime any alteration in the burden of taxation would prevent any early chance of recovery and would indefinitely prolong the existing depression.

The Sixth Avenue Shopping District.

The announcement that the two Siegel stores on Sixth avenue south of 23d street will have to be shut down may have serious consequences for the old retail district. It is becoming doubtful whether any of the department stores which still occupy sites on that part of Sixth avenue will be able to remain permanently in their present locations. The extinction of the two Siegel stores might seem to be beneficial to their competitors in the same neighborhood, but in all probability it will not work out that way. The other stores situated in the same vicinity will lose more from the decline of the neighborhood as a center of retail trade than they will gain from the diminution of competition. The customers of department stores have a habit of going from one shop to another in making their purchases, and they are more likely to be attracted to a neighborhood in case it contains a half dozen stores than in case it contains only two or three. A motive of this kind works all the more powerfully when the neighborhood in question is itself somewhat inconveniently situated, as is this particular part of Sixth avenue.

Its original availability for the cheaper class of department stores was due chiefly to two conditions. Sixth avenue formed twenty years ago the connecting link between 14th and 23rd streets which were the two important cross-town streets given over to retail trade. Its advantage in this respect was reinforced by the fact that the Sixth avenue elevated road connected it with the increasingly populous and prosperous West Side. But now Sixth avenue is no longer a connecting link between two streets that are crowded with shoppers. They both are being occupied largely by wholesale business. At the same time the most important vehicle of travel for the population of the West Side has ceased to be the Sixth avenue elevated and become the subway. Thus the conditions which made lower Sixth avenue available for retail trade have ceased to exist. The Record and Guide has always believed that if the stores which still remain in that vicinity could hold out until the new subway system was in operation they would not be obliged to move; but it is improbable now that they will be able to hold out. The tide is running too strongly against them. During the next few years they will one by one be obliged to find other locations, and the interesting question is, what part of Manhattan is likely to be the most available?

The question will be difficult to answer. Department stores are different from dry goods stores, because they cannot afford such high rents. Their sales are made on a smaller margin of profit. At the same time they need quite as much if not more space. Locations on Fifth avenue or in the best parts of 34th and 42nd streets would be wholly out of the question. They are not likely to seek locations farther uptown on Sixth avenue because of its disfigurement with the elevated structure. Broadway north of 34th street would be too expensive. The only comparatively central avenue which remains is Seventh avenue and it is entirely possible that Seventh avenue from 30th to 42nd street may some day be lined with department stores. Property on Seventh avenue is not excessively expensive. This particular neighborhood will have the benefit of two express stations on both subway systems. It will be accessible both from the Belmont tunnel, the New Jersey tunnels and the Pennsylvania Central Stations. The improvement in the means of communication which the new subway system will bring about will certainly increase the amount of retail trade which will be transacted by the large shops in Manhattan. Ten years from now there will be more department stores situated in the central borough than there are today and the increase will be proportionately larger than the growth in population. Is it not reasonable to believe that these stores will be situated as near as possible to the traffic center? And if such proves to be the case cannot Seventh avenue make a strong bid for some of the business, chiefly on the ground that it combines more accessibility with more cheapness than any other available avenue?

Taxes Under the Herrick-Schaap Bill.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

THERE have been many arguments for and against the proposed Herrick-Schaap bill, and great differences of opinion exist concerning the probable effect it would have on real estate.

This bill provides that the rate of taxation on real estate in the City of New York shall be so apportioned that the rate on the value of the improvements shall be 90 per cent. of the rate on the value of the land for the year 1915, and that every year subsequent to 1915 the rate of the improvements shall be still further reduced 10 per cent., until the rate on the value of the improvements shall be 50 per cent. of the rate of the value of the land. Thereafter the rate on the value of the improvements shall be 50 per cent. of the rate on the value of the land each year.

I am stating below the tax rates for the next five years for each of the five counties of the City of New York, which I computed, and which shows the respective rates on land and improvements that would have to be levied if the Herrick-Schaap bill became a law. These computations are based on the present valuations and on the present budget, and would vary in accordance with the variations of the assessed valuation and the budget for each year.

For the present year the assessed valuations of real property, exclusive of special franchises, for the purpose of taxation, together with the tax rates in the different counties comprising the City of New York are as follows:

	Land.	Improvements.	Tax Rate.
Manhattan	$3,161,949,660	$1,612,328,120	1.78
Bronx	336,116,060	253,280,895	1.77
Brooklyn	783,859,159	787,627,773	1.84
Queens	280,678,120	166,008,357	1.80
Richmond	40,249,108	36,687,373	1.90
Total value	$4,602,852,107	$2,855,932,518

Total assessed valuation of land and improvements.....$7,458,784,625.00
The total budget for 1914 is.... $192,995,551.62

In order to procure the same budget, the tax rates under the Herrick-Schaap bill for the next five years would have to be as follows:

TAX RATES FOR NEW YORK COUNTY.

	On Land.	On Improvements.
1915	1.85	1.66½ = 90%

TAX RATES FOR BRONX COUNTY.

TAX RATES FOR KINGS COUNTY.

TAX RATES FOR QUEENS COUNTY.

TAX RATES FOR RICHMOND COUNTY.

Thereafter the tax rate on the improvements would always be 50 per cent. of the tax rate on land.

I have also computed the yearly taxes on the five different classes of property generally found in the Bronx, showing the actual effect that the Herrick-Schaap bill would have if it were in operation.

Specific cases showing how the Herrick-Schaap bill will affect property in the Bronx:

SINGLE-FAMILY HOUSE.

Land.....$1,500

	Total Taxes.	Increase on Lot.	Decrease on Bldg.	Total Savings in Each Year.
1916	75.60	2.45	6.80	4.35
1917	73.20	3.95	10.70	6.75
1918	70.50	5.45	14.90	9.45
1919	67.80	7.25	19.40	12.15

Total savings in 5 years.....$34.95
After that the saving would be $12.15 each year.

TWO-FAMILY HOUSE.

Land.....$2,000

	Total Taxes.	Increase on Lot.	Decrease on Bldg.	Total Savings in Each Year.
1916	108.55	3.40	9.90	6.50
1917	104.70	5.40	15.75	10.35

THREE-FAMILY HOUSE.

Land.....$3,000

	Total Taxes.	Increase on Lot.	Decrease on Bldg.	Total Savings in Each Year.

1915	172.05	$2.40	$7.35	$4.95
1916	166.70	5.10	15.40	10.30
1918	153.80	11.10	34.30	23.20

Total savings in 5 years.....$84.95

BRONX 5-STORY FLAT.

Land.....$10,000

	Total Taxes.	Increase on Lot.	Decrease on Bldg.	Total Savings in Each Year.
1915	851.00	$8.00	$42.00	$34.00
1916	814.00	17.00	88.00	71.00
1917	772.00	27.00	140.00	113.00
1918	726.00	37.00	196.00	159.00
1919	678.00	49.00	256.00	207.00

Total saving in 5 years.....$587.00
After that the saving would be $207 each year.

	Tax Rate.	Total Taxes.	Increase.

Total increase of taxes in 5 years.....$138

By this method the taxes on any class of the real estate in any county within the City of New York may be computed in the same manner using as a basis for computation the tax rate heretofore stated for the particular county in which the property is situated.

Rents and Rapid Transit.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

Real estate owners and their agents are extolling the dual subway lines as a solution for high rents. Their belated admission that rents are high is as gratifying as the assent of mankind to other self-evident propositions. It is costly stupidity, however, to construct transit lines to the farthest sections of the city to get lower rents at the expense of the tenants of the city and the people at large, instead of at the expense of landowners whose property is benefited thereby. There are tens of thousands of vacant, or practically vacant, lots within a radius of six miles of City Hall, which should be improved consecutively before, at least, the city, at general expense, constructs expensive lines to acreage tracts of cornfields assessed at $1,200 to $3,000 an acre.

Will transit lines alone, however, reduce rents? Rent is charged to cover carrying charges—including interest on the equity, taxes and profits. The tax rate this year is several points below last year's. This alone will enable landowners to hold land at a higher price than last year. The construction of the transit lines will enormously increase the price that can be demanded for vacant land benefited thereby. Were the cost of such lines assessed upon the property benefited thereby those who acquire land to construct buildings would secure it at about the price demanded minus the cost of the transit lines assessed upon the land—roughly, let us say, for a fourth less than the price they must pay because this cost is not so assessed.

The owners of buildings must, moreover, under the uniform tax rate on buildings pay roughly 1.80 per cent. in taxes. Obviously rents will not be materially reduced through the heralded subway system. They will be at least as much higher than they should be as the joint penalties on the users of the city's gift of the transit lines to the land-owners and the fine upon buildings.

The operating contract was claimed to be "a grand victory" for the people of New York City. What a melon lined with velvet it really is, and that the Board of Estimate knew it to be is admitted gleefully by that great philanthropist, Theodore P. Shonts, who said of it:

> "Before the city receives any return on its investment of $66,000,000 in the new lines, the contracts entitle the company to take out of net income approximately $14,769,000 per year for the company's own purposes. This is $5,409,000 in excess of the $9,360,000 required for 5 per cent. interest and 1 per cent. sinking fund on the entire $156,000,000 of bonds.
> "In an undertaking of this sort a company ordinarily finds it necessary to furnish a large sum of money by an issue of capital stock in order to insure the security of its bonds and the payment of interest thereon. In this instance this is accomplished not by the sale of stock, but by an arrangement obviously better for these bondholders: viz., the city contributes $66,000,000 for half the cost of the new subways and for real estate, and subordinates its claim for interest on this money."

Both the dual subways and the opposition of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment and the Legislature to a referendum on halving the tax rate on buildings justify the statement of Mr. Delos F. Wilcox, late chief of the Bureau of Franchises of the Public Service Commission: "It is orthodox among the politicians of the dominant parties in New York, among the boss selected judges and among the public officials generally to bow the knee to vested interests."

BENJAMIN C. MARSH.

Mr. Benjamin C. Marsh is wrong in declaring that rents will not be materially reduced as a consequence of the operation of the dual subway system. For a great many years the people of New York have suffered from excessively high rents because their means of communication could not carry them quickly enough to large areas of vacant land. Their inability to reach an abundant supply of vacant land would have forced them to pay high for space in which to live no matter what the system of taxation. It was merely a question of the pressure of population on space. The dual subway system not merely renders enormous stretches of vacant land available for settlement, but it enables the settlers to reach centers of employment in Manhattan in much shorter time than they do at present. The pressure of population on space will be relieved, land values will probably be somewhat increased in the newly available districts, but they will not be increased to anything like the same level as that which has prevailed hitherto. The homeseeker will have too many alternatives.—Editor.

THE WEEK'S REAL ESTATE NEWS

Brokerage Sales, Auctions, Foreclosure Suits, Building Loans, etc., Together With Brief Personal Items.

The Bulk of the Business Involved Small Properties.

Real Estate Board Opposed to Unearned Increment Tax.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Governors of the Real Estate Board of New York, held March 10, 1914, it was unanimously resolved that in the opinion of the board the present agitation for an unearned increment tax is but another phase of the single tax agitation, which has done much to depress values in the city and the State of New York.

It was further resolved that the board was unalterably opposed to the uncarned increment tax as representing an erroneous theory of taxation that not only carried with it the elemental propositions of the single tax movement but would also go far to upset the existing basis upon which the present taxing system of the city and State is founded.

If a tax on the profits of real estate (which is the unearned increment) is equitable the board believes a further tax on the profits of all business is equally fair. The taxation of profits carries with it such serious economic consequences, particularly in real estate as at present situated, that the Governors of the Real Estate Board of New York were a unit in opposition to this proposed legislation.

City and State Realty Values.

The report of the State Board of Tax Commissioners, submitted to the Legislature this week places the value of real and personalty $8,332,069,201, figures for the year 1913 at $11,393,720,514.

There is indicated an increase of $277,112,561 in real estate and a decrease of $15,160,964 in personal property, the increase being attributed by the commissioners to the amendment requiring a definite method of equalization doing away with political barter, friendship agreements and city and town coalition and compelling assessments at full value.

Of the total valuation of state realty and personalty $8,332,069,201, figures for 1913, is for that located in Greater New York, leaving a little more than three billions as the assessed value of the remainder of the state.

On Guard at Albany.

In order to insure adequate protection to real estate and building interests from the almost interminable stream of bills which have been introduced in the Legislature and which are directed against real estate, the United Real Estate Owners' Associations have made an important and significant move. They have employed Ira J. Ettinger, a local attorney, to act as their representative at Albany during the present session of the Legislature. Mr. Ettinger will search out and oppose any bill intended to further burden real estate owners, and will remain at Albany until the end of the session. This action is taken at an opportune time, for never before have real estate interests been more seriously menaced by hostile legislation.

The Tremont Taxpayers' Association, a strong organization of real estate owners in the Tremont section of the Bronx, has been admitted to membership in the United Real Estate Owners' Associations. This is the tenth local taxpayers' association to become identified with the central body and its admission is in line with the work of the United Owners to include in its membership all the real estate owners' organizations in the city. Negotiations are under way with a number of other associations with a view of having them also become affiliated.

The United Real Estate Owners' Associations sent a special committee of ten to Albany this week to appear at the hearing on the bill to amend the Secured Debt Tax Law and in the matter of the revision of the Municipal Court Act. Delegations also appeared yesterday morning before the Board of Estimate at the public hearing in relation to the report of the Advisory Commission on the Heights of Buildings. The associations have decided not to oppose the proposed increase in salaries of the borough presidents and the president of the Board of Aldermen.

Mortgage and Security Company's Earnings.

At a stockholders' meeting of the New York Mortgage and Security Company, held at the company's office, 135 Broadway, March 9, President Harry A. Kahler announced that the net earnings for the current fiscal year amounted to $240,359.37, over sixteen per cent. on the capital stock. Also that, after deducting 12 per cent. dividends ($180,000) paid during the year and charging off depreciation in stocks held by the company to the extent of $50,204.45, there was added to undivided profits $10,154.92.

President Kahler further announced that from date of organization in 1902 to March 1, 1914, the total investments in bonds and mortgages have been $131,916,538.95. The guaranteed mortgages sold during the fiscal year aggregated $8,916,202.77 and the guaranties cancelled by mortgages being paid off was $6,580,094.80, showing a net gain in outstanding guaranties of $2,336,107.97. The total of outstanding mortgages guaranteed by the company on March 1, 1914, was $37,651,845.95. The stockholders re-elected the old board of directors, with the exception of W. T. Rosen.

Long Island Traffic.

Interesting statistics showing the growth in travel on the Long Island Railroad in the past five years are given in the March issue of the Bulletin published by the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens. The article states:

"Lying within a radius of five to fifteen miles from the business sections of Manhattan and Brooklyn is the great suburban zone of the Borough of Queens. The growth in population in the past few years has been remarkable. The total number of passengers carried on the Long Island Railroad increased from 12,837,649 in 1900 to 40,606,183 in 1913, or an increase of 216 per cent. in fourteen years.

The total number of commuters increased from 76,644 in 1905 to 203,886 in 1913, or an increase of 166 per cent. in nine years.

While the passenger traffic from both the Pennsylvania Station and Flatbush avenue Station has increased, the number of passengers from the Long Island City Station has decreased, due to the opening of the Pennsylvania Station and the operation of trolleys across the Queensboro Bridge. It is expected, however, that with the opening of the Steinway Tunnel within the next year the passenger traffic at the Long Island City Station will again increase.

Fourth Avenue Subway Equipment.

To advance as rapidly as possible the opening of the South Brooklyn subway in Fourth avenue, which is to be put in operation with trains to 25th street in the early summer, the Public Service Commission has fixed on March 17 as the date for a public hearing on the form of contract for putting in place the track materials.

Condemnation Commissioners.

Judge Benedict, of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn, has appointed Almet R. Latson, Ernest R. Pillsbury and Frederick A. M. Burrell as condemnation commissioners for the acquisition by the city of the southwest corner of Eastern Parkway and Nostrand avenue, Brooklyn. The proposed Nostrand avenue subway curves from Eastern Parkway under this property, and it is necessary for the city either to acquire the property or get an easement in it.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

Most of the business this week concerned small properties, principally dwellings. There were a few large transactions closed, the principal ones involving apartment houses near Columbia University, a 150-foot plot in West 151st street secured by builders and a lower Fifth avenue loft building. There has been a noticeable increase in the amount of business transacted in the past two weeks. The total number of sales reported this week doubled that of the week ending February 28. This fact, coupled with the presence of the small investor among the buyers, may be regarded as a possible sign of a revival of activity.

The total number of sales in Manhattan this week was 34, against 25 for last week and 42 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 13, compared with 8 last week and 18 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 21, compared with 17 last week and 24 a year ago.

From the Bronx 14 sales at private contract were reported, against 9 last week and 17 a year ago.

The amount involved in the Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $475,050, compared with $525,175 last week, making a total since Jan. 1 of $8,454,337. The figure for the corresponding week last year was $1,986,809, making a total since Jan. 1, 1913, of $12,417,765.

Apartment House Deals.

Charles Hirschorn and Isidor Levy have purchased from the Carnegie Construction Co. the "Poinciana," a new ten-story apartment house occupying the southeast corner of Amsterdam avenue and 120th street. The property has a frontage of 80.11 feet on Amsterdam avenue and 150 feet in 120th street, overlooking the north end of the grounds of Columbia University. In part payment the buyers gave the three apartment houses known as the "Beauchamp," the "Studeley" and the "Clifton," at the southeast corner of Columbus avenue and 85th street. The "Poinciana" has been held at $700,000. The sale was negotiated by Carl Levis.

Fort Washington Lots Sold.

The Loyal L. Smith estate has sold to H. & L. Mandelbaum the plot of fifteen lots, in the north side of 161st street between Fort Washington avenue and Riverside Drive. The site does not include the two corners, each of which extends back about 150 feet. A resale of the extra plot to a builder is pending.

Lower Fifth Avenue Deal.

The Realty Assets Company has sold to a client of Henry Goldstein, attorney, 85 Fifth avenue and 5 and 7 East 16th street, northeast corner of 16th street, an eleven-and-a-half-story loft building, having a frontage of 49 feet on the avenue and 191.10 feet in the street. The combined properties are assessed by the city at $1,040,000.

Sixth Avenue Sale.

The Record & Guide has confirmed, through Mr. Lewis, of Lewis & Conger, the report that the firm has sold the three five-story flats on plot 60.5x93, at 782-786 Sixth avenue. The property adjoins the Lewis & Conger building at the southeast corner of Sixth avenue and 45th street. No information as to the name of the buyer or his plans could be obtained.

Builders Buy in 151st Street.

The Jacobs Construction Co. (Newmark & Jacobs) has bought the plot, 150x99.11, in the south side of 151st street, located 150 feet west of Broadway, from Samuel H. Stone and others. The property will be immediately improved with a six-story apartment house.

Manhattan—South of 59th Street.

BROAD ST, 105, 5-sty building, on plot 36.2x46.1, one-fifth interest sold for Elizabeth B. Towle, as guardian, to H. and M. Mandelbaum, by F. J. Davison. The property is under lease to Fritz Lindiger for restaurant purposes.

WASHINGTON ST, 297, 5-sty building, on plot 26.5x55x irreg., adjoining the southeast corner of Reade st, sold for the Lichtenstein estate to an investor, by Robert R. Rainey.

WEST HOUSTON ST, 133-135, 6-sty tenement, with stores, on plot 38x100, sold by Pietro Alvino to Giovanni Rosasco & Sons, for about $80,000.

12TH ST, 144 West, 3-sty brownstone dwelling, on lot 21x103, sold for the estate of Geoffrey R. Bourke to Dr. F. W. Davis for investment, by J. Irving Walsh.

17TH ST, 17-19 West, 11-sty loft building, on plot 53x92, re-sold for the 17 West 17th St. Co. to the E. M. Co. (Arthur Luria, president), by Barton Chapin. This is the third sale of the property within the last year.

31ST ST, 36 and 38 East, two old dwellings, on plot 40x98.9, sold by Henry McBurney to Sumner Gerard. The houses adjoin the 75 ft. frontage at 40 to 46 recently acquired by Mr. Gerard in the name of the Aeon Realty Co. from M. Kroenke in exchange for the apartment house at 562 to 568 West End av. His recent purchase gives Mr. Gerard a frontage of 175 ft., and plans have been prepared by the architect, Walter Haefeli, for a 20-sty loft structure to cost $850,000.

SPEAR & CO.'S new offices will be located at 840 Broadway from Monday, March 16.

TUCKER, SPEYERS & CO. have been appointed agents of the 21-sty Flemish Building at 11-13 East 26th st and 6-8 East 27th st.

FREDERICK A. WYCKOFF, formerly with the McVickar-Gaillard Realty Co., is now connected with the F. R. Wood-W. H. Dolson Co.

HOMER FOOT, JR., formerly with Horace S. Ely & Co., has opened an office at 7 East 42d st, where he will transact a general real estate business.

DOUGLAS L. ELLIMAN & CO. have been appointed agents for 274 Madison av, a 5-sty store and loft building, on a lot 24.6x120, which was recently purchased by the Billings estate from Mr. John Gellatly.

THE M. MORGENTHAU, JR., CO. has placed a first mortgage of $57,000 on the new 5-sty apartment owned by the Silshire Co. on the east side of Intervale av, 100 ft. south of 165d st, fronting 137.1 ft.

GEORGE A. BOWMAN, Harold F. Sutton and James B. Walker have been elected to active membership in the Real Estate Board of New York, and Harold L. Flint was added to the non-resident membership.

D. A. TROTTA was the broker in the exchange reported last week of the three apartment houses at the northwest corner of Marble Hill av and 228th st for the plot of 8 lots on the west side of Amsterdam av, from 186th to 187th sts.

MOSS ESTATE TAXPAYERS' ASSOCIATION, organized by purchasers at the recent auction of the Moss property conducted by Joseph P. Day and J. Clarence Davies, has elected James R. Murphy, president; E. J. Redington, vice-president, and William L. Sayers, secretary and treasurer. The directors are M. Pleuger, George H. Tindall, John E. Bennett, Alfred Fergess, John Schrempf, Mrs. Martha Miller, John Joseph Lord, Laurence J. Kelly and Lenn Dashew.

PEASE & ELLIMAN have been appointed managing agents of 565 Park av, the 13-sty new apartment house which they have just sold for Bing & Bing to Dr. J. Morgan Howe, who gave in part payment the properties 48-50 West 47th st. The same firm has also been appointed agents for the 5-sty building at 307 5th av by J. Grafton Minot, representing the Amory estate.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION has requested Corporation Counsel Polk to apply to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court for the appointment of three commissioners to condemn the site on which the Grand Union Hotel stands, at Park av and 42d st. The property is needed for subway purposes. It is to form part of what is known as the diagonal route, by which the Grand Central terminal and the Lexington av line are to be connected with the present subway.

MORTGAGE GUARANTEE CO.—At the director's meeting of the First Mortgage Guarentee Company of Long Island City, held March 11, at 136 Broadway, New York, the following officers were re-elected: William H. Williams, president; Clinton R. James, vice-president; H. Pushae Williams, treasurer; Arvine C. Leach, secretary. The directors declared a quarterly dividend of one and one-half per cent. (1½%) payable to the stockholders of record at the close of business on March 2, 1914.

CITY INVESTING CO. OFFICERS.—The board of directors of the City Investing Co. re-elected Robert E. Dowling president of the company. Lewis B. Preston was elected vice-president, succeeding Bradish Johnson, and George F. Gunther and Frederic J. Halliday were elected as secretary and treasurer respectively. The following were named as the executive committee: Robert Gnelet, George C. Clark, Henry D Hotchkiss, Robert E. Dowling, Samuel T. Peters and Lewis D. Preston.

SURROGATE FOWLER has confirmed the figure of $871,430 as the valuation for the Gilsey property, at the southwest corner of Broadway and 29th st. This was the value put on the property by Henry Brady, an appraiser for the State in the matter of the transfer tax. The estate's appraiser fixed the value at $763,000. The executors filed an appeal, but Surrogate Fowler upheld the value fixed by the State's appraiser. The property fronts 105 ft. on Broadway.

B. CHANNING MILLER, who has been connected with Stephen Tyng, Jr., & Co. for a number of years, announces that he will open an office on Monday, March 16, at 853 Broadway, where he will carry on a general real estate business. He has been appointed agent for all the properties owned and controlled by Roosevelt & Son in the mid-town section, which include such buildings as 841 Broadway, 853 Broadway and 120-131 5th av, with an L to 6-8 East 20th st, formerly occupied by Lord & Taylor.

GEORGE GOULD will shortly take title, according to a report, to Clam Island, in Barnegat Bay, N. J. His representatives bid in the property at a partition sale over a year ago, but there has been some title dispute. It is understood that Mr. Gould contemplates the construction of a gunning lodge of sufficient proportions for the housing of himself and a host of friends whom he plans to take to the islands each year in the gunning season. It is his plan to have the lodge completed and fully furnished before this year's season opens.

INTERESTS identified with the Fitzgerald Building at the southeast corner of Broadway and 43d st, purchased at auction Wednesday the entire capital stock and bonds of the Godair-Wimmer Building Co., owners of the Heidelberg Tower, occupying the property on the south side of 42d st, between Broadway and 7th av. After the sale the buyers announced that they would carry out the original plans of the building prepared by Henry Ives Cobb, which calls for a 30-sty structure. The bidding started at $35,000 and after about 100 bids had been made it was sold to ex-Judge Nash Rockwood, representing the 1482 Broadway Co. for $98,600.

REAL ESTATE APPRAISALS.

The following valuations were placed on real estate properties this week by the State appraisers transfer tax proceedings. The amount specified does uot in every case indicate the equity of the decedent. It simply quotes the estimated market value of the realty, regardless of mortgages or other liens.

ESTATE OF VITO S. FERRARI—premises 327 East 116th st, valued at $9,000.

OBITUARY

FREDERICK C. KLINCK, a realty broker and member of the firm of Meinerney-Klinck Realty Co. of Brooklyn, died on Mouday at his residence, 3903 Farragut rd, Flatbush. He was 25 years old, and was a son of Peter F. Klinck, a prominent real estate operator in Brooklyn.

ROBERT L. BROWN, one of the pioneer real estate operators iu the Bronx, died at his home, 40 North 10th st, Mount Vernon, Tuesday. Mr. Brown, who was born in Philadelphia in 1824, had lived here since 1886. It was in 1867 that he entered the real estate business in the old Town of Morrisania. He saw the Bronx develop until 1893, when he retired at the age of seventy, and turned the business over to his two sons.

JAMES BRUCE MACDUFF, real estate dealer, died on Wednesday at his residence, 31 Linden st, Brooklyn, aged seventy-eight years. He was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, and was educated at the Edinburgh University.

AUCTION SALES OF WEEK.

Except where otherwise stated, the properties offered were in foreclosure. Adjournments of legal sales to next week are noted under Advertised Legal Sales.

* Indicates that the property described was bid in for the plaintiff's account.

The Auction Market.

Outside bidders are still in the minority at both the Manhattan and the Bronx exchange salesrooms. Only five purchased properties at the public sales this week out of a total number of twenty-four offerings. Plaintiffs and other parties in interest secured eleven, and eight were either adjourned or withdrawn. The leasehold of the Heidelberg Building at Broadway and 42d street was bought by an investor, the 1482 Broadway Co., for $98,600. Other outside bidders were William W. Tappan, who paid $49,000 for a vacant plot on Riverside Drive, and Louis Levy, who bid $25,300 for the dwelling 1629 Madison avenue.

For the coming week, practically all of the properties to be sold are either tenements or dwellings. Out of a total of twenty-five offerings, there are fourteen of the former and five of the latter. The only Manhattan property which does not come into either of these classes is a vacant plot at the northwest corner of Audubon avenue and 183d street to be sold at the stand of J. H. Mayers.

Money Well Spent

Every day in Brooklyn some already-built apartment house is made modern and convenient by the installation of electric light.

The owners of these buildings realize that the public is educated to the many advantages of electric service. They are quick to grasp not only the fact that vacant apartments rent quicker when electrically equipped, but also that tenants are willing to pay more for an electric-lighted apartment than for any other.

The money spent, then, to make the necessary installation is really not an expense, but an investment that pays large returns.

BUILDING MANAGEMENT

HOW I FILLED MY NEW DOWNTOWN OFFICE BUILDING

Showing the Value of a Building Manager with an Imagination and Enterprise—Some New and Startling Office Renting Stunts that Paid.

(AN INTERVIEW)

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager for the American Real Estate Co.

THE building stands a block from Broadway. It is in the heart of the railroad and machinery district. It was erected when lower Manhattan had more than a plenty of skyscrapers, and when renting agents were bumping into and running over each other in the search for tenants to fill them. They told me I was crazy to put up a building then; that I never would be able to fill such a huge structure while lower New York is so over-supplied with office buildings. I never had so much pity conferred upon me in my life, but as I was chairman of the board I had the confidence of the directors, and that was all I wanted.

The day the building was completed we had an option on about every truck south of Fourteenth street that could handle furniture. We had them all engaged for day and night work, and, between Friday and Monday nights we moved more business houses than ever were shuffled up and redistributed before, at least since the Flood. But I'm getting ahead of my story.

Well, the first thing I did was to find a building manager that had an imagination. I found one who might have been the biggest theatrical press agent of all time if he had not agreed to come with us and fill our building. When I say he had an imagination, I mean that he was resourceful, and a resourceful manager is as valuable to an empty building as a safety pin is to a woman—both have a tendency to keep things together.

Speaking of women brings me back to the story I was asked to tell.

We got the man and our only instruction to him was to fill that building, and do it quick. We paid him enough to make him take an interest in his job.

Like every building manager, he began his campaign with an open classified telephone book, a cluster of stenographers and a pile of postage stamps that would have choked the Narrows. Out they went. Visions of an avalanche of replies beseeching space in the great structure, whose steel work was just being closed in, failed utterly of realization. From the several thousand letters, "floor plans enclosed," only three replies were received that amounted to anything. Some asked a representative to call, others complained about their leases, others said they did not care to move back downtown when the march of progress was toward the north, others said they valued their present locations too highly to take a chance of moving and others just simply forgot to reply.

Safe Uplift for Busy Husbands.

But here's where Mr. Building Manager brought his trusty intellect into play. The feminist movement was just gathering up its skirts for the leap into the limelight it has since made. Female forums were being organized everywhere. They were talking uplift and the thought flashed through his mind: "How about getting them to turn their activities in the direction of making sure that their husbands, as they were being uplifted each day to their offices, were being uplifted in safety?"

He bounded across the room to where the Social Register reposed on a desk and then began to hammer out envelopes in fine feminine script to the wives of the biggest business men who ought to have space in our building. There was going to be a luncheon to the members of the Society for the Betterment of the Condition of Pet Dogs in the Overcrowded Apartment Houses of New York and the Management of the Building would be honored to have them present as its guests to show them how housekeeping is conducted in a giant skyscraper. Several days later the secretary wrote that the society would be very glad to accept the very kind invitation.

A Personally Conducted Tea.

And the ladies came. We gave them a menu a full yard long, put them in wheeled chairs and, with uniformed black porters dressed in white, they were personally conducted from floor to floor. The elevator men were cautioned about starting and stopping the cars suddenly. That always scares a woman. The advantage of a modern fireproof building as against a dangerous firetrap, wherein many husbands and fathers and ardent swains not yet husbands and fathers spend the day, was adroitly brought out as the ladies, hugging close to their bosoms the feather fan souvenirs, were taken from the engine-room to the luncheon club rooms on the top floor. Even the lavatories were visited, where the sanitary equipment was pointed out. The fact that men with offices in modern buildings have their business reputations guarded by reason of the sifting which all applicants for space must undergo before they are even permitted to sign a lease, was carefully brought out.

The proximity of the building to rapid transit was also mentioned. A neighboring traffic improvement association was authority for the statement that eight thousand vehicles pass Broadway and Fulton street every business day. That made a thousand an hour, or an average of sixteen a minute. Certainly precious husbands' lives were worth too much to take chances of being run down by that traffic several times a day. A wise and farseeing building management had provided for all the comforts of the heedless business man during the day. He need not leave the building for his meals, a new necktie, a shirt, rubbers, umbrella, shoe shine or cigar. The building had all these, and, besides, direct connection with the subway.

The Women Were Good Boosters.

The women went home tired, but happy. Similar invitations were sent to the Women's Association for the Improvement of the Condition of Car Straps; the Women's Anti-Cigarette Smoking League; the Society for the Propagation of the Tango and various Mothers' Congresses, and they all came to the luncheon. Then the circular letters originally sent out began to bear fruit. The renting squad was very busy.

Tenant Sleuthing Squads.

Then that imaginative building manager pulled over another stunt. He knew that the bread cast upon the palates of the ladies had stirred up an enthusiasm for safe and germ-proof surroundings for their husbands, but he also knew that his battle was only half won. He had to prove to the men that their wives knew what they were talking about. While part of his renting department was attending to inquiries Mr. Building Manager broke in a new squad to perform a sleuthing duty that would put him wise to the business office needs of his wife-inspired prospects. It was the duty of this squad to visit the offices of these men. Each man had a particular class of prospect to look up. One took care of the railway prospects, another the machinery trade, another the building material trade, another the big corporations, another the clubs and so on down the list.

In the case of the big corporations they needed intercommunicating floors, plenty of departmental office and filing space, quick elevator service. Our building manager had architects sketch out several plans that the new building could offer. The clubs were appealed to by a specially drawn out plan for fresh air and outlook for the dining or lounging room. Supplies could be brought up and taken down on a special service elevator. Through express service on the elevators could be arranged for. The machinery men w re appealed to by reason of the convenience to postoffice, transit lines, shipping points and railroads. Building material interests, like lumber, plaster and cement, were enabled to be closer to shipping centers, and thousands of persons using and buying that material almost daily passed through the building. And so on down the list. An actual office layout was ready for the prospect.

Working Floor Models.

But this plan of having architects draw out sketches became rather expensive. Then that Building Manager tuned up his imagination again.

Wouldn't it be more convincing if we had little models made of our floor plan, with sliding partitions that could be lifted out, doors that could swing or be removed, all so fixed that if a prospect wanted more than one floor we could hitch the floor models one on top of the other. All would fit into a dress suit case and would be light to carry. Spread out upon a prospect's table he could see at a glance just what he was buying and how the layout would work.

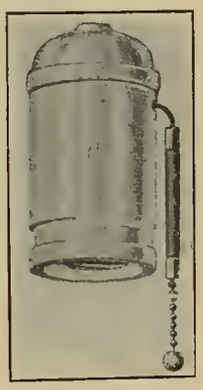
The model was made and available floor space began to melt away under the demand, so that when we opened our building we were practically filled up and the building was a paying proposition from the start, with long-term leaseholds and an established character.

A Factor in Renting.

It is a great deal easier to build a skyscraper, even a very big one, than it is to fill it with tenants.

That calls for a different kind of talent. And it is harder still to fill it without making the expected concessions for long time leases. Price cutting in rentals may make as deep inroads on profits and dividends as vacant offices will do. Price maintenance is as much a necessity, or, at any rate, a desideratum in the business of renting as it is in any trade-marked or branded proposition sold through dealers.

It is for the sake of both of these objects, filling them at the right rental, that the new Equitable Building started to advertise sixteen months ahead of completion, says Printers Ink. While the new Equitable will be the largest office building in the world, the directors are too wise to believe that by itself that will prove a sufficiently strong advertising card. They have started sixteen months ahead of time to spend $150,000, a very much larger sum than has ever been spent before for such a purpose in local newspaper space, mostly large space, run weekly.



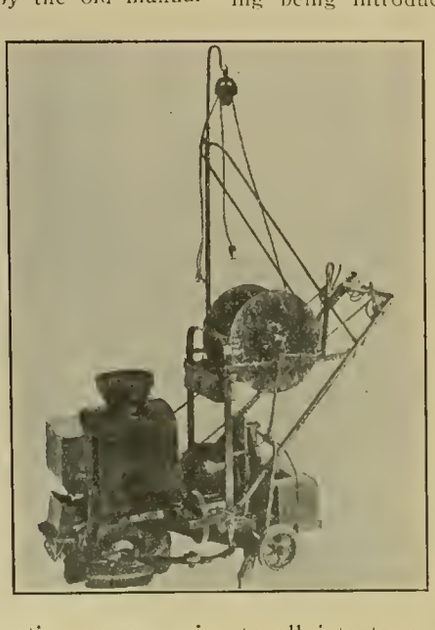
The problem is to sell $15,000,000 worth of leases—five year leases—at $3,000,000 a year. The advertising appropriation of $150,000 is thus only 1 per cent. of the total expected return, or, stretched over five years, only one-fifth of 1 per cent. per year—not an extravagant figure, one would think.

USEFUL APPLIANCES

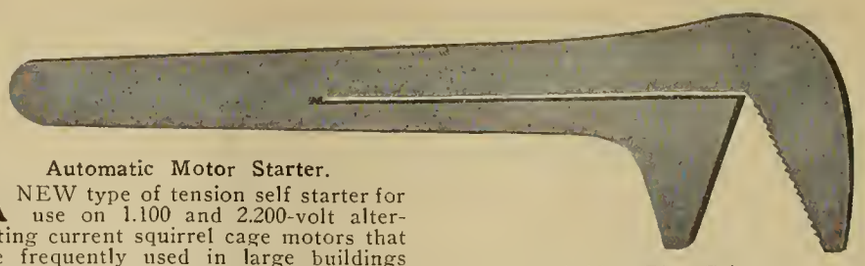
Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration.

Cord Instead of Chain Pull.

IN order to give silent operation of incandescent lamp lighting attachments, the Arrow Electric Company of Hartford, Conn., is placing on the market a porcelain lamp socket that has a cord instead of a chain for pulling on the light. The socket is operated by a short piece of strong weatherproof cord to which is fastened the insulating chain. The cord slides easily through the opening in the porcelain shell, making an easy acting socket so desirable in sick rooms, libraries and bed rooms. It is said that the cord has been proved by tests to be even more durable than the ball chain on this type of socket.



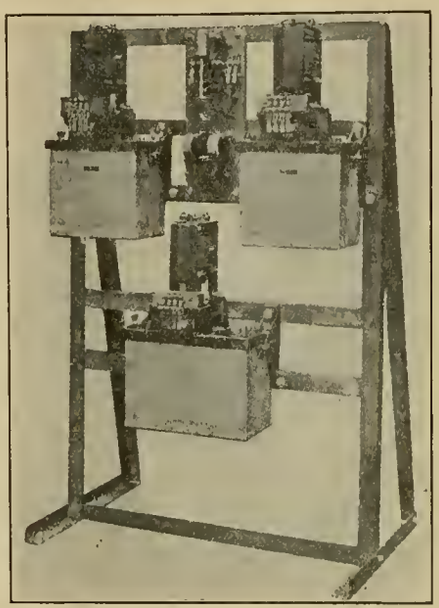
Mixing Plaster of Paris.



FOR the mixing of plaster of Paris for any purpose, add the plaster gradually to the water, instead of the contrary. Do not stir it, just sprinkle it in until you have a creamy mass without lumps. Equal parts of plaster and water is approximately the correct proportion. The addition of a little vinegar or glue water will retard the setting of the plaster. In this way the plaster may be handled a long time without getting hard.

Machine Supplants Scrub Woman.

BUILDING managers who have been seeking some way of having their floors scrubbed more efficiently than the average scrub woman can do it, will be interested in a mechanical floor scrubber that is being introduced by the Finola Manufacturing Company of Hannibal, Mo. Small and medium-sized floors can be scrubbed at a lower rate per square foot with this machine, according to the manufacturers, than by the old manual method. The scrubber is driven by an 0.25 h. p. motor, which is geared to the rotary brushes and to a reciprocating pump. Soap powder is contained in a small box on the front of the machine. From the larger tank behind the soap receptacle water is sprayed onto the floor in front of the rotary brush, mixing with the powder, which is automatically sifted as the machine moves.



Levers on the handle control the rate at which water and soap powder are delivered onto the floor and also operate a squeegee, which dries the scrubbed surface. The reciprocating pump previously mentioned sucks up the dirty water collected by the squeegee and transmits it to the removable tank at the rear of the outfit. Electricity is supplied to motor through flexible cord which is wound on a retrieving wheel. One end of this cable is connected to a plug in the wall and the other to slip-rings on the reel which lead to the motor. As the machine is pushed along the floor the flexible cable is unwound, being kept taut by a spring inside the reel.

Automatic Motor Starter.

A NEW type of tension self starter for use on 1.100 and 2.200-volt alternating current squirrel cage motors that are frequently used in large buildings for driving centrifugal pumps and similar machines, is being introduced by the Cutler-Hammer Manufacturing Company, of 50 Church street, and Milwaukee, Wis.

The apparatus illustrated consists of a self-supporting frame, made of angle iron, upon which are mounted the high tension oil emersed solenoid switches and the relays required to control the motor and auto transformer circuits. The starting switches are operated by single phase solenoids and all the contacts are submerged in oil so that no parts carrying high voltage are exposed. The solenoids are operated by low tension current. When they are used for controlling motors installed in connection with an open tank system, a float switch automatically regulates the operation of the starting apparatus, while on a closed or compression tank system a gauge or pressure regulator of the diaphram type is employed. If desired, a remote control system can be used so that the operator can push a button at one or more points which are removed some little distance from the motor to stop and start it. The apparatus is made in standard sizes, ranging from 20 to 300 h. p., for use on either 25 or 60-cycle three-phase circuits.

A New Cement Coating.

EXPERIMENTS covering a long period resulted in a new concrete dressing being introduced upon the market by Pratt & Lambert, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y., and 185 Madison avenue. It is in the form of an undercoating for the permanent white enamel that this company has perfected for concrete. This underdressing, which has been named "Vitralite Cement Undercoating," is said wholly to resist alkali, no matter under what conditions it may be encountered in concrete work. It may also be used under any paint, and it is particularly adaptable for use on factory walls. Used in connection with cement enamel it gives a high, hard polished surface that to all intents and purpose is equivalent to tile in that it may be washed. It is less expensive than tile, yet is said to give an identical effect. Two coats of this undercoating are applied, the first being thinned twenty per cent, while the second is applied straight. The first coat thinned as stated will cover approximately 300 square feet, and the second coat applied straight will cover approximately 275 feet. Two coats of enamel applied over this will generally cover about 500 square feet per gallon.

A New Pipe Grip.

THE long slot appearing in the picture of the new patented pipe grip being introduced by the Shaw Propeller Company, of the Board of Trade Building, Boston, acts as a spring. It grips and releases the pipe or rod instantly and cannot slip. It requires no adjusting and serves the purpose of a stillson, monkey, alligator and flat pattern wrenches, according to the statement of its originators. Being of one piece, it has permanent life and there is nothing about it that can get out of order. It is made thin purposely so that it can be used in tight places, such as frequently are found in machine rooms in buildings.

A Defense of the Gas Meter.

IN reports of fires the erroneous statement is frequently made that the "gas meter" exploded. A gas meter will not explode. The intense heat from a fire will sometimes melt the connection between the meter and the service pipe. There is no record in this city of a gas meter having exploded. The meter itself is thoroughly tested and sealed before it is installed on your premises. On October 1, 1913, there were 858,601 gas meters in use in Manhattan and the Bronx. For the ten months ended October 1, 1913, the Public Service Commission was asked to test 931 of the meters. Of this number 543 turned out to be absolutely correct; 148 were not measuring all the gas that passed through them, and 2 did not register at all. Slightly more than two-one-hundredths of one per cent. ran a trifle fast. This demonstrates the accuracy of the gas meter, and suggests the question, "Are you purchasing anything through more reliable scales or measures?"

Why Radiators Leak.

AT a recent meeting between an architect, an owner and a building manager at which plans for a new building were under discussion, the building manager in laying out heating equipment made this interesting statement:

"Before the radiators are installed in any building that I have anything to do with I take pains to shut off a certain form of tenant kickery by a little extra investment. I insist that each radiator be connected with a high pressure hose and water be run through it with the sections upside down for five minutes. Then I have the radiator connected with a thirty pound compressed air pipe and the air is forced through until a fine piece of muslin placed at the outlet pipe fails to catch any sand particles.

"It is a possible residue of core sand that I'm after. If this is allowed to remain in the pipe the grains get down into the valve seat and in a very short time I have my tenants about my ears complaining about leaky radiators. The danger of a leak starting in a radiator at night and doing a great deal of damage to floors and ceilings is abated at the very start. The extra cost of this work when the building is going up pays me handsomely, for I seldom have a report of a leak from my tenants.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

Including Contemplated Construction, Bids Wanted, Contracts Awarded, Plans Filed and Government, State and Municipal Work

AN INNOVATION IN CONSTRUCTION METHODS

Seven Stories of the Consolidated Gas Company's Building Suspended From Girders—Other Features That Make the Building Distinctive.

THE new building of the Consolidated Gas Company, at Irving place and 15th street, embodies in several respects a noteworthy departure from regulation methods of construction. The framework of the upper seven floors of the middle section of the nineteen-story structure is suspended from girders which rest on the columns of the two outer sections; a novel system of decorative exterior lighting has been employed, and the interior layout of the building makes unusual provision for educational and welfare work among the company's employees.

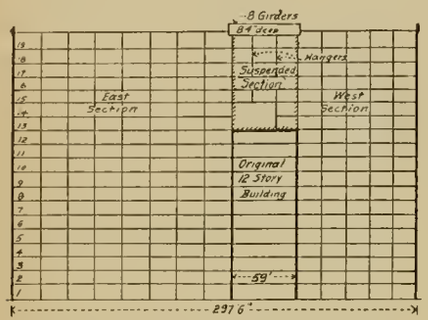
A brief reference to the enlargement of the structure from its original nucleus will help to explain the necessity for suspending part of the steel skeleton. About three years ago the officials of the Consolidated Gas Company, feeling that they had outgrown the group of reconstructed residences which they had occupied as general offices for a number of years, decided to tear down the old houses and erect a new building on the site. The property, which was at the southwest corner of 15th street and Irving place, measured 84 feet by 155. Upon this area the officials planned to erect a modern twelve-story office building. To put it up with as little disturbance as possible to the office routine, it was decided to build in two sections, the easterly section to be erected first. The work was started in the fall of 1910 and completed in July, 1911.

By the time the east section was completed, however, and the old buildings on the remainder of the plot had been demolished the question had come up whether it would not be advisable for the company to house not only its own offices but also those of all its affiliated and subsidiary companies. The question being settled in the affirmative, a much larger building than the one originally planned was essential. Additional plots on the east were acquired, which gave a total frontage on East 15th street of 297½ feet, with 84 feet in Irving place. A nineteen-story building to cover the entire plot was decided upon as being suitable to all present demands, as well as providing for future growth.

A Puzzling Problem.

There were no difficult engineering features in the planning of the two nineteen-story additions east and west of the twelve-story building newly completed, but to raise this building seven stories, so as to make it conform in height to the proposed additions on each side, was a task that puzzled for a time both the company's own engineers of construction and the architects.

The foundations and steel frame of the original building were not designed to carry more than the twelve stories built, and extensive alterations to them for the purpose of adding to their strength were not to be thought of on account of the excessive cost and the great inconvenience to the internal economy of the company that such a procedure would entail.



GENERAL OFFICE BUILDING FOR THE CONSOLIDATED GAS CO.

Suspended From Trusses.

The engineering staff finally solved the difficulty by deciding to span the space above the original building and between the two nineteen-story additions, by huge girders or trusses and suspend the seven additional stories from them. This method, without precedent, was adopted as the best of various ways of solving the problem and has also the merit of leaving the interior space of the added stories quite unobstructed. The accompanying diagram shows the relation of the suspended portion to the new additions as well as to the original twelve-story building.

The girders necessary to carry the suspended stories are eight in number, 8 1-3 feet in depth, and placed in pairs on account of the great loads and bending moments involved. The building, while it conforms favorably with the modern type of office building, is so arranged that ease of communication between departments is effected. New buildings of the "all-fireproof" type are no longer the exception in New York, but the possibilities of interior fires and consequent loss of valuable records were recognized and the installation throughout of fireproof furniture was resorted to as the surest way to avoid such loss.

Features of this building which make it stand out as a distinct type are the provisions made for the welfare and comfort of the employees. To a casual observer the building might be considered an up-to-date club with its combination gas and electric kitchen, dining and rest rooms, baths and barber shop. The technical and social socities of the Consolidated Gas Company and the New York Edison Company are provided for in the auditorium and lecture room on the thirteenth floor. This auditorium has a seating capacity of about three hundred and is equipped with stage, moving-picture machines and theatre lighting system.

A Decorative Lighting Scheme.

An important special feature is the system of permanent outline and decorative lighting planned for the exterior of the building. This is secured by setting cast-iron frames or edgings and spandrel panels in all window embrasures above the fourteenth floor to contain incandescent lamps in the recesses of the frames. Cornice lamps with groups of lamps in the elements of the copper projection above the cornice, with straight lines of border lamps in the window panels below the fourteenth story and two gas-torches on the roof, complete as interesting an example of decorative exterior lighting as has ever been attempted in New York City.

The facades of the building in East 15th street and Irving place were designed by Henry J. Hardenbergh, architect, 47 West 34th street. The engineering, designing and supervision of the building was handled by the Engineering Department of the Consolidated Gas Company, under the supervision of William Cullen Morris, engineer of construction, and was erected by the Geo. A. Fuller Company, 111 Broadway.

Some Good Suburban Houses.

(See illustration.)

The problem of introducing variety without loss of harmony in designing groups of suburban houses of moderate cost has been attacked in an interesting manner by J. Wilford Kirst, architect for the Riverview Building Co., in the case of ten houses which the company has built on its development at North Yonkers.

The houses differ greatly in the materials used in construction, as well as in style of architecture, some being of frame, others of frame and stucco, and a few of brick. The designs are mainly in the colonial, English and Italian villa styles. No two houses are exactly alike; each has some distinctive feature. They are all, however, approximately the same in size and cost. One feature that the houses have in common, is an open air sleeping porch with disappearing wall bed.

During the current year a number of additional houses will be erected, the purpose being to construct groups of two or three at a time until the entire property, consisting originally of seventy-five building lots, is improved.

To Rebuild St. Luke's Church.

St. Luke's Protestant Episcopal Church, situated on Clinton avenue, near Fulton street, Brooklyn, which was destroyed by fire on Monday of this week, is to be rebuilt at once. Immediate action will be taken for the selection of an architect and it is the intention of the building committee to replace the burned structure with one of the finest edifices in the borough. The damage to the building was given as $400,000. The Rev. Henry C. Swentzel, 528 Clinton avenue, is pastor. Rodney A. Ward and Justice Putnam are the wardens. L. B. V. Cameron is clerk of the vestry. Other prominent members are Charles A. Angel, also a vestryman; Henry C. Mott and Joseph Slipper. The church was organized in 1842. BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

CONSTRUCTION SEASON OPENS WITH A STRENGTHENING TONE IN DEMAND AND FIRMER PRICES — LINSEED OIL ADVANCES.

Suburban Dealers Report More Business of Short Order Character.

ABOUT the only real evidence, from a contracting viewpoint, of the opening of the 1914 building season this week came in from the suburban territories for material for comparatively small operations. But the significant thing about this characteristic is that volume seems to be making up for value. In other words, the small speculator now holds the center of the stage, doubtless encouraged to come into the market when prices are attractive and terms favorable. Elizabeth, Newark, Staten Island, Jersey City and Hoboken, west of the Hudson, White Plains in particular, and Westchester in general, to the north and outlying parts of Queens to the east, are moving material freely, according to reports of local wholesalers.

As far as local distributors are concerned, there was a slight easing in all lines this week, doubtlessly traceable to the fact that nearly every construction job in the city had run out of material on hand and contractors hounded the dealers into forcing deliveries. There was an actual scarcity of new orders, but the inquiry has been growing heavier. If indications in this respect count for anything at all, the spring movement of building materials will be about on a par with that of last fall, according to opinion expressed on the floor of the Building Material Exchange, but everybody expects that the fall will compare with the volume of business taken in the spring of 1913.

In the wholesale market there is a reflection of the activity reported from the suburbs. Therefore, prices are firmer than they were a week ago, list prices are not quite so loosely maintained and some departments continue to stiffen. Linseed oil moved up one cent this week. Crushed stone mills prepared to resume operations at a time when the supply here in the city was at a comparatively low ebb. Sand and gravel also moved more easily, but mining was difficult and the insistent demand for these commodities which has existed for some time, has made prices exceedingly stiff. Lime is steady on a moderate demand, but a better inquiry is reported by most of the local agents. Building grades of lumber are also firmer.

Building stone has a better call, but nothing exceptional for this time of the year. Hardware is, perhaps, the most aggressive of all departments as far as actual selling is concerned, but a large part of this demand is dealers' business, and not building specifications, which reflects, in a measure, what already has been said regarding the building movement in the suburbs.

Structural steel continues to be the pivot of the building outlook. The business being taken just now for Eastern deliveries is much more promising than it was in either January or February, and it is expected that March will show a great deal heavier tonnage than any month so far this year. More capacity has lately been blown in at the mills, and prices continue to be firmly held. It is the constantly increasing firmness of this department that is giving the greatest encouragement to building material interests in the metropolitan district. With the mills now employing eighty per cent. of their capacity, whereas only a few months ago the total capacity was something like 60 per cent., there seems to be ground for the opinion generally expressed that business in the building material and supply department of the New York real estate market is improving.

LINSEED OIL UP A CENT.

Seed Market Turns Strong As Demand Shows Improvement.

LINSEED oil has moved up one cent. The quotation is now 53 and 54 cents for city, raw, American seed and 54 and 55 cents for city boiled.

There were two causes for this change which became effective early in the week. One was the strengthening of the seed market at Duluth and the other was the improved demand for the finished product in this district. Oil interests say that paint manufacturers and producers of floor dressings have found the demand so great that extra capacity has had to be employed at the mills earlier than was expected. The great increase in the use of damp and waterproofing compounds for use in concrete work is attributed in part, at least, to the higher prices now ruling.

$300,000 FOR CITY CONDUITS.

Pennsylvania Takes the Lead in Protecting Signal and Telegraph Wires from Storms.

FOLLOWING the slush storm of almost a fortnight ago, when about 30,000 miles of telegraph wires were borne to the ground and about 15,000 poles destroyed, railway and telegraph companies have been considering the matter of appropriating a sufficient amount of money to permit permanent protection of all these wires. Burned clay conduit interests have been making an aggressive campaign upon the purchasing departments of railroads, advocating the inclosure of all telegraphic wires in vitrified conduits with the result that on Wednesday the Board of Directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, meeting at Philadelphia, appropriated $300,000 to be expended on vitrified clay conduits to be laid along line of the Pennsylvania Railroad between New York and Philadelphia to protect the wires of a repetition of the storm of March 1 and 2.

The work will begin immediately in putting the overhead wires into clay conduits between Rahway and Trenton and subsequently the system of conduit protection to wires now employed between the Pennsylvania Station in New York and Manhattan Transfer, will be extended through Newark and Elizabeth to Rahway. This is said to be one of the biggest orders for clay conduits ever let.

COAL SUPPLY STILL TIGHT.

Situation Rapidly Becoming Easier, However, on Steam Sizes of Anthracite.

WHILE early this week it was still impossible for either the railroads or the retailers to handle tonnage with ordinary dispatch, the situation was rapidly becoming easier and no further danger was apprehended in view of the lateness of the season.

The greatest pinch has been on the steam sizes of anthracite. For the past month it has been slow work unloading this coal from cars, and in many cases stocks were at low ebb prior to the most recent storm. A good premium could be obtained on loaded boats, but, as there was comparatively little of the steam sizes afloat, the volume of transactions was not large. F. O. B. prices were helped, but the high premiums were offered only on loaded coal.

The bituminous market has been helped materially by the events of the past ten days. The movement of coal to tidewater was virtually at a standstill for the greater part of last week on all the roads, and this led to a pretty thorough cleaning up of demurrage accumulations at the piers. Most of the demurrage coal was moved at low prices, but the bulk of it has been disposed of and as a result the market is in a healthier condition than for a long time.

Many producers are quoting five cents more than a week or two weeks ago on line shipments, and buyers are paying the higher figures readily in most cases.

FEBRUARY FIRE LOSSES.

About $2,000,000 Less Than January's Loss Reported for U. S. and Canada.

THE losses by fire in the United States and Canada during the month of February, as compiled by The Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin, aggregate $21,744,200, as compared with $23,204,700 in January and $22,084,600 in February last year. The losses thus far this year reach a total of $44,948,000, as against $42,277,850 credited against the same time last year.

There were during the short month of February no less than 353 fires credited with causing an estimated property damage of $10,000 or over in each instance. The following brief classification according to their destructiveness will afford interesting study:

Estimated Loss—	No. of Fires.

Warmer Weather and Better Riding Conditions Brings Optimism.

WITH the Hudson still closed to navigation and, in consequence, giving the market a chance to further clear the wholesale supplies of open and covered cargoes and to reduce the volume of dealers' brick lying about the city awaiting unloading, this department developed some strength as the building season formally opened. The buying is still scattered, however, although inquiry shows improvement. The temperament of the brick department is still one of hesitation for both Hudsons and Raritans and for that reason quotations are not yet as firm as manufacturers would like to see them. But the firming undertone that is felt throughout the entire building material market doubtless will begin to be felt in the brick department ere another week passes and, indeed, there is every reason to believe that quotations now being made as nominal will stiffen perceptibly as the present local wholesale supply of brick wanes and favorable building weather continues to be the rule rather than the exception. Contractors and architects need not be afraid to specify brick in fear of a shortage as there is ample to take care of the city's needs for some time to come.

Official transactions for Hudson common brick covering the week ending Thursday, March 12, in the wholesale market, with comparisons for the corresponding period last year and a comparative statement of Hudson brick unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

THE STEEL MARKET.

Rolled Products Totaled Abont 1,060,000 Tons.

ACCORDING to report issued by the U. S. Steel Corporation and subsidiary companies the orders for rolled steel products in February exceeded shipments by 18,751 tons per day as indicated by an increase of 412,760 tons in unfilled orders, which aggregated 5,026,440 tons at the end of February. Viewing the steel market as a bormeter upon which to gauge future business in other lines of building material this showing gives more promise of activity, for the reason that structural steel is not an exaggerated feature of the report. Most of the increase is directly attributable to pipe and plate construction, although it should not by any means be understood that structural business showed no important gain. As a matter of fact, structural steel showed considerable activity and the tonnage was sligtly in excess of that reported for January. March, however, is the month of real structural steel activity and the tonnage being taken at present from the metropolitan district indicates a decided improvement in building contditions but nothing sensational.

The indication is that new orders were booked during the 22 active business days in February at the rate of about 48,000 tons per day. Outside of large pipe and plate orders, however, the average daily bookings were less than in January; that is, general business was smaller, hnt the aggregate tonnage larger than in January.

It is understood that the production of steel ingots in February was approximately 1,041,000 tons, furnace operations averaging a little less than 80 per cent. of total capacity. It is thus indicated that rolled products were produced at the rate of a little over 33,000 tons per day, or approximately 740,000 tons.

DOES RAPID TRANSIT RELIEVE CONGESTION?

The Roads Cannot Make a Lower Rate Than Five Cents, and This Is Too Much For the Poor to Pay—Excessive Construction Costs to Blame.*

By HENRY C. WRIGHT,
First Deputy Commissioner, Department of Charities, New York City.

THE purpose of this paper is to discuss the inter-relation of housing and transit, and I wish to emphasize and make clear the following points:

1. That it is necessary to clearly define the kind of housing deemed desirable before it is possible to determine the kind of transit needed or possible to secure.

2. Transit heretofore has been looked upon largely as a business proposition, with little consideration given to its important relation to social problems.

3. If transit, in any large degree, is to aid in solving housing problems, its fixed charges and operating costs must be reduced.

If the population of large cities is to be mainly housed in tenements in order to accommodate many people on a small space, there will be comparatively little need for rapid transit. Surface lines could largely supply the accommodations necessary. If the tenement house were to be accepted as an advisable method of housing, the housing problem would more largely resolve itself into a determination of the type of tenement house which would furnish a reasonable proportion of light and air, with some play space adjoining.

If, on the other hand, it seems advisable to attempt to provide single or two-family houses, with space surrounding, the city, under such a method of building, would occupy a much larger territory, and rapid transit would be needed as a means of reducing the time occupied in going to and from work.

Economy in Congestion.

If acceptable housing were to be conditioned solely upon light, air and a certain amount of play space, the tenement house would be the most satisfactory, because the most economical method of housing people, not only because it can accommodate many families on a given area, but also the crowding together of many families in a small area reduces many other municipal expenditures, such as for transit, sewers, water, fire and police protection, paving, etc. The denser a city, the lower the operating costs. Since, however, operating costs are secondary to acceptable living conditions, the method of housing must first be determined and the operating costs adjusted accordingly.

It is primarily essential that each city should decide through the properly constituted authorities whether or not it is practicable to regulate the type of houses, and, if so, what type should be aimed at. The extent of the need for rapid transit will not be clear until this phase of the housing problem is determined.

The Best Way to Live.

My personal feeling is that, so far as possible, the aim of every city should be to aid its citizens to build and live in single or double-family houses, with space surrounding. It is my belief that the apartment or tenement house, sheltering many families, tends to destroy the sense of individual responsibility and loyalty to the community. When families are crowded together in close proximity, they seldom get acquainted one with another, and soon lose, or fail to develop, the neighborhood sense, and the neighborhood sense is the basis of responsible citizenship.

Heretofore transit has been viewed solely as a business proposition. In almost all cases the initiative has been taken by private individuals desiring to build and operate transit lines in designated streets. In very few instances has the city taken the initiative in determining when or where the transit lines should be built; nor has due consideration been given to the question as to whether or not the proposed transit lines would properly distribute the people, or whether or not a five-cent fare was low enough to induce workingmen to leave the congested portion of the city and establish themselves in the relatively unoccupied portion.

Transit Lines as a Municipal Function.

Let us assume that the city authorities have clearly conceived the idea that transit should be considered to be and is a municipal function. Such a conception of the function of transit raises new questions which the city authorities have not heretofore found it necessary to consider.

If transit lines are to act as distributors of the city population, they must be operated with fares sufficiently low to induce the workingman to move to outlying sections, and the speed of operation must be sufficiently rapid to enable him to go from his home to his work without a serious loss of time.

No data has been collected in the United States that will throw any clear light on the problem as to whether a workingman will be more inclined to use a transit line charging a three-cent fare than one with a five-cent fare. It is highly important that such data be collected, and it is hoped that within a few years we may have some definite information with regard to this question. It is reasonable, however, to assume that a three-cent fare would induce many workingmen to move to outlying sections who otherwise would live in the congested portion of the city if the fare basis on transit lines were five cents.

How to Get a Three-Cent Fare.

One of the first things to be taken under consideration by city authorities with regard to any proposed transit line is whether or not the method of financing is such as to enable the operator to transport passengers for less than five cents, if not at the opening of such line at any rate after the traffic has become reasonably heavy.

A fare of less than five cents is conditioned upon the method of securing capital, the cost of construction and the cost of operation. It will be contended by most traffic men that neither surface nor rapid transit lines can be operated at a fare less than five cents. This is probably true under the present methods of financing and construction; but, if it be a matter of vital importance that the population of a city be distributed as widely as possible, and such distribution will not take place without a fare less than five cents, some means must be found of reducing the capital charge. There is no hope of reducing to any marked degree the construction costs of surface lines. Any material reduction in the capital charge of this class of lines must be brought about by methods of financing.

Up to the present time practically all surface lines have been financed by private corporations, which were obliged to pay relatively high interest rates and brokerage commissions. In the future, if the construction costs be defrayed by the municipality, the interest on such costs would be reduced at least 1.5 per cent., and brokerage charges would be eliminated. Another reduction in cost could be secured by the city letting contracts for the construction instead of having the lines constructed by some company subsidiary to the transit corporation.

Use City's Credit.

The authorities in every city wherein it is proposed to build transit lines should take these matters under serious consideration and see whether or not it is possible for them to use the city's credit in financing such lines, and whether such credit, if used, would reduce the carrying charges sufficiently to permit of a fare that would induce workingmen to use the lines.

No city can cover a large territory without the use of rapid transit lines. A workingman cannot be expected to use more than a half hour of his time in going from his home to his work. A surface line, as ordinarily operated, would carry him during such half hour only about four miles. A city with a four-mile radius, taking into consideration land occupied by business buildings, factories, public places, topography, etc., probably could not house more than 500,000 people, if they were housed chiefly in one or two-family houses. Cities as now built have congestion in portions, and much unoccupied territory. Cincinnati, Cleveland and Pittsburgh have each a population ranging around 500,000, and each occupies a territory approximating that within a circle having a radius of four miles. Each of these cities has some parts with intense congestion. Each family of the 500,000 could be comfortably sheltered in a single house within the territory now occupied by these respective cities, if real estate values could be adjusted and transit provided.

Is This Ideal Unattainable?

This ideal probably will never be realized; there will always be practical difficulties; cities will not develop in all parts evenly; cities exceeding 500,000 population will undoubtedly require rapid transit to bring into use cheap land for homes; a rapid transit train within a half hour can reach the circumference of a circle having an area seven times larger than that served by surface lines in the same time. It is imperative that this additional territory be reached if single and cheap homes are to be made available.

The cost of rapid transit as at present constructed renders a fare of less than five cents practically out of the question. The enlarged rapid transit system in New York City now under construction, and to be operated by the Interborough Company, must crowd its cars in the future as densely as they are crowded in the existing subway in order to pay with a five-cent fare, operating expenses and carrying charges. Even had New York City, with its own credit, been able to finance the whole undertaking at an interest charge of 4.5 per cent. for construction and 5.5 per cent. for equipment, yet the per-passenger cost would have been 4.52 cents, if the number of passengers per car were limited to 100. New York City has the privilege, under the contract with the Interborough Company, of taking these roads over after ten years from the beginning of operation; but, owing to the heavy cost of construction and the payments it would be necessary to make to the Interborough company, it would be impossible for New York City ever to operate these lines at less than five cents, unless a yearly deficit were paid out of taxation.

It is of the utmost importance that the governing officers in cities with a population approaching 500,000 should realize that rapid transit roads are greatly needed, but that if such roads are placed underground and are of the type used in New York the construction cost will be so heavy that a dense traffic and car congestion will be necessary in order to pay operating expenses and fixed charges.

Those interested in giving the population of our large cities better housing facilities should lose no opportunity to impress upon city officials and transit engineers the necessity of reducing the construction cost and carrying charges of rapid transit roads. Without such reduction there is little hope of materially relieving the congested portions of our cities.

THE FIRE COMMISSIONER'S AUTHORITY

Challenged in An Opinion By Former Chief Justice Cullen—The Case Will Now Be Carried Up—Conflicting Fire Prevention Orders.

ALTHOUGH the owner of a modern building was recently convicted in a test case of having committed a misdemeanor, in refusing to obey an order of the Fire Commissioner to install automatic sprinklers, it is by no means certain that the conviction will stand. Notice of appeal was served this week upon the Corporation Counsel by the defendant's attorneys, following the receipt of an opinion from Hon. Edgar M. Cullen, who was, until recently, chief judge of the Court of Appeals of the State of New York.

"If it were not for what may be termed the strong disposition of the courts, influenced by the recent loss of life by fires in factories, to uphold any prosecution for failure to comply with the regulations or orders for protection against fire," writes Judge Cullen, "I should have no doubt that the defendant had committed no crime in failing to install the automatic sprinklers."

While the opinion is, of course, without the force of a decision, the source from which it comes gives it dynamic potentialities. The combined effect of the opinion and the appeal to the higher court is to reopen the whole question concerning the powers of the Fire Commissioner.

The Question at Issue.

The question in the case is, Has the Fire Commissioner authority to order the installation of automatic sprinklers in this city? He has all along supposed he possessed this authority, and in the case of the People vs. Kaye a test was made in the courts, and the decision handed down a few weeks ago by the Appellate Division, First Department, affirmed the conviction of Mr. Kaye for refusing to comply with an order of the Commissioner requiring the installation of automatic sprinklers in the twelve-story loft building at 30-34 West 25th street.

The defendant was represented by Carlisle Norwood, of the Realty League, and the People by Asst. Corporation Counsel Alexander C. MacNulty and Asst. District Attorney Robert C. Taylor. (See Record and Guide, Feb. 21.) The defendant contended that it was not a crime to disregard the Commissioner's order, and in any event the authority to require the installation was not conferred by the ordinance.

Judge Cullen, fully agreeing with this view, says the statute amending the Charter (section 774) simply empowers the Fire Commissioner to enforce "all laws and ordinances" in respect to the installation of automatic or other fire-alarm systems and fire-extinguishing equipment. And section 775 empowers him to "require in writing, the installation, as required by any law or ordinance, in any building, structure or enclosure, of automatic or other fire-alarm system or fire-extinguishing equipment, and the maintenance and repair thereof; or the construction as required by any law or ordinance of adequate and safe means of exit."

Judge Cullen further writes: "The intent of the statute was not to authorize the Fire Commissioner to require the installation of such a system or equipment as he might think wise, but merely such system or equipment as might be prescribed by law or ordinance."

There is no such law or ordinance, in Judge Cullen's opinion. True, ample power was conferred upon the Board of Aldermen to prescribe by ordinance such a requirement, but it has done nothing of the kind.

"No such power is confided to any officer," continues the opinion, "and to so confide it would be dangerous. It would open the greatest opportunity for favoritism or corruption."

The private opinion of a counselor-at-law cannot change the practise and methods of the Fire Prevention Bureau, but if a like opinion should be handed down by the Court of Appeals, the authority of the bureau would be very much curtailed.

New Fire Prevention Measure.

In connection with the question of the duties of the Fire Commissioner, the Hoff bill in the Assembly (Int. 1254) is important. The bill amends section 776 of the New York City Charter by transferring the functions of the Municipal Explosive Commission to the Fire Commissioner. It also recognizes existing practise by giving him authority over "fire-escape equipment," as well as over fire-alarm and fire extinguishing equipment.

Mass Meeting Called.

Under all the circumstances the legislation relating to fire prevention has become so complex, if not conflicting, that taxpayers are rising in protest against the over-regulation of buildings. A mass meeting of taxpayers' organizations will be held in the Real Estate Exchange Salesroom next Tuesday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, to consider the problem and decide upon a course of action.

"The purpose of this meeting," said one of those who was active in getting up the hearing on the Herrick-Schaap bill in Albany on March 3, "is to complete the work that was begun under such favorable auspices in connection with the Single Tax agitation last autumn, and also to take up probably the most perplexing and harrassing situation that now confronts the taxpayers—that caused by conflicting orders of the State and local authorities on fire prevention and other similar matters.

"The matter of conflicting violations is one that has caused a great deal of apprehension among real estate owners in every part of the city. So great are the burdens that are caused by these conflicting orders that many owners have been induced, if not compelled, to let their holdings go. The feeling of the men behind this movement is that some constructive plan ought to be worked out to make real estate more attractive and to induce a large number of people to invest in what ought to be the best security in the world. It is not the purpose to organize a new association. The movement may be known under the name of 'The Realty Owners of the City of New York,' but this is merely a name and used as a matter of convenience."

Relative to this problem of conflicting violations, the United Real Estate Owners' Associations, at their meeting held on Tuesday evening, adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That a committee of fifteen be appointed by the President for the purpose of embodying and presenting to this Association a plan whereby legislation may be enacted looking towards either the appointment of a commission for the purpose of consolidating or merging two or more of the existing city departments having jurisdiction over buildings, or the introduction of a bill which shall establish a bureau of inspection for all departments so far as all laws are concerned which affect buildings, and that this committee be requested to report as early as may be consistent with a careful study of the situation."

Brooklyn's New Court House.

The expectation now is that the Brooklyn Municipal Building will be evacuated by May 1, and the work of demolishing it to make room for the new Court House wing will be commenced immediately thereafter. The only detail which is now puzzling the city officials is the distribution of the present city departments in the Municipal Building between the Terminal Building and the Offerman Building.

Income Tax Returns.

Income tax returns are beginning to come back because of the unsatisfactory way in which they were made out by the persons submitting them, and suits have been started in the Federal courts attacking the constitutionality of the law. Indications point to a revenue for the first ten months (the period for which returns were made) of upward of $90,000,000, to be received from 430,000 to 450,000 individuals and corporations.

—Most of us remember the first time we went to call on a prospective customer. We walked back and forth past the door a dozen times or more, before we got up nerve enough to go inside.—Real Estate Bulletin.

WIDESPREAD MOVEMENT FOR GOOD HOUSING

It Applies to Millionaires' Mansions as Well as to Workmen's Cottages — The Tenement House Classification Dropped From Mr. Veiller's Model Law.

NEW YORK CITY has seen one great movement for the reform of living conditions attended with success, and is likely to see another, when real estate affairs resume a normal status. The housing problem is now engaging the attention of those forces in society which were instrumental in producing and enforcing the tenement house laws as the fruit of the first movement. By the "housing problem" is meant the problem of preventing people from maintaining conditions that are a menace to their neighbors or the community.

A housing law was enacted last year for the six cities of the second class in the State of New York; laws and ordinances of similar nature and purpose have been enacted for a number of cities in other States; the movement is growing rapidly and is certain to extend throughout the country. The National Housing Association, which was organized some years ago in this city at the headquarters of the Charity Organization, is the official center and mainspring of the movement, and men and women who have been identified with the work of the Charity Organization here, or with allied societies elsewhere, are co-operating in this new campaign.

Housing evils vary with communities, and many which still afflict other cities have been banished from New York by the operation of our tenement house law. In the opinion of the housing associations, local and national, there is still much reformatory work to do in contending with such evils as are to be found in buildings of undue height, in inadequate fire-protection, in the intensive use of land, in cramped and crowded quarters, in promiscuity, in lack of privacy and in fly-borne disease.

What the Housing Problem Is.

The housing problem, in other words, is the problem of enabling the great mass of the people, who want to live in decent surroundings and bring up their children under proper conditions, to have the opportunity. Some people do not care, and a part of the problem is to prevent such from being a menace to their neighbors.

Obviously only in those congested centers where the tenement house is the prevailing type will a tenement house law do much to solve the housing problems. Elsewhere within the periphery of a large city, the reform must concern itself with dwelling houses and other types which need it quite as much.

The nature and compass of the legislation needed to effect housing reform is the subject of a work just issued by the Russell Sage Foundation, entitled "A Model Housing Law," by Lawrence Veiller, former Deputy Tenement House Commissioner, author of "A Model Tenement House Law," etc. While the book is entitled "A Model Housing Law," it is so only in the sense of containing a working model upon which others may build. It is in no sense intended to be an ideal or perfect statute. In this model the provisions have been so classified that each person can easily and readily find those matters which interest him. A builder needs only to consult the provisions of one chapter of the law, namely, that relating to New Buildings. A man wishing to alter his house will find everything bearing on it in one separate chapter entitled Alterations. Other chapters are on Light and Ventilation, Sanitation, Fire Protection, Maintenance, Improvements, Requirements and Remedies.

The publication of the model law reveals some novel tendencies on the part of housing reformers and the first to be noticed is in the classification of houses, as (a) private dwellings, (b) two-family dwellings, and (c) multiple dwellings, or those that may be occupied otherwise than as private dwellings or as two-family dwellings. It will be observed that the term "tenement house" is dropped. By means of this classification it is possible to encourage the construction of private dwellings and two-family houses and discourage the erection of tenements and other forms of multiple dwellings by making the provisions relative to the latter more stringent than those affecting the former classes. No kind of dwelling can escape regulation under the act.

A Radical Innovation.

Multiple dwellings are divided into two broad classes, those which are used by families or groups of persons permanently, and those which are used more or less transiently by single individuals. Multiple dwellings of Class A includes apartment houses, flats, tenements, apartment hotels, bachelor apartments, studio apartments, duplex apartments and kitchenette apartments; and Class B multiple dwellings include hotels, lodging-houses, boarding-houses, convents, asylums, hospitals, jails and all other dwellings similarly occupied, whether specifically enumerated or not.

Residence Districts.

Another novel provision is for "residence districts," within the bounds of which no multiple dwelling or any structure other than a private dwelling or a two-family dwelling, may be erected, and such district can be created by the common council upon the petition of two-thirds or more of the owners of the frontage of one side of any block.

This is an attempt to protect residential districts from the invasion of commercial and other elements. The novel feature is that it is done by statute and not by covenant. It permits residences on one side of a street and business on the other if the majority of owners wish it so. The author believes that the section will withstand the tests of the courts. Such a section is contained in the housing law for second-class cities in this State and affecting Yonkers, Albany, Troy, Schenectady, Syracuse and Utica.

Light and Ventilation.

No dwelling is permitted to be more than three stories high, under the provisions of the model code, unless built fireproof. This restriction is based upon the principle that the way to prevent the over-crowding of land is to limit the number of people that may live on a given area. The author considers that with the cost of fireproof construction as it is today, the effect of the provision will be to discourage the erection of tall residential buildings. Every multiple dwelling must have at least two independent ways of egress remote from each other, and stairhalls, dumbwaiters and elevators must be enclosed with fireproof walls.

In the chapters on "Maintenance," "Improvements" and "Requirements and Remedies" we see few provisions not familiar to New Yorkers, and of course they are intended more particularly for those cities throughout the land which have almost no housing regulations.

Space Requirements.

Two main groups of dwellings seem to be particularly in the mind of the author, (a) the detached house, and (2) houses built in continuous rows or "terraces." As has been stated, the erection of private dwellings and two-family houses is favored. Take as an example the case of a man who owns a forty-foot lot. Under the provisions of this law, if he desire to build a detached dwelling, the width of the house may be 30 feet and the depth 80, with a side yard 5 feet wide on each side. It is obvious at a glance that it is possible for the architect to get in a building of that size any disposition or arrangement of the interior that may be desired, either for a millionaire's mansion, a two-family house, or a cheap tenement. Should the plot be 50 feet wide, the house may have a width of 40 feet.

Seven different treatments of plots are offered for consideration, when the purpose is to build a detached house, and the examples given ought to be of the utmost benefit in the improvement of real estate in the smaller cities. The construction possibilities for a single lot of varying depths are also set forth in a definite and authoritative manner. On a 100-foot lot it would be possible to build a house 25 feet wide by 68 feet deep, with an inner lot line court on one side 10 feet by 20 feet, and a back-yard 32 feet in depth. This would give an excellent layout for either a two-family house or a multiple dwelling, as each section of the building (between the street and the court and between the court and the yard) would be about 24 feet in depth thus permitting the section to be built two rooms deep.

Legislation the Only Effective Means.

The author believes that legislation will solve the housing problem, and that "we must get rid of our slums before we can make garden cities, and must make it impossible to build dark rooms in new houses before we urge the government to subsidize building." The book is intended to be working model on which others may build. It, apparently, renders unnecessary the painful operation of collecting the housing laws of different cities, preparing a digest of them, and striving to construct a new law from these elements, cutting a piece here and adding a patch there. All the housing laws in the United States are based upon two models, either the New York Tenement House Law or Mr. Veiller's "Model Tenement House Law," published in 1910, and any city which has neither tenement nor housing law will not go far wrong in following the new model.

Enforcement.

The provisions of the law are made to be enforced in each city by the Health Officer, except that the Superintendent of Buildings is charged with the duty of enforcing certain parts of the law. The Health Officer is to cause a periodic inspection of multiple dwellings at least once a year, or as often as may be necessary.

Public Hearings Called.

The Committee on Buildings of the Board of Aldermen will hold a public hearing in the Aldermanic Chamber, City Hall, on Wednesday, March 25, at 2 p. m., on the following matter: No. 256.—An ordinance with respect to fences, signs, billboards, roof signs, sky signs, advertisements and other structures.

The Industrial Board will hold public hearings in the hearing room of the Board at 381 Fourth avenue as follows:

On Wednesday, March 25, at 10 a. m., on the proposed specifications for fire-alarm signal systems.

On Thursday, March 26, at 10 a. m., on the proposed rules regulating the width of aisles leading to means of egress from factories.

BILLS PENDING IN THE LEGISLATURE

Measure to Pension Widows, With Children, Important to Taxpayers—Herrick-Schaap Bill Thing of the Past—Equal Pay for Teachers Passes Senate.

AMONG the important measures now under consideration at Albany is the Mothers' Pension bill, which provides for state pensions for widows with dependent children. The New York State Commission on Relief for Widowed Mothers has had the matter in charge for many months and will recommend to the Legislature a bill which will eliminate, as far as possible, the idea of pensions and which will mention, only casually, the relief of widows. As designed, the bill, if passed, will become operative on October 1.

The bill, as proposed, is strictly a home rule measure, power being vested with the local authorities. The suggestion is that widows with one child under 16 years of age may receive an amount not to exceed $20 a month, while, if there are two children, not more than $15 a month is to be allowed for the second child. Ten dollars a month is the appropriation for each other child, though $60 a month is the maximum that any mother can receive under the proposed bill.

In cities a board containing nine members is to be appointed by the Mayor, of which the Commissioner of Public Charities is to be an ex-officio member. A representative of the public school system and the Board of Health, together with a representative of the Children's Court, is also suggested.

In counties the County Judge will appoint the members, with the exception of the County Superintendent of the Poor, who shall serve during his term of office. Should this measure become a law it will add a considerable burden upon the taxpayers, it having been estimated that locally the cost would be about $500,000.

Herrick-Schaap Bill Killed.

With the killing, in the Assembly Cities Committee, of the Herrick-Schaap bill, which provided for the reduction of taxes on buildings there has gone from the market a condition which, at one time, threatened to have serious effects. The vote in opposition to the proposed measure was unanimous, with the exception of a member of the Progressive party, from Erie County.

Equal Pay for Teachers.

The Foley-Lockwood bill, which provides for the equalization of teachers' salaries in the seventh and eights grades of the New York City grammar schools, passed the Senate on Monday night without a dissenting vote. The bill now goes to the Assembly. It increases the salary of the women teachers from $1,800 to $2,400, and adds a large sum to the already large total of the tax budget.

MR. DOWLING'S APPOINTMENT.

As Chairman of Workmen's Compensation Commission—Expects Great Results Through Co-operation.

ROBERT E. DOWLING, for many years prominently identified with real estate interests in Manhattan, was appointed this week Chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Commission, by Governor Glynn. The reason for the Governor's selection lay largely in the fact that Mr. Dowling has been the head of several large realty corporations and is well known for his executive and organization abilities. When first approached to take the chairmanship of the committee, Mr. Dowling hesitated, for there were many details to be worked out, but when it was decided who his colleagues were to be Mr. Dowling finally consented.

"Wholehearted and united efforts," said Mr. Dowling, "are absolutely necessary to a successful conclusion, and I feel that I can give the very best there is in me. My heart and soul are in this work. Governor Glynn has been interested in the Compensation act for a long while. He has studied conditions existing here and abroad, and when he suggested that I assume the duties I hesitated before assuming the responsibility. Now that the appointment has come, and in the manner in which it did, I am glad, and am ready to go right ahead.

ROBERT E. DOWLING.

"One familiar with factory conditions," continued Mr. Dowling, "realizes that accidents have occurred, which might possibly have been avoided had proper safeguards been used. The use of these preventives will be one of the matters to which the commission will devote a great deal of attention. 'An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure,' and it is on this principle that we will shape our course. Nothing definite has been decided as to what proceedure the commission will take, for we are all of open minds, but a fixed policy will be inaugurated as soon as the commission as a body meets.

"Only by rigid investigation can the best way of righting the existing deficiences be determined. The whole matter is one of the biggest questions in commercial life. Experts in their line will be called for consultation, and outside ideas and suggestions welcomed. It is sincerely hoped that by the power vested in the commission speedy adjustments of difficulties will result and considerable litigation avoided. To those familiar with the law it is readily seen that the ascertaining of employees' salaries is only one branch of the field to be covered, and that other matters, including accidents, as mentioned, will come under the scope of the commission."

Mr. Dowling was born in Calaveras, Cal., on October 21, 1866, but, since the year following, has lived in New York City. In 1886, about the time that the elevated railroad system was extended in the West Side, north of 59th street, Mr. Dowling went into the real estate business and has been identified with realty interests ever since. A partnership was formed with the late Albert Flake, under the firm name of Flake & Dowling, and many important properties were acquired and improved. The New York Realty Company was formed by Messrs. Flake & Dowling in 1901, with a capital of $3,000,000. In the year following this concern, with Mr. Henry Morgenthau, who at that time was head of the Central Realty Bond & Trust Company, together with Mr. Harry S. Black, combined and formed the United States Realty & Improvement Company, Messrs. Flake and Dowling withdrew from the corporation in 1905 and formed the City Investing Company, which is now headed by Mr. Dowling.

TO CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY.

West Side Taxpayers' Association, Forty Years Old, Will Hold Banquet Next Tuesday.

The West Side Taxpayers' Association will celebrate its fortieth anniversary at the Lexington Avenue Opera House, on Tuesday evening, March 24, with a banquet. Dr. George Wenner, president of the association, will act as toastmaster, and has made reservation for four hundred members and guests. Hon. Marcus M. Marks, President of the Borough of Manhattan, will address the members on the future improvements in the Borough of Manhattan. Mr. Allan Robinson, president of the Allied Real Estate Interests, will talk on the Herrick-Schaap bill. Dr. Gustav Schoeller, one of the first presidents of the organization, will speak on the early accomplishments of the association, and Mr. Frank Demuth, a former president and chairman of the executive committee, will give a history of the work of the organization for the last fifteen years. Mr. Joseph Wenner is chairman of the dinner committee.

WANT NEW EXPRESS STATION.

Realty Owners in Yorkville Section to Hold Meeting on 86th Street Project.

Through the efforts of the Real Estate Owners' Association of the 12th and 19th Wards, a public hearing has been arranged before the Public Service Commission on Thursday, March 26, at 2 p. m., with reference to the placing of an express station at 86th street on the Second avenue line as soon as the third tracking is completed. All those interested in this matter will be given an opportunity to be heard at this public hearing.

Cost of Safety Devices for Elevators.

Inquiries into the cost of installing safety devices on elevator gates and shaft doors, as would be required under the bill recently introduced at Albany, have developed figures, which, while they are in no sense authoritative and only approximate, are given here for the information of those who will be affected by the law and yet have not had an opportunity to investigate on their own account.

Our information is that on a new installation the interlocking of the shaft doors would cost about $20 for each story, and the interlocking of the car gate about $25. In the case of existing installations the figures would be higher, and possibly as high as $50 a door for shaft doors. It will be understood, of course, that the $25 expense for interlocking of the car gate would be incurred only once on each elevator.

A Significant Purchase.

This item from the Kansas City Star is significant of the change of attitude toward real estate loans: The Fidelity Trust Company has sold a half million dollars' worth of farm mortgage loans to the New York Life Insurance Company. This is probably the largest single sale of farm mortgage loans ever made in the West.

"The New York Life Insurance Company has never invested in farm loans until recently," said a Kansas City man. "It's entrance into this field means a substantial increase in money available for this purpose.

HISTORIC RELICS UNCOVERED.

Razing the Structure on Site of Old Fort Lafayette Will Disclose Long-Forgotten Treasures.

THE workmen, who will demolish the four-story building now occupying the northwest corner of Reade and Lafayette streets, to provide for the construction of a new three-story restaurant and club building, will uncover a most interesting relic of the early history of the city; namely, the reservoir of the first chartered water supply system for the City of New York. The original charter was applied for in 1777. The application was revised and the first charter issued in 1786, then revised and reissued in 1812.

The corner of Reade and Lafayette streets is the site of the old Fort Lafayette, famous in American history, and the reservoir in question is super-imposed on what was at one time the prison of the fort. This prison was arranged in two tiers, eight cells to a tier, and it is stated that the original ring bolts, to which the prisoners were chained, may still be seen embedded in the masonry.

Upon this same property is the original corner stone of the fort in which is a box containing twelve silver spoons, which were the property of the first supervisor of the first tax district of the city of New York, and 5,000 Spanish Louis in gold as well as papers and records of great historic value.

The reservoir or tank is 42 feet in diameter and 15 feet in depth. It was erected in three sections, each 5 feet in depth. There are no records to show the exact date of placing the first section, but the second and third sections were imported from England in 1854 and set in place during that year.

In view of the fact that the organizers of the Manhattan Company contracted to permanently supply the city of New York with water, they obtained their charter to conduct a banking business. The bank and charter is still active and the Bank of the Manhattan Co., 40 Wall street, the owner of this property, is operating under it.

As a consequence of this charter the tank must be kept intact pending the erection of the building which will cover this site, and, as the work on the building progresses the tank will be raised and finally incorporated in the roof of the new structure. Of course, it is understood that there will never be any necessity for the use of this tank to supply water; it could not adequately supply the demand for water made by the inhabitants of one city block in these times, but it must stand, with pumping equipment connected, in order that the bank may maintain its charter privileges.

The new building proposed for this site is to be erected from plans and specifications prepared by J. C. Cocker, architect, 2017 Fifth ave., and is owned by the Bank of the Manhattan Co. The building will be three stories in height, with basement, on a plot 65 by 50 by irregular.

Brick and terra cotta will be the materials used in construction with a Spanish tile roof. The entire building will be used for restaurant and dining-club purposes, including lunchroom, dining and grill rooms and cafe. Frank Von Garrel and John Windhorst have leased the building for a long term and will conduct their business as a luncheon club, catering especially to the many employes of the city who are housed in the new Municipal Building, which is almost directly opposite.

Public Markets.

The United Owners are taking up the question of markets and have appointed Charles J. F. Bohlen chairman of a special committee to make a study of the bill prepared by former Borough President Cyrus C. Miller, which provides for the placing for markets throughout the city. The committee will confer with Mr. Miller and by ascertaining his views, will be better able to take up the matter. The same association is also seeking to amend Section 97 of the Building Code, with reference to the fireproofing of dumb-waiter shafts.

Decidedly more activity was noted in building circles during the week and was reflected in the increased number of plans filed, especially in Queens and Brooklyn. This is the first real day of the spring season, and it is encouraging to observe that the builders are up and doing.

The necessity of closing out the affairs of an estate has put on the market recently large plots in the Dyckman section, and they naturally have found ready purchasers, which probably insures an early start this spring in the work of developing one of the most inviting and promising parts of the city.

The question of to what extent billboards and skysigns should be regulated in New York City is being brought directly before the public by the ordinance pending before the Board of Aldermen. The hearing to be held next Wednesday afternoon at City Hall should develop the main reasons both for and against the principles and purposes represented by the measure under consideration.

The development of the section lying west of Fort Washington avenue, along 160th street and those to the north has been longer in getting under headway than was supposed when the section was made available by the opening of new streets a few years ago. Two large plots from the Loyal L. Smith estate have recently gone into the hands of large builders, who may be expected to take early advantage of their opportunity.

About four years' time was required for the construction of the old subway lines; but it is apparent from the record made on the Lexington avenue sections that more speed is possible for the new work. Still, the fact that the connecting link between the so-called old and the new lines is only now being put under contract is taken to mean by the public that no part of the Lexington avenue branch will be available until 1917 at the earliest; and real estate men are depressed when they reflect upon it. However, it may turn out that the connecting link will be ready when really needed.

Rally for Defence.

It is much to be regretted that no effective means have as yet been taken to reorganize the City Economy League. That association made a most thoroughgoing and successful attempt to bring about a comprehensive organization of the real estate interests of New York City. Its leaders comprised the most energetic, able and prominent men connected with the real estate business in the metropolis. They succeeded in obtaining about 30,000 signatures to its declaration of principles, which was an incomparably larger number than any other real estate association ever obtained. These signatures constitute an asset of peculiar value. They should not be thrown away; and they cannot be transferred to an association with another name, another point of departure and another set of principles. Of course, they cannot all be induced to renew their allegiance to the association. Many of the signatures were obtained during the excitement of a pre-election campaign, and a certain number were alienated by the policy subsequently pursued by the City Economy League. But a list of 30,000 is not necessary. One-fourth of that number would be sufficient, provided it included the more energetic and public-spirited real estate owners, and provided they were properly distributed throughout the city.

What is needed is not voting strength, but energy and intelligent public spirit. The past winter has demonstrated once again how necessary such an association is. Year after year attacks are made upon the real estate interests of New York which are beaten off only with the utmost difficulty; and part of this difficulty arises from the fact that real estate owners are not properly organized for the promotion and the protection of their own interests. There are efficient and useful local organizations, like the West Side Association. There are efficient and useful trade organizations, like the Real Estate Board. But there is no association of real estate owners that is thoroughly representative and which is possessed of the resources and the staff necessary to the proper promotion of the real estate interests of the metropolis.

So many attempts have been made to organize them without success that people are getting discouraged. The conviction is spreading that real estate owners are incapable of co-operating on a large scale and in a public-spirited way for the promotion of their joint interests. This conviction will prove to be erroneous in the end, but only on condition that more persistent and intelligent efforts are made to get together. What the property owners of New York must learn to realize is that their common interests are becoming more important than their individual interests. Unless some effective means are taken to decrease the burden of taxation, their individual property interests will suffer even more severely in the future than they have done in the past. Unless some adequate publicity campaign is planned and carried out it is entirely possible that the single tax enthusiasts will in the end succeed in forcing through some revision of the system of taxation which will result in the partial confiscation of land values.

The advocates of the single tax are numerous and insistent. They are assiduously seeking to convert a sufficient body of public opinion to the support of their program. During the last few years they have undoubtedly made some little headway. Unless their propaganda is counteracted by an equally effective public statement of the economic justification of the existing system, they may well be able to persuade a sufficiently large number of people of the desirability of their plan. The great majority of voters in New York are tenants and might not be adverse to taking something out of their landlords. It is up to the real estate owners to make an effective resistance to this campaign—which can be done only by a numerous association, endowed with abundant resources and a permanent staff. That association should be called the City Economy League.

New Sites for Fashionable Clubs.

During the past winter two of the most fashionable clubs in New York decided to move, and it is significant that in each case the management selected a location in the same neighborhood. One of these clubs, the Knickerbocker, has purchased a site at the corner of 62d street and Fifth avenue. The other, the Colony, purchased a site at the corner of 62d street and Park avenue. Both of them, consequently, decided to keep away from the district just north of 42d street, in which the great majority of the existing clubs are situated. Both of them found it more convenient for their membership to move further uptown; but both were evidently reluctant to select a location much north of 59th street. The fact that they settled upon 62d street pretty well determines the limits of the neighborhood in which a club whose membership has any pretensions to social prominence can afford to build a club house. The district extends from a little south of 42d street to a little north of 62d street, and there is every reason to believe that the limits of this district will not be altered, at least for another generation.

Since the first important club moved into this neighborhood, twenty-five years ago, its character has been profoundly altered. It has been transformed, particularly in its southern portion, from primarily a residential into primarily a business district, and undoubtedly the larger part of it will in the end be occupied by business. But the kind of business which is appropriating the avenues and streets of the neighborhood has not made it any less desirable as a site for a club. Only the better class of retail trade has been able to afford the rents which must be paid, and it is rather an advantage than otherwise to have a club situated in the same vicinity as the better quality of stores. A club must have a house in a central location, so that its members can go to the theatres and reach other similar places without any considerable loss of time. Hence it is that although the area of the club district has been enlarged as a result of the removal of the Knickerbocker and Colony Clubs to 62d street this enlargement does not mean an abandonment by the clubs situated near 42d street of their existing locations.

On the contrary, the Yale Club has given up its present house only to select a new site in substantially the same neighborhood. The Harvard Club is about to double the size of its existing house. Not a single club now living near 42d street has shown any discontent with its location, and there is no reason why it should be. The social topography of Manhattan is unquestionably beginning to show certain fixed characteristics. The northward migration of retail trade and of the social center, while it still continues to a certain extent, has been checked. The retail trade will not move north of the south line of Central Park. Society will continue to live between Fifth and Lexington avenues, 90th and 42d streets. Of course, the residents of the southern part of this fashionable district will be slowly dislocated; but they will simply move somewhat farther north.

The recession in values which has occurred of late years in the residential district east of Central Park will not continue. The number of people who can afford to pay high rents will be relatively smaller than it used to be, because of the more meagre profits which are now being made in the financial district. But if the demand for expensive residential property will be less the supply cannot very well increase. There is no way in which the district can be enlarged. The consequence is that during the next period of good times prices are likely to increase, which will result in an accelerated construction of apartment houses, adapted to the use of rich people. The fact that both the Knickerbocker and the Colony Clubs have settled east of Central Park will add to the social desirability of the neighborhood.

Mr. Polak's Calculations Challenged.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

In your issue of March 14 you publish a statement by the Register of Bronx County, purporting to show the workings of the Herrick-Schaap bill, if it were enacted into a law. The statement evidently is written in favor of the bill, but it is misleading in that it seems to show a gain for the property owner by the saving of taxes in the specific cases which are cited.

It will be noticed that these cases are most favorable for the law, because in all of them the value of the improvement is largely in excess of the value of the land. On similar figures alone it may be seen that the property owner would suffer an increase of taxes where the value of the land is in excess of the value of the improvements.

There is another item of loss, however, which the statement does not disclose and which goes to the root of all of these single-tax measures, and that is the depreciation in the selling value of the land which is caused by the increase of taxes under such a law. The single-tax, as is well known, destroys the selling value of land because it takes the income of the land. Any increase on the tax on land tends to decrease the selling value of the land, so that if the tax is taken off buildings and put on land, while it may relieve the buildings of a small tax, it kills the selling value of the land in proportion to the percentage of extra tax.

A lot is worth a sum on which it will produce a fair return after the taxes have been paid. A fair return is 5 per cent. It is worth $1,000 if it will produce $50 (5 per cent. income) and the taxes, say 2 per cent., or $20, which is $70 in all. If the taxes are raised to 3 per cent., the income will be reduced to $40, and the lot will be worth only $800 to sell. If the taxes are increased to 4 per cent. the income will be $30, and the selling value $600. And, finally, if the tax is increased to 7 per cent., the entire income will be taken and the lot will have no selling value at all.

In round numbers the assessed valuation of buildings and improvements in New York is $3,000,000,000; half of this is $1,500,000,000. At the rate of 2 per cent., the tax would amount to $30,000,000, which would be shifted from the buildings to the land and cause a corresponding depreciation of the value of the land. As $30,000,000 is 7 per cent. of over $420,000,000, it would lower the selling value of land in the city more than $420,000,000. The decrease in the value of the land would cause endless confusion and loss from mortgages being called and from equities being wiped out. It is somewhat difficult to see how the property would gain by this.

While, therefore, Mr. Polak's article may be correct so far as it goes, it is altogether incorrect and misleading, because it does not show what effect on the selling value of the lot the law will have; nor does it show that the owner will lose on the capital value of his property, because his building will continue to diminish in value on account of the heavier tax on it; there will be no rise in the value of his lot to offset the decreasing value of the building, and when the building is worn out or becomes out of date, he will have a lower priced lot to serve as security upon which to borrow money to erect a new building.

The New Billboard Ordinance.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

Through the courtesy of the Committee on Buildings of the Board of Aldermen of this city, there will be a public hearing held in the Aldermanic Chamber of the City Hall, on Wednesday, March 25, at 2 o'clock, for the purpose of hearing arguments, pro and con relative to the passage of Ordinance No. 256, proposed by the Hon. Henry Curran, which contains among other provisions the following:

No sign shall exceed 10 feet in height from the ground unless back from the building line 1½ times its height, and then the sign can only be 20 feet high. Solid face roof signs shall not be more than 10 feet high, and must have 25% clearance on all sides of roof. Open signs (meaning electric structures) on roofs can only be 20 feet in height, with 25% clearance on all sides, and 6½ feet above roof to be free from advertising of any kind.

There can be no sign placed on any hotel (except to advertise the hotel itself), tenement or other building except on a private house that stands 40 feet away from any other dwelling. No solid face sign can be placed on any non-fireproof building.

All signs must be heavy enough to withstand a wind pressure of 40 pounds to the square foot. No signs can be placed within 350 feet of a public park, public school, church, college or university. No signs can be erected on any building as against the objections of any property holder within 200 feet of the proposed structure.

The carrying out of these provisions would mean the impracticability of leasing property for signboard purposes. It means that our company could not afford to pay present rentals for restricted signs, nor could any but the very strongest modern buildings sustain a structure of the weight required to withstand a wind pressure of 40 pounds per square foot. The absolute oppression of this one clause is peculiarly noticeable, when one knows that the present laws make safety imperative before building permits are issued for the signs, and that the buildings themselves are only required to withstand a 20 pound per square foot wind pressure.

Our attorneys also advise us that the city has no legal right to cut off an owner's possibilities of income because his property stands within a certain radius of a school, parkway, church, etc. Nor can the city give adjoining property holders any legal right to say what one should do, or not do, with his property, as long as he does not commit a direct nuisance or menace the health of the community. In spite of the fact that our counsel advises us that the courts would not sustain many features of the proposed bill, still its passage would mean long litigation and a positive detriment to property interests, pending final decision as to its constitutionality.

M. JONES,

Secretary the O. J. Gude Co.

Is It a Strike Bill?

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

It seems as if the legislators of our State were lying awake nights thinking of ways to separate the property owner from his money. The Herrick bill in relation to passenger elevators is the fruit of their nocturnal meditations. This bill provides that every elevator in use must be equipped within one year from the passage of the bill, with a device that will prevent operation of the elevator while any of the elevator doors are open.

As the Superintendent of Buildings, Mr. Rudolph P. Miller, has already pointed out in your columns, it is a physical impossibility to comply with the requirements of this bill within one year, as the number of elevators now in use in Manhattan alone is over 10,000. Our legislators forget that elevators have been used extensively for only a comparatively short time, that proper elevator shaft enclosures have only received attention in the last few years, and that proper locking and closing devices for doors are just in their infancy.

The number of devices now on the market to accomplish what the bill requires does not exceed half a dozen, and the manufacturers of these would have to supply the entire demand, so that Mr. Miller is absolutely correct in his statement when he says, "that it would take more than two years to equip all elevators, as is required by this proposed law."

The attempt to penalize property owners for failure to comply within one year at the rate of $5 per day is so atrocious that this provision alone should be sufficient to prevent its enactment. Should this bill be passed, and the property owners comply, it would mean an expenditure of about $2,000,000, which would go into the hands of three or four persons now holding patents for such devices. The bill is ostensibly designed to prevent persons walking into elevator shafts where doors have been left open, and also to prevent accidents to persons about to step in or out of elevators while the latter are in motion.

Now an elevator is really a vertical railroad, and the number of persons carried by these vertical railroads exceeds many times the traffic of all the other steam or electric railroads. Nevertheless the statistics show that the number of accidents to persons riding in vertical railroads is insignificant compared with accidents on horizontal railroads.

Since more persons are injured getting on or off railroad cars in motion, would it not be more important to pass a law that would require on every steam and electric car, an automatic device which would prevent the train from starting until all the car gates are closed?

The provisions of this bill have been taken to such extremes that even the dullest person cannot fail to see that it is a "get-rich-quick scheme" to pour two to three million dollars into the hands of a few persons, and that property owners are to be beaten into it at a penalty of $5 a day. Let the public look well into this measure before it permits its enactment into law.

FREDERICK C. ZOBEL.

WARNING TO REALTY OWNERS.

Tenement House Department Must Be Notified of Change of Ownership.

Once again the Tenement House Department has issued a notice to owners of realty drawing attention to the necessity of filing with the department the names and addresses, together with certain other data, as required by law. The failure to comply leaves the owner open to liability of a fine of $50 in addition to considerable inconvenience. The Department will furnish upon application blanks which the owner can fill out and return. It can be readily understood that the complying with this law is in the interest of both holders of tenement houses as well as the department.

Commissioner John J. Murphy, of the Tenement House Department, said last week: "Persons who sell tenement houses would save themselves possible trouble if they will promptly send to the department the information required by law, and to go a step farther many annoyances would be eliminated were sellers to notify the department of the fact that a sale has been made which would relieve the former owner of the necessity of becoming a party to a possible action.

"When such notices are received and verified the department ceases to send such persons a notice of violations on such property. In some cases the department, not being appraised of change of ownership, begins legal proceedings against former owners; therefore, much annoyance would be saved if sellers would notify the department."

In the case of the devolution of realty by will it is the duty of the executor and the devisee, if more than 21 years of age, and in case of the devolution of such property by inheritance without a will, it shall be the duty of the guardians, to file in the department a notice stating the death of the deceased owner and the names of the owners who have succeeded to the property. This notice should be filed within 30 days after the death of the decedent, in case he died intestate, and within 30 days after the probate of his will, if he died testate. Agents or lessees of tenement houses may file with the department a notice containing the name and address of an agent of such house for the purpose of receiving service of process.

THE WEEK'S REAL ESTATE NEWS

Brokerage Sales, Auctions, Foreclosure Suits, Building Loans, etc., Together With Brief Personal Items.

Sales Were Well Distributed.

The Sun Preparing to Move.

While rumors have been current for some time past that the New York Sun was contemplating the moving of its plant from its old home at 170 Nassau street, still but little authentic verification was obtained until this week, when a meeting of the stockholders of the Sun Printing and Publishing Association, was held for the purpose of considering the sale or mortgaging of the Sun Building and the acquisition of another structure.

For many years the Sun has been in cramped quarters. In fact, the question of enlarging was brought up during the ownership of the paper by the late Charles A. Dana and before his death, in 1897, plans were drawn for a 31-story building, in the shape of an obelisk. William M. Lafflin, who succeeded as owner of the publication, upon Mr. Dana's death, had another set of plans prepared, but this project was never carried out. In recent years the difficulties arising from lack of space have been increased until now it has become necessary to take the matter up for immediate consideration.

No definite information could be obtained as to where the proposed site is located, one current report being that a new structure would be erected in the vicinity of the Municipal Building, while another rumor gave the location as in the Times Square section.

The present Sun Building, a 5-story structure on Park Row and Franklin street, was erected more than a hundred years ago and was designed in the headquarters of the Tammany Society.. The corner-stone was laid in 1811, and the building was completed in 1812 at a reported cost of $28,000. The war of 1812 was in progress at the time the building was finished. The building was sold on March 20, 1867, to the late Mr. Dana, Frederick A. Conkling and others, for $150,000. Thev reconstructed the building the following year, after which the Sun took possession.

A Restrictive Covenant Upheld.

The decision of Justice Greenbaum in the Supreme Court this week upholding the restrictive covenant placed in the year 1850 on the lots in West 28th street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues, following the recent decision of the Court of Appeals in Batchelor vs. Hinckle, refusing to enforce a covenant against setback restrictions in West 26th street, adds to the confusion in the minds of the public as to the efficacy of restrictive covenants.

In the West 28th street case Justice Greenbaum held that the fact that certain lots in the block are used for boarding houses, apartment houses or furnished room houses does not change the character of the neighborhood or relieve the property of the restrictions.

The lots were sold under covenants by which they must be improved with dwelling houses having no alleyway, at least three stories high, costing not less than $4,500, and set back from the street line five feet to permit the construction of iron fences or railings. "Not any kind of manufacture, trade or business" was to be carried on in the restricted district.

Suit was brought for an injunction by Mrs. Schellene Tenu and her daughters, Adrienne and Henrietta Tenu, owners of the family residence at 342 West 28th street, for a permanent injunction against Robert Kommel, owner, and Ludwig Wagner, lessee, of the house at 348 West 28th street, the basement of which was sublet to Jacob Simon and Isaac Lavison for a tailor shop.

The injunction was granted.

A. T. Sicker, long connected with the New York Title and Insurance Co., and recognized as an authority on land restrictions, in a letter to the Law Journal, commenting on the case of Batchelor vs. Hinkle, (reported in the Record and Guide Feb. 28) says:

"The decision on this subject in Batchelor vs. Hinckle, makes the confusion, if anything, worse by introducing into this subject another element of chance and uncertainty. This is contained in the last paragraph of the decision reading in part as follows:

"'A covenant may be enforcible by injunction against one person and as to another violating the same covenant an injunction may be refused.'

"This, if you please, is going too far, and what does it mean? It means that no one is safe, neither the violator of the covenant nor the one seeking to uphold it. . . .

"It seems a pity that we have not yet succeeded in getting our courts to give us a guide on this subject. In this late case a new trial is granted, but for what purpose it is hard to see, inasmuch as an injunction has been denied and the court holds that the plaintiff had not been damaged. It will be interesting to note whether or not the cases now pending to remove these covenants as clouds on title will bring the relief to which all concerned are certainly entitled, namely, to at least know where they are at."

Nautical Attractions of Long Island.

The approach of Spring emphasizes a salient reason why the southern half of Nassau County, Long Island, attracts a majority of the permanent residents of the Island to it, namely: the nautical attractions of Hempstead and Hewlett Bays and Long Beach and the ocean.

There is a ferry connecting Long Beach with the mainland at Freeport, and the dock has direct connections with the trolley line passing through Floral Park, Hempstead, Oceanside, Rockville Centre and Valley Stream. Consequently, the residents of the entire southern half of the county from Freeport westward have their maritime pleasures as much as do the residents of the southern half of Queens and of Brooklyn.

There is no property more in demand for home purposes than that in the areas contiguous to the ocean. This statement is borne out by the complete improvement of the ocean front of Brooklyn and Queens and the great structural work that has been accomplished at Long Beach, which forms the southern coast line of Nassau County. Improvements at Long Beach have not alone helped fee values there: they have, also, tended to strengthen property values throughout the whole area from Hempstead village on the north to Hempstead Bay on the south.

The southern half of the county is served by four divisions of the Long Island Railroad, three of which are operated by electricity, thus giving all of the level area of the county rapid communication with Manhattan and Brooklyn.

The increase in property values in Nassau County are greater than in any other county of the state outside of the counties forming Greater New York. In fact they are greater than in the county of Richmond and the circumstance is based on the direct train service between Nassau County and the Pennsylvania Terminal in Manhattan. Because of its adjacency to Queens borough, Nassau County is a residential offshoot of it. The same trolley roads serve both counties and this has resulted in making their interests practically identical.

Nassau County is becoming the detached residence section, and it is bound to maintain that structural character because it is removed from the city limits with consequent unlikelihood of infringement by rows of brick houses. The county is already the scene of operations by builders who in the past have built houses in the outlying sections of Brooklyn.

LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS.

The following action has been taken by Local Boards:

Washington Heights District.

Paving with granite block pavement on concrete foundation, curbing and recurbing Academy street from the end of the present pavement, about 210 feet south of Nagle avenue, to 201st street. Estimated cost, $15,250. Assessed valuation of property within probable assessment area, $390,000. The street has been legally opened and all sub-structure surfaces provided.—Resolution approved.

Murray Hill District.

Alteration and improvement to sewer in 32d street between Broadway and Fifth avenue. Considered on January 20, February 3 and February 17. Estimated cost, $14,200. Assessed valuation of property, $20,798.—No quorum.

Harlem District.

Alteration and improvement to sewer in 144th street between First and Pleasant avenues. Laid over on February 17 until this date. Estimated cost, $7,400. Assessed valuation of property, $862,500. —Laid over for two weeks.

Local Board of Chester.

(No. 1132). Regulating, grading, setting curbstones, flagging the sidewalks, laying crosswalks, building approaches and erecting fences where necessary in Mead street, from Garfield street to Unionport road, together with all work incidental thereto. Total estimated cost, $10,480, or $236 for each 25-foot lot. At the meeting of the local board, February 17, 1914, a resolution was adopted approving a petition for laying out on the city map Mead street, between Garfield street and White Plains avenue, at a width of fifty (50) feet.

(476-11) For amending resolution of local board adopted on April 8, 1913, which provided for the regulating, grading, setting curbstones, flagging sidewalks, laying crosswalks, building approaches and erecting fences where necessary in Fort Schuyler road, from the easterly terminus of the land acquired for West Farms road to Morris Lane, together with all work incidental thereto, so as to read as follows:

(1114) Regulating, grading, etc., in East 213th street, from Bronx Boulevard to Boston road, together with all work incidental thereto. Total estimated cost, $50,000, or $131 for each 25-foot lot.

(1127) Acquiring title to the lands necessary for Furman avenue, from Baychester avenue to East 239th street.

Kips Bay District.

Paving with granite block pavement 57th street from the bulkhead line of the East River to a point about 160 feet westerly. Laid over on February 17, at which time the representatives of the owners of property on both the north and south sides of 37th street agreed that if the matter of paving was deferred for one year they would offer no further objection. At the same time they agreed to file letters to this effect with the Borough President.—Laid over for two weeks.

—If a defective county clerk's certificate escapes the closer of a title and the notice of the recording officer, and thus gets on the record, the tile is declared unmarketable. Good laws perhaps but mighty poor business just the same.—Real Estate Bulletin.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

With nearly all sections of the city contributing to the business and with a revival of building activity indicated by the large increase in the number of plans filed for new buildings and alterations, this week's market was not without encouraging elements. In Manhattan the sales involved mostly inconspicuous and commonplace properties. Big deals involving high class holdings were few, but the small investor was in evidence in the growing number of transactions reported in all the boroughs. Important sales of the week involved a row of old buildings in West 30th street, which are to be replaced by a loft structure and a big plot on Washington Heights obtained by operators. The beginning of the renting season was not marked by any particular activity, although commercial leases in the midtown and uptown sections were prominent.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 31, as against 34 last week and 38 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 6, compared with 13 last week, and 8 a year ago.

AUCTION SALES OF WEEK.

Except where otherwise stated, the properties offered were in foreclosure. Adjournments of legal sales to next week are noted under Advertised Legal Sales.

* Indicates that the property described was bid in for the plaintiff's account.

The Auction Market.

Out of twenty-five offerings at the Manhattan and Bronx exchange sales rooms this week, fifteen were bought by plaintiffs, seven were withdrawn or adjourned, and only three went to outside bidders. The Rudolph Wallach Company purchased a West Side tenement offered at voluntary sale on a bid of $60,000, which is $24,000 less than the assessed valuation. The Manhattan Life Insurance Company, as plaintiff, obtained for $199,000, the apartment house at the northeast corner of Fifth avenue and 126th street, assessed at $250,000. A lack of outside bidders at the auction sales has been noticeable for a long time, and as a consequence, bidding is listless and confined mainly to parties in interest.

For the coming week the auctioneers will present the usual assortment of miscellaneous properties in various sections of the city, tenements comprising the bulk of the offerings. Among the more important properties to be sold is the seven-story loft building at the northeast corner of Madison avenue and 48th street; also the five-story loft building at 13 Lispenard street, and a vacant block front in West 137th street, between Edgecombe and St. Nicholas avenues.

DEPARTMENTAL RULINGS.

DEPARTMENT OF WATER SUPPLY, GAS AND ELECTRICITY.

(City of New York.)

In an effort to secure a standard interpretation of the switchboard wiring requirements contained in Rule 2-b, 3d and 4th paragraphs of the Electrical Code of the City of New York, the Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity has established the following ruling:

Where a tight non-combustible outer cover is required, compliance with Rule No. 2-b will be deemed to have been secured if asbestos tape is wound helically over the inflammable outer braiding, then wrapped with light twine or heavy pack thread, and then painted with soluble glass; or if a braided asbestos tubing is drawn over the insulated wires and secured in place at the ends by means of twine or pack thread and then painted with soluble glass.

It should be noted that in either case care must be taken to leave about two inches of the inflammable braiding free from this fireproofing covering at lugs and terminal connections, and also to keep the flam-proofed wires away from all live metal parts.

ELEVATOR TRAFFIC CONGESTION IN TALL BUILDINGS, AND HOW THE PROBLEM MAY BE SOLVED.

By HERMANN GUMPEL, Consulting Engineer, Chicago.

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager for the American Real Estate Co.

TO find a remedy for elevator traffic congestion, the most objectionable feature of the tall building situation, it is necessary to realize the causes and then attack the evil at its roots. Since neither the books nor the occasional articles published on this subject completely explain the underlying conditions, some further public discussion of this question might be helpful toward solving the problem.

Traffic Observations.

Out of hundreds of elevator traffic observations, taken in New York City and Chicago, I select at random the following from the First National Bank Building in Chicago:

No. of observations.	t	n	N	D
1	115	8	12	April 1, 1912—9 a. m.
2	110	8	8	" "
6	101	9	14	Dec. 4, 1912—5 p. m.

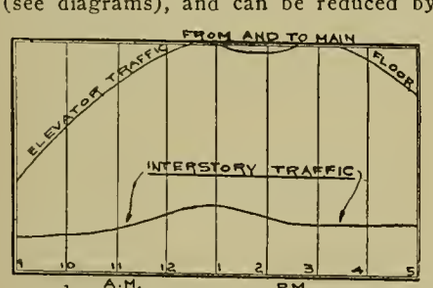
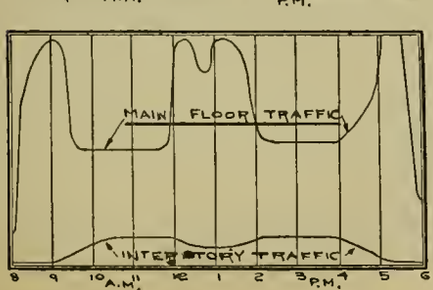
t—Round-trip time in seconds, without time for landing and loading at main floor.

n—Number of stops without stop at main floor.

N—Number of passengers carried to and from main floor.



D—Date and time of observation.



There is no regularity or even a constant proportion between the round-trip time, the number of passengers carried and the number of intermediate stops. All these quantities are dependent on a combination of conditions, which cannot be taken care of by conclusions based merely on an average of any number of observations. They do not yield to calculation, no matter how deeply we indulge in mathematics.

Interstory Traffic.

The interstory elevator traffic diagramatically shown here, taken with the main floor traffic, is the most changeable and uncertain quantity. Whenever it occurs during rush time, it is decidedly disturbing to the maintenance of good elevator service. Interstory passengers frequently emerge from the back of a crowded car, while leaving, thus lengthening the time of a stop. The new Equitable Life Building will have special elevators for interstory traffic, and these will materially assist in improving the service during rush time (in case they are used exclusively for this purpose) by not stopping at the main floor at all.

The amount of interstory traffic is varying in different kinds of buildings (see diagrams), and can be reduced by local arrangements, such as by having toilet rooms on all floors of office buildings. The influence of interstory traffic on the round-trip time can be studied by comparing Observation 2 of the table with Observation 7. In one case we have eight main floor passengers per trip and eight stops, but interstory traffic and consequently a round-trip time of 110 seconds; in the other case we have 14 main floor passengers and seven stops, and it takes only 94 seconds. If no interstory traffic takes place an "up" stop during rush time requires from 5 to 7 seconds, and a "down" stop from 4 to 5 seconds on an average.

Stops and Loads.

The following elements make up the additional time required by a stop in excess of the regular running time: (1) The period of acceleration and retardation. (2) The time for handling the operating equipment. (3) The time for opening and closing the gate. (4) The time required by the passengers leaving or entering the car. The first three amounts are constant in any particular case, partly simultaneous and will practically not change, whether one, two, three or twelve passengers are leaving or entering the car. The fourth quantity mentioned does not change in proportion to the passengers leaving or entering, and is greatly depending on the movements of the passengers relative to each other, while leaving the car at intermediate floors.

A large number of combinations are possible. For instance, there may be four stops and four passengers at each stop, and consequently 16 passengers per trip, or eight stops and two passengers at each stop, and again 16 passengers altogether per trip. This actually occurs, as the above table demonstrates. In the first case, with only four stops, the round-trip time will be shorter as in the second with eight stops, and yet we carry the same number of passengers. It will readily be seen there is no such thing as a fixed and constant proportion between the number of passengers carried and the round-trip time. Consequently, to run elevators only half filled in buildings would not relieve the situation, but even would be harmful. I still venture to say that "an hour's test during rush time with only half-filled cars and in a fairly rented building would disprove this rule."

How to Avoid Congestion.

If arrangements would be made so as automatically to give an elevator operator a signal, either optical or accoustical, as soon as he is exceeding his normal and economical round-trip time, possibly in connection with such a traffic regulating system as that installed in the Woolworth Building, this would decidedly benefit the service.

It must well be kept in mind that a car that is returning too late to its terminal at the main floor during rush time is delaying all the other cars in the same battery, thus making the building's most valuable equipment useless during moments when it is the most urgently needed.

Overcrowded cars should be avoided by all means, if only for the reason that they are conducive to accidents by rendering it extremely difficult for an operator to fulfill his duty properly.

To remedy elevator traffic congestions and to make reasonable provision for an emergency such as fire or panic is simply a matter of increasing the floor capacity of the elevator equipment. This cannot be done by increasing the platform of each individual elevator, unless we have only two terminals, as in theatres, subways and lecture halls. The width and depth of the car has to be kept within reasonable proportions. In such buildings as we have reference to in this article either additional one-story elevators or double-deck cars, serving two floors at one single stop and consequently reducing the round-trip time by reducing the number of possible stops, can fill the requirement.

Calculate for Maximum Conditions.

To arrive at satisfactory results, the elevator capacity necessary for a well served building should be calculated for maximum conditions, such as occur during rush hours. In all other lines of engineering we are guided in our calculations by maximum conditions, considering that in spite of an occasional drop in efficiency (as will always occur in real practice) our arrangement will prove satisfactory under any state of circumstances. Maximum elevator traffic conditions for a building under design, can be predetermined from experience and service observations in existing buildings under similar predicaments.

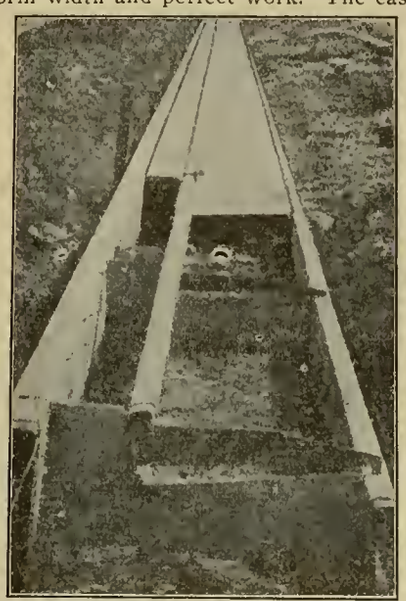
However, it remains undisputed that double-deck elevators are the only logical solution of the elevator traffic congestion problem in tall buildings, a solution equally fair to owners as well as to tenants, since the installation of further one-story equipment than at present customary would reduce the profits on the investment on account of the further reduction of the amount of valuable space in the building.

An Automatic Sprinkler Record.

The value of automatic sprinklers as a means of extinguishing fires is shown by the record made by them at the plant at Bush Terminal.

This plant, consisting of ten loft factory buildings, two hundred warehouses and seven steamship piers, is thoroughly protected by automatic sprinklers. In a period of seven years, 30 fires have occurred in these various buildings. Sixteen of these were in factories, 9 in storehouses, and 5 on the piers. In all, 239 sprinkler heads opened in these fires, the maximum number at any one fire being 29. The average number of sprinklers opening at each fire in factories was 3.6, in storehouses, 12.3, and on the piers, 14. Eight of the factory fires and one of the storehouse fires were extinguished by one sprinkler; 14 of the factory fires and 4 of the storehouse and one of the pier fires were extinguished by 5 sprinklers or less, while only 2 of the factory fires and 5 storehouse and 4 pier fires required more than 5 sprinklers for their extinction. In each case the fire was extinguished without calling into service the public fire department.

Building Managers' Dinner.



New York Building Managers' Association will meet at dinner on April 7, when matters of interest to the organization will be discussed at length. The dinner will be held instead of the regular monthly meeting. A. J. Bleeker, chairman of the dinner committee, said last week that no place has been designated, but that undoubtedly the dinner will be held at one of the downtown restaurants, convenient to those members who reside in the suburban sections. Among those who have been invited to attend are several not at present associated with the organization, but whom it is expected to interest in the work undertaken by the association.

USEFUL APPLIANCES

Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration.

A Keyless Concrete Form.

BUILDERS doing concrete sidewalk construction work will find in the Hotzel form several novelties that may appeal to them. In the first place, its operation does not involve the use of keys, bolts or wedges, thus insuring uniform width and perfect work. The ease with which the forms can be set up and taken down is the second large factor in its favor. It may be used for sidewalks, steps, walls, piles, sewers, bridges and foundations. It is manufactured by the Hetzel Steel Form & Iron Works, of Warren, Ohio. The illustration shows the form in service for continuous curb and gutter construction.

An Automatic Adjusting Wrench.

QUICK repairs about a building sometimes save large sums of money. For instance, suppose the packing in a radiator valve blows out in an apartment or richly furnished office. Escaping steam and water can take the lining out of an entire maintenance account unless you have some man in the repair department that is as quick with his tools as he is with his head and hands. Now suppose that the man is equal to the emergency, but the tools with which he has been supplied are out of date. Under such conditions damage cost runs up in exact pace with the anger and contempt of the irate tenant.

There is no very definite information at hand whether the man who perfected the automatic nut wrench being introduced by the Cochran Pipe Wrench Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, found the uncontrollable temper of an irate tenant the necessity that proved to be the mother of his invention, but the fact remains that this company has a wrench that ought to stop the flow of steam, wrath or water as quickly as human hand and brain can do it.

As shown in the cut, the moveable jaw is attached to a short rack. This engages a few teeth on the swiveled end of the handle. By placing the movable jaw against the near side of the nut and pulling on the handle it is evident that a very tight grip is obtained on the nut without preliminary adjustment; thus the ordinary thumb screw adjustment of a monkey wrench is eliminated.

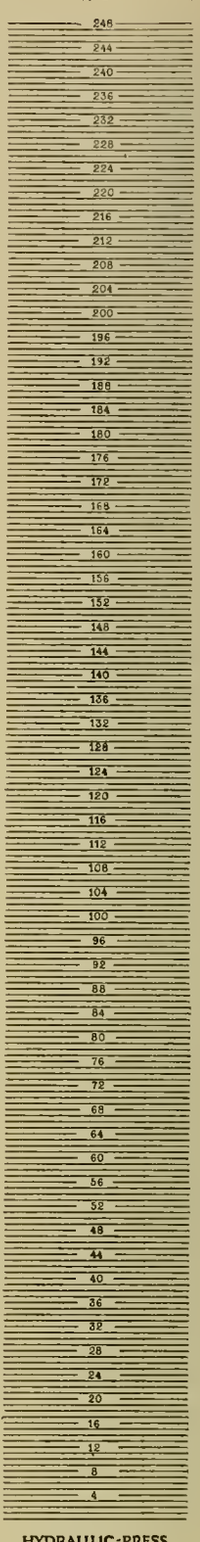
Electric Lamp Sticks to Glass.

HISTORIANS say that the cave dwellers lived by the simple rule of daylight and darkness. When night came they went to sleep and were up with the first streak of dawn. They needed and used no light. But when they became civilized they began to reason that Manitou, the Great Spirit of the North American Indians, would not feel offended if they extended their day a little and so the flaming pine knot come into vogue.

Now the great advantage of living in a cave centered in the fact that the living room usefulness was not confined only to the radius from which the light fell from a center chandelier. The soft clay walls permitted the convenience of sticking the pine knot into the wall wherever the light was most needed. Whether or not that was the beginning of American night life which culminated in the Great White Way history does not enlighten us, but the Wallace Novelty Company, of 299 Madison avenue, supplies a hint that at least links the pine knot of five thousand years ago with the white light of the present one thousand nine hundred and fourteen earthly revolutions around the sun in the Christian era, and provides the incandescent bulb that will stay put if stuck on the side of the present day cave dweller's apartment.

Fact is, the base and light may be stuck onto the surface of a glass mirror or window pane and it will stay put in a most uncanny manner. On the under side of this device as shown in the illustration, is a suction cup by means of which it will stay put on any non-porous surface. It cannot be jolted off a reading table, nor off a shelf on a rocking boat or in a swerving automobile. Furthermore it can be carried in a handgrip.

It consists of a bulb, and an adjustable and removable shade that fits any size or style bulb, a hook for hanging, an automatic clamp, a rubber suction cup, a silk cord and the base. When assembled it is twelve inches high and weighs one pound and a half. The shade is perfectly adjustable and can be instantly removed. When in place, the light can be thrown at any angle. The ten feet of silk cord, patent base and socket can be attached to any fixture in home or office, and when not in use the cord winds up in the hollow base of the lamp and thus prevents tangling and kinking.



Renewable Cartridge Fuses.

THERE is no necessity in this day of inventive genius for buying a new fuse every time one blows. The Economy Fuse and Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, is putting on the market a renewable cartridge fuse that has virtues that building managers should know about. Its general appearances are shown in the cut, but more particularly it may be described as providing a practical method of reducing the fuse maintenance expense to a ridiculous minimum. Another important feature is that they never vent fire or hold a sustained arc, hence they are said to be absolutely safe. Instead of the usual heavy expense incidental to the blowing of a fuse, a new fusible link is inserted. These links cost a mere trifle.

Brick Tables for Architects.

ANOTHER ingenious device for lightening the monotony of the drawing board is being distributed by the Hydraulic Press Brick Co., of St. Louis. The device is in the form of a brick scale and tables for working same all bound in durable green cloth board.

The complete set consists of fifteen scales, general form of which is shown in the accompanying illustration. These scales are arranged according to different brick thicknesses and mortar joints covering practically all ranges. The explanatory book tables, which accompany the scales are designed to aid in eliminating as far as possible the labor, which is incident to the draughtman's preparation of drawings for a brick structure.

Too often the designer has been deterred from the use of an otherwise very desirable bond and pattern by the real difficulties that lie in adjusting the brick units to the wall dimensions and has thus lost one of the finest and subtlest artistic effects which legitimately come within the range of his profession. The scales are tables which are the result of matured architectural experience, having been prepared by M. P. McArdle, of St. Louis, with the express purpose of meeting this situation and of rendering what has been heretofore an irksome task—the preparation of working drawings for ornamental bond—a genuine pleasure.

The scales, divided on the basis of ¼ inches to the foot are packed fifteen in number, eight for vertical and seven for horizontal measurements, and are meant to furnish the architectural draughtsman with a ready and convenient method of determining the number of courses and joints in all brickwork, using one brick and joint as a unit of measurement. The tables which accompany the scales indicate the necessary dimensions for height and length of any number of brick, including joints, and are calculated so as to provide each scale with its own corresponding table.

The eight vertical scales represent units, of one brick and joint, ranging from 2½ (the scale reproduced) to 3½ inches at ⅛ intervals, thus giving an opportunity to use a suitable scale to fit the height of brick and joint selected. In addition to the scales and its key there is an accompanying booklet done in a highly artistic manner that describes minutely the different classes of brick bond and types of mortar joints.

THE NEW STANDARD OF FIRE RESISTING CONSTRUCTION

What the Country's Leading Experts Have Approved as the Ideal Building Practice for Structures that Are Actually Fireproof.

IRA H. WOOLSON
Consulting Engineer, National Board of Fire Underwriters.

LIKE everything else, building construction must have a standard; but, strangely, there never has been in this country what properly could be called an ideal from which a standard specification could be drawn. Attempts have been made to determine by committee investigation, research and test, what would constitute a fireproof building only to find in the end that the word "fireproof" as applied to a building is an absolute term, and such a structure could not be built and be profitable as an investment.

For instance, the tombs beneath the Pyramids are fireproof, the vaults under the Woolworth and similar buildings are fireproof, but you cannot house a business or put a home underground and take from it all light and ventilation. Wherever there is combustible material and a strong draught and sufficient heat you will always find the danger of destruction by fire. So, for that reason, this committee has discarded the term "fireproof," as applied to a standard of building construction, because it is misleading. Instead, it has adopted the term "fire-resistive."

This term gives us a practicable basis upon which to work. We have materials that are fire-resistive, but we have none that under any and all conditions are positively proof against fire. The term fire-resistive is of course elastic, and it will doubtless become the duty of this committee to properly define the term so as to indicate the degree of resistance that would be proper to expect for different types of construction. The committee has taken that which it had at hand, and by assembling the materials under a standard that experience had shown to be sound has evolved a structure that is in the highest practical sense fire-resistive. In fact, the committee defines this "standard building" as one which will not only safeguard the lives of the occupants, but shall be so designed and equipped that the damage resulting from a fire from within or without shall be reduced to a minimum and that it shall be able to sustain a complete burn-out of its contents without serious injury to its structural members, irrespective of its occupancy, location, or efficiency of municipal protection.

These are requirements which the majority of our so-called "fireproof buildings" could not meet.

We have the gold dollar as a standard of currency, the pound as the standard of weight, and so on, but where is our standard of building construction? This committee has sought to supply it.

In arriving at this standard the committee has had data before it representing the best experience in pratically every department entering into building construction the world over. The result is that the specifications call for a building 100 per cent. good. It applies in its present form mainly to commercial buildings, but eventually will be modified to cover other classes of structures. The committee's purpose was to define a standard building applicable to any occupancy, leaving as much as possible the details of construction for special occupancy and special use or hazard to be determined by future committees as modifications of this standard.

The committee is of the opinion that a building of this fire-resistive class should be planned, built and equipped with materials that are incombusible, and with all its structural parts, such as walls, columns, floors and roofs, able to resist fire for at least four hours at an average temperature of 2,000° F. without serious structural damage. It must be so constructed that a fire will be confined to the space in which it originates, and the building be protected against exterior fire by approved doors and windows or other approved devices. Ample and safe means of egress must be provided in such a building for all occupants, and finally the building shall be equipped with such apparatus that a fire can be extinguished in its incipient stage.

WE present the first of two installments of an interview with Ira H. Woolson, consulting engineer to the National Board of Fire Underwriters and chairman of the National Committee on Fire Resistive Construction in the National Fire Protection Association which last year drafted a standard or ideal for a fire-resistive building intended to be able to resist a fire temperature of 2,000 degrees F. for four consecutive hours. In other words, the purpose of the investigation has been to determine what should or should not go into a building to make it fireproof in the accepted meaning of the word. This committee consists at present of Ira H. Woolson, E. T. Cairns, G. W. Cleveland, J. E. Curtis, Julius Francke, Richard L. Humphrey, Robert Palm, A. C. Patton, G. W. Riddle, W. G. Sanderson, Walter Smedley, A. P. Stradling, Mason R. Strong, Henry V. Thayer, J. Foster Warner, W. F. Bellinger, P. H. Bovier, Rudolph P. Miller and W. F. Oatman. The specifications have been drawn for the construction of a standard building. At the next annual meeting of the association, which will be held in Chicago in May, this committee plans to make further report upon this subject. It proposes to make further general specifications adapted to buildings for special use, and eventually it hopes to outline the fundamental features of fire-resistive construction that should control the erection of buildings in all the important classes. It is the forerunner of the higher type of commercial building of tomorrow, and as such it has a vital interest for every architect, builder, investor and construction financier. It will be concluded in next week's issue.

The Standard Specifications.

This standard building may be constructed to comply with any of the types where all loads are carried on walls; where there are exterior bearing walls and interior bearing columns and where all loads are carried on a protected structural skeleton of steel or reinforced concrete. The allowable floor loads and wind stresses and the quality of all materials used in the construction shall conform to the best engineering practice; all work, whether fireproofing or construction, shall be installed under the constant supervision of a competent and reliable inspector, and no combustible material will be used in the structure, partitions, or finish.

The height of this ideal standard building from grade to roof-line, irrespective of its occupancy, is not to exceed 70 feet, unless the building is fully equipped with automatic sprinklers, in which case the height will not exceed 125 feet; nor will any standard building exceed a height of two and one-half times the width of the widest street upon which it is located.

The area within enclosing or firewalls will not exceed 7,500 square feet, with no dimension greater than 125 feet for a building without automatic sprinklers; or 20,000 square feet, unrestricted as to linear dimensions, for a building fully equipped with automatic sprinklers.

Stair exit consists of the direct connection of any floor area to an approved stairway built in conformity with the specifications hereafter detailed, either as an enclosed interior staircase, or a smokeproof tower. The horizontal exit as a life saving device is provided as is the connection of any floor area through a fire exit partition, fire wall, or an open-air balcony or vestibule to another floor area in the same or an adjoining building having its own independent stair exits: the other area must be of sufficient size to contain temporarily the joint occupancy of the two areas thus joined, allowing not less than five square feet of unobstructed floor space per person.

Exits Required.

Every floor area in this ideal building shall have at least two separate exits, and whenever any floor area exceeds 10,000 square feet at least one additional exit shall be provided. The occupants of every floor above the first will be provided with exits computed on the basis of at least 22 inches of width for every fourteen persons for stair exits, or 22 inches in width for every fifty persons for horizontal exits. At least one of the exits provided for every such floor area will be a stair exit. No reduction in width of exit stairway or passageway required by these rules will be permitted at any subsequent point in the direction of exit travel.

Exits shall be remote from each other, and no point of any floor area shall be more than 100 feet distant from an exit. Whenever any building is more than four stories high, and has an occupancy greater than twenty-five people above the fourth floor, then each floor area shall be connected either directly to a smokeproof tower, or indirectly through a horizontal exit to such smokeproof tower.

In the matter of foundation walls, they shall be built of hard burned brick laid in cement mortar, or of concrete, and shall have a thickness 4 inches greater than the wall next above. Exterior walls shall be impervious to water, or be adequately waterproofed. Retaining walls, if built of stone, must be plastered on the exposed side with ¾ inch of cement mortar and all exterior, interior, party and fire walls will be built of hard burned brick, laid with flush joints of cement mortar, or of reinforced concrete. Veneered walls are not permitted. All party or lot line walls shall extend 3 feet above the roof as a parapet, shall be the full minimum thickness, and shall be properly coped.

Fire walls shall be continuous from foundation to 3 feet above roof level and be coped; except that interior walls need not extend above roof. No exterior wall shall be less than 12 inches thick; no party wall or fire wall shall be less than 16 inches thick, and no ducts, chases, or flues shall be permitted within the minimum required thickness of a wall.

The maximum percentage of openings allowed in any exterior wall shall not exceed 40 per cent. of its superficial area per story. If a bearing wall is punctured 40 per cent. of its superficial area, the wall will not be less than the following thicknesses: The top story, 12 inches, next three stories below, 16 inches; following two stories, 20 inches.

There shall be not less than 5 feet of wall between openings in a vertical line, and the minimum distance between adjacent wall openings shall be 20 inches. Exterior window openings will not exceed 45 square feet in area, and no single dimension shall exceed 9 feet. No window opening shall be less than one foot from the ceiling surface. Openings in fire walls shall not exceed 80 square feet in area. No fire wall shall have more than three openings in any story, and the distance between adjacent openings shall be not less than 9 feet.

All walls must be securely anchored and bonded at points where they meet. When supported by skeleton structural framework they must be properly anchored and bonded.

(To be concluded.)

TRADE LITERATURE

Toch's Red Book Out.

Toch Brothers, 320 Fifth avenue, have just issued an attractive edition of their "Red Book" entitled, "The Check to Dampness." It contains valuable data for the architect, engineer and builder who wishes to keep posted on the latest developments in materials for the preservation and decoration of every type of building construction.

Toch Brothers for years have been inventors and manufacturers of technical and scientific paints, enamels, varnishes, etc., and this book is replete with data pertaining to materials which are proof against all destructive agencies—acids, alkalies, electrolysis, locomotive fumes, etc., and, in addition, contains authoritative data on the integral waterproofing of dry docks, tunnels, swimming pools, reservoirs; also the treatment of cement floors in warehouses, automobile plants, loft buildings, power houses, public and private buildings.

Different surfaces, different climates, and different conditions of application, require different "R. I. W." paints and compositions. No one paint or composition is equal to all conditions. "R. I. W." paints of special composition and manufacture are used for plastering upon; for stain and damp-proofing limestone, granite, marble, etc.; for resisting the fumes of acids and alkalies in factories, laboratories, etc.; and for preserving steel of different types subjected to various corrosive agencies.

N. Y. Belting Catalogue.

Reflecting the high grade of the goods it manufactures, the 1914 catalogue of the New York Belting and Packing Company of 91 and 93 Chambers street, is ready for distribution. The book deals with all kinds of mechanical rubber goods and its interesting illustrations showing the operation of manufacturing the rubber commodities in the Passaic mills lends to the book a didactic value that makes it a most desirable work to have on reference shelves.

Workmen's Compensation Statute—Employers Will Use Stock Companies.

How the new workmen's compensation law in New York is calculated to increase the business of the stock casualty companies in spite of the fact that the labor interests, which were so prominent in the drafting of the bill, decreed otherwise, was pointed out at a meeting of the Barebones' Alumni Association by Julian Lucas, Jr., of Davis, Dorland & Co.

Mr. Lucas has made a study of workmen's compensation laws, both in this country and abroad, and has at his finger tips the features of the various State laws.

He does not believe, according to the Insurance Press, that the Glynn law, now being repassed by the 1914 Legislature to avoid any taints of unconstitutionality, leaves much to be desired as compared with other compensation laws that have been effective in Michigan, New Jersey and Massachusetts. He predicted that the exceptionally high payments which must be made to injured employes and the expensive commission with high salaries which is to administer this law will result in driving industries from New York to neighboring States.

Regarding the State fund itself, Mr. Lucas analyzed the conflicting provisions of the law and expressed the opinion that an employer would be foolish to trust to take out his compensation in the State fund, as indications are that there will be no practical insurance men on the industrial commission having charge of this fund, and, in addition, the insurance department is specifically exempted from supervision over the rates of the commission.

Inadequate Rates.

Mr. Lucas said that it was more than likely that the rates promulgated by the commission would be inadequate, and in the end there would be a deficiency in the fund which would have to be taken, very probably, later from the State treasury. As to mutual companies, Mr. Lucas said that he did not believe many would be organized, as the possibility of heavy assessments in case of catastrophies would make it hazardous for the big employers who are members of a mutual. In fact, one catastrophe similar to the Triangle Shirtwaist Company's fire, when nearly 150 lives were lost, would put a mutual out of business. The law was particularly vague as to assessments in mutual companies.

Referring to the provision of the law which requires employers to give satisfactory evidence that they can pay the compensation of their employes in case of injury, he said he did not believe there would be many employers who would dare to trust themselves, or that the State commission would trust, to handle a matter of this kind.

Another feature of the Glynn law which will make business for the stock liability companies, he asserted, is that which restricts compensation payments to 42 hazardous trades. In many industries where there is a variety of trades engaged, it would be absolutely necessary, as recently pointed out by Insurance Superintendent Emmet, for the employer to have both workmen's compensation and employers' liability insurance. This is because the law does not impose workmen's compensation upon every industry, as is the case in most States where a similar statute has been adopted.

This would mean that an employer who went into the State fund for his hazardous employment would have to secure employers' liability insurance from the stock casualty companies, as the State fund contains no provision for providing employers' liability protection.

Another strong feature which will redound to the advantage of the stock companies is the fact that they have the experience running over a period of years of workmen's compensation payments in other States.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

BIG INCREASE IN NUMBER OF PLANS FILED IN BROOKLYN AND QUEENS BOROUGHS THIS WEEK—HARDWOOD PRICES STEADIER.

Only Slight Improvement in Inquiry for Structural Commodities—Brick Firmer.

BUILDING plans filed this week in Greater New York showed a decided improvement for the better. The greatest development was shown in the boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens. Comparing the week ending March 12 with the week ending March 19, we find the following difference in new building plans filed.

BROOKLYN.

No.	Cost.	No.	Cost
67	$768,210	138	$1,134,200

Such a gain as this under the weather conditions featuring the week ending March 19, is gratifying. It reflects in part, at least, the constantly improving inquiry for building materials that has been reported to this department during the last six weeks. The general character of the construction indicates, as shown in the classified reports of the construction department of this issue, that money is not being held so tightly and, further, that the spring renting season now at approximately its height, has developed the strength that investors had hoped for. In consequence, they are getting ready to meet the demand for new buildings that will develop by the time the fall renting season comes around.

But it would improve much faster if money would ease up a little more readily. The prevailing rate of interest on bond and mortgage is still too high to permit full freedom in new building projection, and until money is easier no one need expect an entirely free movement of materials here in the metropolitan district.

The assurances given unofficially by the Interstate Commerce Commission to the effect that a report will be ready on the application of the Eastern railroads for a five per cent. increase in freight rates sometime before the turn of the first half of the year, is the foundation upon which big building material business, like steel, clay products and cement, hope that the last half of 1914 will prove to be prolific of large building orders. It has been said that if this increase in rates is permitted the railroads will spend vast sums of money for improvements. This will, in turn, open up myriads of mills which will have to hire more help. When money is flowing freely into investment channels high interest rates fall, building money is more readily obtainable on sound projects, providing there is a demand.

As for the demand, assurances from real estate interests are that the last renting season was an active one and that the coming spring removals will be exceptionally heavy. The serving of fire prevention law and labor violations on many owners will prompt many to rebuild rather than go to the great expense of remodelling their structures, according to the opinion of many realty men, with the result that the building movement will be large just so soon as the money situation is relieved from the present adverse pressure.

GLASS PRICES HELD STIFFLY.

Manufacturers Will Close Down Rather Than Further Shade Lists.

THE slight improvement that developed this week in the window glass department of the building material market came in the nick of time. Manufacturers have been crowded on their price lists by Eastern distributors who thought the market could be beared to further discounts, but without avail. The manufacturers freely state that their only alternative is to close the mills rather than to further cut prices. An officer in one of the large glass distributing companies here asked:

"What is the use of further shading prices? The building movement cannot develop until money loosens, and money will not ease up until the railroads get more money to spend. It may seem a far cry from building construction to railroading, but the two are very closely related in financial circles. The slight increase they ask for will mean more to the prosperity of the whole building season, glass department included, than all the proclamations, protestations and preachments that could be uttered. We need national confidence, and if the railroads are not confident, all lines suffer. I consider the building situation of the entire country entirely within the hands of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Much as I dislike to say it, we will close down rather than cut our prices further because no matter how much we shade our lists we cannot artificially create prosperity by establishing unprofitable prices."

THE HARDWOOD MARKET.

Prices Steadier at Mill Centers with Less List Shading.

PRICES, in both pine and hardwoods, are steadier than they have been for some time. There is still some price cutting in isolated cases where the seller needs the money bad enough to sell at a sacrifice, but the trend of the market is distinctly in an upward direction.

The hardwood market has shown some increase in inquiry during the last fortnight, but it has averaged on the whole about the same as the preceding two weeks. Consuming interests are beginning to buy with slightly more liberality, but the demand from this source is expected to show only a steady increase. Mill operations are moving with a fair degree of regularity, and several new operations have recently been put into action.

The demand for oak, on the whole, has shown somewhat of a decrease, but plain red seems to be more active. Gum is picking up to some extent both in mill demand and in local requirements. Other items in the hardwood market appear to be about at a standstill. It is reported from hardwood centers that numerous orders are being rejected on account of unsatisfactory prices offered, indicating a faith in the future of the market which bodes well.

Yellow pine interests have been among those most seriously affected by the untoward weather.

LIME AND CEMENT SPECIFICATIONS.

Committee B-5 of the American Society of Engineering Contractors Reports.

C. W. BOYNTON, chairman of Committee B-5 on Standard Specifications for Lime and Cement, of the American Society of Engineering Contractors, has submitted for his committee the following report, which will be of interest to readers of this department of the Record and Guide.

"A Committee of the American Society for Testing Materials has the subject of limes specifications under consideration at the present time. This committee has had the cooperation of various active members of the National Lime Manufacturers' Association of the United States Bureau of Standards. Your committee recommends that no action be taken in regard to specifications for lime until such time as the above mentioned committee has submitted its report.

"The Standard Specifications for Cement of the American Society for Testing Materials, which requires that all tests shall be made in accordance with the methods proposed by the Committee on Uniform Tests of Cement of the American Society of Civil Engineers, is recommended for consideration by the Society.

"In an executive order of President Taft, dated April 30, 1912, Portland cement purchased after that date by any department, bureau, office or independent establishment of the Government, or that may be used in construction work connected with any of the aforesaid branches of the Government service, is required to conform to the specifications known as the United States Government specification for Portland cement, adopted by the Departmental Conference, February 13, 1912. This specification is also recommended for consideration by the Society."

The Government specification requires that the cement shall be tested in accordance with the standard methods described in the specification. The standard specifications of the American Society for Testing Materials include specifications for natural and Portland cement. The United States Government specifications covers only Portland cement. The requirements of the two specifications in regard to Portland cement do not differ essentially one from the other.

Paragraph 1 of the American Society for Testing Materials' specifications, which covers sampling, reads as follows:

"Cement in barrels shall be sampled through a hole made in the head, or in one of the staves midway between the heads, by means of an auger or a sampling iron similar to that used by sugar inspectors; if in bags, the sample shall be taken from surface to centre. Cement in bins shall be sampled in such a manner as to represent fairly the contents of the bin. The number of samples taken shall be as directed by the engineer, who will determine whether the samples shall be tested separately or mixed.

"The samples shall be passed through a sieve having twenty meshes per lineal inch, in order to break up lumps and remove foreign material."

The provisions of the Government specification covering sampling are as follows:

"Sampling. 16. The selection of the samples for testing will be left to the engineer. The number of packages sampled and the quantity to be taken from each package will depend on the importance of the work, the number of tests to be made, and the facilities for making them.

"17. The samples should be so taken as to represent fairly the material, and, where conditions permit, at least one barrel in every fifty should be sampled. Before tests are made samples shall be passed through a sieve having twenty meshes per linear inch to remove foreign material. Samples shall be tested separately for physical qualities, but for chemical analysis mixed samples may be used. Every sample should be tested for soundness, but the number of tests for other qualities will be left to the discretion of the engineer."

The methods of testing recommended by the Special Committee on Uniform Tests of Cement of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and which are specified in the American Society for Testing Materials' specification, differ from the methods required by the Government specifications principally in regard to two of the tests, viz.: the method of determining the time of setting and the normal consistency. Briefly, the American Society's method for determining the time of setting and the normal consistency involves the use of the Vicat needle apparatus. In the Government method the normal consistency is determined by the ball method and the time of setting is determined by the standard Gillmore needles.

The standard specifications for cement of the American Society for Testing Materials are printed together with the methods of testing recommended by the Special Committee on Uniform Tests of Cement of the American Society of Civil Engineers in pamphlet form.

Circular No. 33 of the Bureau of Standards, Department of Commerce and Labor, United States Government specifications for Portland cement, issued May 1, 1912, contains the Government specification and methods of testing.

COMMON BRICK STRENGTHENING.

Sudden Movement in Filing of Building Plans Starts Inquiry.

COMMON brick began to show more animation as a building commodity this week. Unloading was heavier than it has been at any time since the first of the year and prospective wholesale purchasing was felt as far ahead as May 15 for Hudsons and into June for Raritans. Prices are still steady at low levels, but there are evidences that a bear raid on selling figures is being planned in anticipation of the arrival of a new fleet of barges from up-river as soon as the ice breaks up. For that reason manufacturers have been advised not to crowd the market. The inquiry of the week was confined principally to Bronx and Manhattan, showing that these two boroughs tend toward a general relinquishment of new building plans as freely as Queens and Brooklyn have in the last week.

Official transactions for Hudson common brick covering the week ending Thursday, March 19, in the wholesale market, with comparisons for the corresponding period last year and a comparative statement of Hudson brick unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS GUIDE.

CENTRAL REAL ESTATE IN LARGE CITIES

Importance of Having a Thorough Knowledge of the Properties — Long Term Leases—Shops on Second Floors—Rentals Rising and Store Spaces Contracting.

By JOHN H. SINBERG, of Philadelphia*

BECAUSE central real estate has been my specialty during the past ten years, I shall confine myself to central real estate and try to tell you some of the things which in my opinion are necessary for success in that very important branch.

First and foremost I place thoroughness. The broker must know the deal which he is working from beginning to end; know the property, its size, its assessment, its location, its incumbrances, its value as compared with other properties in the same block and with similar buildings in the immediate vicinity. He must study the history of the property and its enhancement or depreciation in value. In other words, he cannot know too much about any plot of real estate that he is trying to sell, buy or lease.

Second, a central real estate broker must have a wide acquaintance among men of affairs and a general knowledge of merchants, their business methods and reason for their success. He must be a student of human nature as well as a close observer of the tendency of the times. He must study neighborhoods, watch the growth and improvements of various neighborhoods in the city, so as to give proper advice to his clients to take advantage of enhancements in value.

Salesmanship a Boon.

If the real estate broker has the knack of salesmanship, he is sure to succeed. The shrewd broker is he who studies the wants of his clients and submits properties that he knows should attract them. A great many real estate buyers have what I would call real estate temperament. They have intuitive confidence in brick and mortar or vacant land and prefer it to other forms of investment.

The real estate broker who is thoroughly posted on central leases can frequently make a big profit by reason of his knowledge. Tenants of large properties are sometimes short-sighted. They let their leases run too close to the end of the term before taking up negotiations for a renewal. Occasionally they begin such negotiations too late. Here is an instance:

About ten years ago the lease on one of the biggest specialty stores in the central part of Philadelphia had five years to run. An enterprising firm had occupied the building for a number of years and it had become a well-established and popular store. A real estate broker kept in touch with this lease and when he learned that it had but a short time to run he purchased the property. He then told the tenant of his purchase and served notice on him to move at the expiration of his term. You can readily see what happened. The tenant could not afford to go elsewhere, as moving would practically have meant going out of business. He was obliged to buy the property from the broker and pay him a big profit. Had the tenant employed a broker seven or eight years prior to the expiration of his lease, to buy the property or negotiate a new long-term lease, he would have saved himself a small fortune.

Exclusive Listing.

Just as soon as owners realize that it is for their best interests to place the handling of their property in the hands of one exclusive broker, that much sooner will the sale and rental of properties increase everywhere. At the present time a great many owners prefer to place their properties in the hands of several brokers. Under this system, the usefulness of the real estate broker is greatly reduced, and real estate often becomes a drug on the market and its value impaired because of lack of competent methods of bringing the buyer and seller or lessor and lessee in touch with each other. The trouble with a great many real estate brokers lies in the fact that they have not backbone enough to back up their opinions. One intelligent, hustling broker is worth a dozen poor ones.

When an owner brings a property to a broker, the broker should refuse to put it on his list at an exaggerated price. After he accepts a piece of property to sell, he should sell it. He must have a thorough knowledge of all properties for sale on his list, and he ought not to undertake at one time to handle more properties than he is sure he can sell or give honest effort towards selling.

The broker should occupy the same position towards the owners of property as does a lawyer. He should be trusted as implicitly as a lawyer. Some people have been known to employ two or three lawyers to do the same work, but have usually been sorry for it.

An owner of property who wishes to sell it should not have a number of brokers working at cross purposes, each making concessions in the hope of closing a sale before some competitor. My experience has shown that the owner who makes one broker his exclusive agent for the sale or renting of his properties invariably gets satisfactory results.

Central Leases.

The subject of central property leasing is one that needs a great deal of discussion in Philadelphia, because the brokers have overlooked its vital importance to the development and prosperity of the real estate business. It is a well-known fact that central leasing in New York, Chicago, many Western cities and in Europe is a special branch of the real estate business and many brokers make a good living by confining themselves to it. The broker who does not know rental values of central properties, particularly in large cities, where values are constantly changing, is not well equipped to make sales, because he depends almost entirely on the values set by past sales and on hearsay information for his basis of values. He is not sure of his position because he knows nothing of the earning power of property through his own experience.

In Philadelphia, long leases were unheard of until about ten years ago and the tenant who secured a term of five years seemed satisfied. It required the coming of progressive merchants from other cities to Philadelphia to awaken the native business man to the importance of long leases, and now the demand is for terms of ten years and more. Frequently, it is necessary to go outside of Philadelphia to bring the right kind of tenants for central properties. It is the old story of the prophet in his own country. Many merchants fail to appreciate the value of vacant stores in the central portion of the city. It has been my personal experience that by going to New York and other cities, I have succeeded in bringing good tenants to Philadelphia. Among others, let me mention the Bedell Company, department store of New York, to whom I leased the entire five-story building at the southwest corner of 12th and Market streets, which for a great many years was occupied by one of the oldest and best known clothing firms. This is one of the best corners in Philadelphia. Yet it was vacant for seven months. Philadelphia merchants could not see its real value. I went to New York, brought Mr. Bedell over, and he instantly realized its value and signed a long term lease at what many merchants probably consider a high rental. Yet he feels that he has secured full value for his money.

In addition to getting big merchants from out of the city for central properties in Philadelphia, I find it quite profitable to go after smaller storekeepers as well.

Leasing Second Floors.

The Boston Shoe Market Company has made a new departure in retail merchandising in Philadelphia. Upon learning that this concern was looking for a location, I went to Boston and interviewed the president. When he heard the prevailing central rents, he was astounded and made up his mind to stay out of Philadelphia. However, when he explained to me that he was selling sample shoes at what seemed to me ridiculously low prices, I ventured the suggestion that a second floor might prove profitable. Like the up-to-date business man that he is, he decided to experiment and signed a five-year lease with an option to vacate at the end of the first year if business did not warrant his staying longer. He took a second floor in Market street which had a frontage of 70 feet and a depth of 200 feet. He had two stairways and an elevator. He advertised in the newspapers that by reason of his second floor location and consequent low rental he was able to give good value at reduced prices. The shopping public came and saw—the Boston merchant conquered. He is now in his third year and has made a big success.

To my mind, that is the solution of second floors of central properties and it is only a question of time before owners will appreciate this fact and improve their second floors in such a way as to enable merchants to do a retail business in them.

A great many men, who ought to know what they are talking about, have repeatedly said that Market street values have reached the limit; that rents are too high; that there will be many failures and that the landlord would be the loser. Yet, the years roll on and Market street is getting better, rents are higher, and the merchants are prospering. True, specialty stores no longer have 25-foot fronts. Ten years ago no merchant on Market street would have been satisfied with a store that had a frontage of less than 25 to 30 feet. To-day many merchants do a thriving business with considerably less window display.

Getting Along With Less.

The modern shop-keeper is accommodating himself to the trend of the times. In Philadelphia, as in all growing cities throughout the United States, as well as in London and Paris, the merchant is paying higher rents, is getting along with smaller space—but remains on the main thoroughfare—the street which is traversed by the shopping public. Of course, the merchant who has a store 10 feet front by 50 feet in depth must sell merchandise that appeals to the masses.

The Investment Feature.

Successful investment in central real estate largely depends on anticipation of the line of increase in value and the taking advantage of either short-sightedness or the necessity which forces central properties in the market. A man may be impelled to look after the basic value of his stock investments and sometimes find it missing. When he puts his money into lands and houses, he can be quite sure that this land and houses will be there when he looks at them. But, if he has the good judgment to pick out real estate in the growing section of a live community, he can add to the quality and stability almost a certainty of profit.

Study thoroughly the neighborhood in which you are about to invest; and, if you have made up your mind that it will enhance in value, buy and improve; because every improvement which you make to your own property will help to improve the immediate vicinity and to increase the value of your own holdings.

CLEARING THE WAY FOR WEST SIDE SUBWAY

Widening of Varick Street—Speeding Other Subway Work—More Bids Soon To Be Called For—Public Service Board Needs More Power.

A NEW Seventh avenue, from West Broadway north to Central Park, will soon be a reality for the business interests of the West Side. Varick street, on the east side, has been cleared of buildings entirely from Carmine street to Canal, and a wide swath is being cut through the network of little streets that intervene between the head of Varick and the present southern end of the avenue. In a few weeks the new thoroughfare will have a clear path from end to end. St. John's Church projects far out from the new building line, below Canal street, and whether it will be cut off or not is still undetermined. Subway construction has already commenced in Varick street.

More than three hundred pieces of property are the subject of condemnation proceedings. Dwellings and small tenements mostly are being taken, with a few old business buildings interspersed. Eight or nine hundred families have had to find new apartments, and consequently houses throughout Greenwich section are very well rented at the present time. A general reconstruction of buildings along the new portion of the avenue is expected, to begin as soon as it is available for traffic.

More Bids Called For.

The Public Service Commission has called for bids for the construction of two more sections of the new subways, one on the Whitehall-Montague street line in Manhattan, to be operated by the New York Municipal Railway Corporation, and one on the Seventh avenue line in Manhattan, to be operated by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company. Bids for the former will be opened on April 14, and on the latter on April 17. The section of the Whitehall-Montague street line runs mainly through Whitehall street, and connects the southern end of the Broadway subway in Manhattan with the proposed tunnel under the East River from Whitehall street to Montague street, Brooklyn. The section of the Seventh avenue line runs from Vesey street south through Greenwich street to the Battery, where the Seventh avenue line will connect with the existing subway.

Two More Tunnels.

In a few weeks bids will be asked for two new tunnels under the East River. One of these tunnels will run from Whitehall street, Manhattan, to Montague street, Brooklyn, and will be operated by the New York Municipal Railway Corporation in connection with the Fourth avenue subway in Brooklyn and the Broadway subway in Manhattan. The other tunnel will run from Old Slip, Manhattan, to Clark street, Brooklyn, and will be operated by the Interborough Rapid Transt Company in connection with the existing subway in Brooklyn and the new Seventh avenue subway in Manhattan. Construction contracts for these two tunnels were adopted by the commission and sent to the respective companies during the last week. The companies have ten days in which to return the contracts to the commission with their criticisms and suggestions. This step is necessary because the companies will provide most of the money to pay for the construction of the tunnels, and as they will be made parties to the construction contracts, the Dual System agreements provide that the form thereof shall be submitted to them for approval. Each of the two tunnels will contain two cast iron tubes which will be driven under the river by the shield and compressed air method. The time limit for the completion of each is fixed at 42 months from the date of delivery of the contracts. Unless unforeseen obstacles arise, construction work on these tunnels should begin during the coming summer.

Nature of the Steinway Tunnel Work.

The work of reconstructing the Steinway tunnel will include the installation of a cross-over between the two tracks at a point in Manhattan east of First avenue; the filling-in of a shaft on Man o' War Reef; the finishing of stations, and the building of temporary superstructures for the stations in Manhattan and Long Island City; the ballasting of the roadbed, and the laying of the tracks. The station in Manhattan will be on the south side of 42nd street between Lexington and Third avenues, and access to the tunnel will be by an escalator. The contractor will have nine months in which to complete the work. Eventually this tunnel will be connected with the existing subway by an extension westward to Times Square, and with the new rapid transit lines in Queens by an extension from its present terminus to the Queensboro Bridge Plaza. Work on the Queens extension is already under contract.

The Public Service Commission awarded the contract for the reconstruction to the Rapid Transit Subway Construction Company, the lowest bidder, for $383,910.75. The tunnel is already completed as a two-track line from a point between Lexington and Third avenues, Manhattan, under 42nd street and the East River to Jackson and Van Alst avenues, Long Island City. It was built, however, for trolley car operation, and as it is to be made a part of the dual system of rapid transit and operated in connection with the existing subway, certain reconstruction is necessary.

The Public Service Commission has sent to the Legislature a bill to amend the Rapid Transit Act so as to give the city, through the commission, the power to build rapid transit lines directly through men employed by the city. The commission can let contracts, subject to the approval of the Board of Estimate, but has not the power to do the actual construction work. In case of emergency such a power might become necessary to the completion of parts of the new subway system.

The Broadway Association has applied to the Public Service Commission to have the existing local station in the subway at 59th street made an express station. The chairman and other commissioners have expressed themselves as favorable to the project, if the city can find the money to defray the cost.

SUBWAY CONSTRUCTION IN VARICK STREET. CLEARING THE WAY, NORTH OF CARMINE STREET.

BUILDING ERA ON SOUTHERN BOULEVARD

Section Favored By Fine Transit Facilities, Has Been Invaded By Construction Companies, Which Are Erecting Many Multi-Family Houses.

SOUTHERN BOULEVARD from 174th street to Bronx Park is becoming the centre of a new and attractive apartment house district. With its good transit facilities, schools, churches and amusements, and all the educational, recreational and natural advantages of its location between the two beautiful parks, Crotona and New York Zoological Park, it has attracted the attention of both builder and investor. A belief in the future of the section so well adapted for apartment house construction, with confidence in its growth and expansion, has led to numerous operations along the 200-foot thoroughfare and in many of the adjacent side streets.

The subway station at 174th street, surface lines on Boston Road and intersecting lines east in 177th and 180th streets, with a trolley line of its own traversing the entire length of the avenue, comprise the transit facilities. There is an abundance of schools and churches. To Public School No. 6 in East 177th street, Public School No. 32 in East 183d street, and the Roman Catholic Parochial Institution on Daly avenue, is soon to be added the large new structure at Prospect avenue and 176th street, rapidly nearing completion. Another site is being held under advisement by the Board of Education in the vicinity of Southern Boulevard and 180th street.

Churches of various denominations in the immediate vicinity include the Grace Episcopal Church on Vyse ave, the Pilgrim Baptist Church on Boston road, the West Farms Presbyterian Church in 180th street, the West Farms Reformed Church in Fairmount place, and the St. Mark's Roman Catholic Church in East 182d street. A new shopping center in East 177th street has been established by the erection of a block of taxpayers by James Butler.

Thirty-Five Plans Filed.

Plots in the east side of the avenue running 145 feet back to Mohegan avenue offer possibilities for apartment house construction with entrances on both streets. About thirty-five plans have been filed in the last few months for new buildings. Excavating was commenced last week by the Dwyer Construction Company at the northwest corner of Southern Boulevard and Fairmount place, where the firm will erect a six-story multi-family structure. The big plot just north, with a frontage of 110 feet on the avenue at the corner of Elmsmere Place is also to be improved with apartment houses. John McNulty, builder, has just taken title to four lots at the southwest corner of Elmsmere place and Southern Boulevard, which he will improve with similar buildings. Mr. McNulty sold to an investor last week the thirty-family house at 878 East 176th street, which he recently erected at the southwest corner of Waterloo place. Four new apartment houses in Bronx Park South were also sold this week by builders.

In the same street the Dwyer company completed some time ago two five-story apartments and a one-story taxpayer. Farther north at the 177th street transfer point both south corners are occupied by apartment houses. The one on the west side was erected last year by Mr. MacNulty. The southeast corner is occupied by an apartment house and directly south a similar structure is in course of construction. A new theatre is being built on the next block at an estimated cost of $400,000. The American Real Estate Company recently purchased the block bounded by 181st and 182d streets and Daly and Vyse avenues, for improvement with high class apartment houses.

Growing Crowds of Commuters.

Confidence in the future of the section was voiced this week by Robert E. Simon, of the Henry Morgenthau Company. "Evidence of the growth and development of this section," said Mr. Simon, "is shown by the gradual increase in the number of tickets sold during the last eight years at the 174th street subway station. In 1906 236,794 tickets were sold; in 1908, 354,517; in 1910, 695,367; in 1912, 1,077,721, and last year 1,640,577. These figures indicate the trend of the Bronx population. The Germans who formerly lived in the older sections in the southern part of the Bronx have gradually been driven northward. With those who are seeking to move uptown from Manhattan, many are locating in that part of the Bronx adjacent to the 174th street subway station."

Richard H. Scobie, who has made a specialty of this section, said: "Excellent renting conditions have stimulated building construction along Southern Boulevard. Few parts of the Bronx are attracting more purchasers for investment, and builders realizing its possibilities are obtaining all the available plots for improvement."

Uniform Width for Boulevard.

For the last few years local taxpayers' associations have been seeking to establish a uniform width on Southern Boulevard by urging the acquisition of the old car barns of the Union Railroad at 175th street. When the matter came up before the local board, some time ago, Cyrus C. Miller, former Borough President, opposed it on account of the probable high cost of the proceedings which he estimated would be about $500,000. He said last week, "While the removal of the car barns would undoubtedly beautify the neighborhood, the city cannot very well, at this time, undertake a proceeding involving such an expenditure. The section is growing and becoming more densely populated. The money could be used better for the erection of new schools."

"Regarding the question of taking the carhouse property of the Union Railway Company and the sub-station for the purpose of improving the appearance of the parkway at the Southern Boulevard," said Edward A. Maher, general manager of the Union Railway Company, "this matter came up several years ago shortly after a fire, which entirely destroyed our carhouse building, known as No. 2, on the south side of 175th street, and we suggested at that time, if the city desired to acquire the property in question, that it would be advisable to take it up then, for the reason that it could be bought probably cheaper, if at all, than when the building was upon the premises. No action was taken and after a reasonable time we rebuilt the present carhouse building.

SOUTHERN BOULEVARD, NORTH OF 177TH STREET.

Counting the Cost.

"The question of expense involved in the taking of this property, is very much more serious than it possibly appears on the surface, in view of the fact that to accomplish the purpose desired, it would also be necessary to take our sub-station located on the westerly side of the property, and to and from which there is operated an immense number of underground cables, carrying the current from the power house at Kingsbridge to the rotary converters in the sub-station, and distributing the same to the various lines operated from the sub-station. No doubt these facts are not familiar to the people who are agitating the question of taking the property, and they perhaps have no idea of what the expense would be."

Other proposed improvements which local associations are seeking to bring about are the establishment of a post-office branch and a bank in 180th street. A widening of 174th street from Southern Boulevard to the Bronx River, with the building of a bridge to connect it with the A-R-E-Co. tract is another improvement which is under way. These contemplated projects have been important factors in the growth of the section.

MEASURES BEFORE THE LEGISLATURE

Governor Glynn Advocates Brick Highways, Built by Convict Labor—Bank Bill Passes Both Houses—Five Cent Fare Measures Killed in Assembly

LAST Monday Governor Glynn sent a message to the Legislature advocating the construction of state roads of brick, instead of with the materials now in use. The Governor contends that if his method is employed the State will save about $176,000,000 in twenty years. The macadam roads upon which the State has spent $50,000,000, and will expend a like sum before long, will wear out and be useless long before they are paid for. The Governor contends that the State has the material and labor for brick roads, and he sees no reason why both should not be employed economically. It is proposed that convict labor be employed.

In his message the Governor said: "New York is engaged in building 12,000 miles of roads, which will wear out forty years before they are paid for. Unless radical changes are made in the type of roads it builds it will cost from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 a year to maintain and rebuild New York's highways when the present system is complete. Every year the taxpayers will be compelled to pay $12,000,000 for maintenance; also $5,000,000 a year in interest charges on their bonds. Every year $2,500,000 will have to be contributed to the sinking fund to take up the bonds when they mature, and they will be required to pay additional millions to rebuild part of the roads on which they are lavishing these tremendous sums. In other words, the yearly road tax of two dollars will be perpetually levied on every man, woman and child in New York State.

"Instead of roads that will wear out every ten years, highways must be constructed which will wear from twenty to thirty years. Instead of roads that cost $1,000 a year to maintain, highways must be built that can be taken care of at a moderate cost. Two types of roads will answer the purpose, one of concrete and the other of brick on a concrete foundation.

"In the past New York has been slow to adopt concrete or brick roads because of their high initial cost. Where a macadam road costs $10,000 to $13,000 a mile to build, a concrete road costs from $12,000 to $16,000 a mile, and a brick road from $20,000 to $25,000 a mile."

Bank Bill Passes Both Houses.

The Van Tuyl Commission bill, which makes radical changes in the banking laws, passed both the Senate and the Assembly last Wednesday. The bill places private bankers under the jurisdiction of the State Banking Department. The large private banking concerns, such as J. P. Morgan & Co., are exempted, though the books of these concerns must be kept open for state inspection.

Highway Bill Passed.

The Senate and Assembly passed last Thursday the Frawley bill, designed to appropriate $10,000,000 for highway maintenance and improvement.

Five Cent Fare Bill Killed.

The Assembly killed last Tuesday both the Lane bills, providing for a five cent fare on steam railroads in New York City and for an additional stop in the Bronx, on the Harlem Division of the New York Central Railroad. The bills were known as the Griffin bills in the Senate and were favorably reported recently by a Senate Committee, and were to have been taken up for a final vote in the near future.

In the Senate.

Int. No. 1379. Eadie. Inserting in the State Boards and Commissions Law a new article (2; 18 new sections, 5 to 22) providing for the establishment of a motion picture commission to have charge of the licensing and regulation of moving pictures. Under the present charter provision such charges that are not paid by the last day of the following March, are subjected to a penalty of 10%. The commissioner of water supply, gas and electricity is required to furnish annually, between the 5th and 15th of July, to the collector of assessments and arrears, a separate account for each section or ward of the city of all lands against which there is unpaid any frontage charge or extra miscellaneous charge for water not metered. Under the present law the separate account is to be furnished on the first day of March to the comptroller. There are other changes.

BARGE CANAL TERMINALS.

Four Points in Queens Suggested and Their Advantages Pointed Out.

That Queens Borough shall participate in the benefits of the $101,000,000 State Barge Canal and the $19,000,000 to be spent in terminals is the demand of the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens. At a joint meeting of the Industrial and Commerce committees of the chamber held this week a resolution was adopted advocating the location of Barge Canal terminals in Queens Borough at the following places:

1. Newtown Creek; between Borden avenue and Hunters Point avenue on the Dutch Kills Canal.
2. East River; in Hallets Cove near the foot of Jamaica avenue.
3. Bowery Bay; just east of Berrians Island.
4. Flushing Creek; between Jackson avenue and the North Shore Division of the Long Island Railroad.

A committee representing the chamber will call upon State Engineer Bensel and place before him the necessity of locating terminals in Queens Borough at the places mentioned, and request that plans be prepared for same as soon as possible.

A brief is now being prepared by Walter J. Willis, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, under the direction of C. G. M. Thomas, chairman of the manufacturing committee, and Capt. Frederick Russell, chairman of the commerce committee, containing reasons why Barge Canal terminals should be located at the places designated. This brief will show both the necessity and the superiority of these locations, the excellent railroad facilities afforded in conjunction therewith, the factories that will be benefited, the sections of Queens Borough and Long Island that will be benefited and the opportunities for future development that will result from the location of such terminals.

A Growing Center.

A terminal in the Dutch Kills Canal, a tributary to Newtown Creek, would have direct connection with the Long Island Railroad, and in addition to giving cheaper shipping facilities to the hundreds of factories in this section, would be of value not only to every section of Queens Borough, but all of Long Island. Also, by direct connection with the Connecting Railroad, it would be the shortest route from the West to serve all New England. In this immediate neighborhood the greatest industrial development is now going on in the city of New York—if not in the world. The Degnon Terminal Company alone will erect modern factory buildings estimated to cost over $30,000,000 within the next few years. Newtown Creek is known as the "busiest waterway of its size in the world," and in 1910 the tonnage of its traffic was greater than the combined tonnage of all the canals of the State of New York. While a terminal is proposed for the Greenpoint section of Brooklyn on the south side of Newtown Creek, such terminal would be of no value to the industries of Long Island City.

Would Serve Miles of Factories.

A terminal on the East River in the vicinity of Hallets Cove, near the foot of Jamaica avenue, would serve not only all the factories that now line the East River shore for a distance of almost four miles, but such a terminal would be centrally located, as it would be midway between the mouth of Newtown Creek and the beginning of Long Island Sound. Such a terminal would be of value to the entire community of Long Island City, and would not be further away than ten or fifteen minutes time by automobile truck to the most distant factory.

A terminal on Bowery Bay, just east of Berrians Island, would have a strategic location, being less than three miles from the mouth of the Harlem Ship Canal, and barge canal boats coming from the North River to the East River could unload their cargoes without having to travel many miles south on the East River.

For the Long Island Trade.

A terminal on Flushing Creek, between Jackson avenue and the North Shore Division of the Long Island Railroad would be of value not only to the entire north side of Long Island, but with the straightening and widening of Flushing Creek, plans for which are now rapidly progressing, would enable barge canal boats to bring such commodities as coal, lumber, building supplies, etc., to Jamaica, Richmond Hill, Forest Hills, Newtown, and in fact, serve the whole center of Long Island.

Cyrille Carreau.

AFTER an illness extending over a period of several weeks, Cyrille Carreau died last Thursday at his home, 654 Madison avenue. Mr. Carreau was prominently identified with the real estate and insurance business for more than forty years and was considered an authority on property located in the upper Sixth avenue section. He was born at St. John's, Ontario, Canada, sixty-three years ago, but came to New York when a young man. Almost immediately upon his taking up his residence in New York, he became interested in the real estate market and had unbounded faith in the future of realty in Manhattan. Several weeks ago Mr. Carreau had a stroke of paralysis, which finally resulted in his demise. He is survived by a widow, three daughters and five sons. The funeral will be held this morning at his residence.

Robert Bridgman.

Robert Bridgman, for twelve years Real Estate Editor of the New York Times, and who later held the same position on the Evening Mail, died on March 21, at Castleton, Vt., at the age of thirty-nine. The late Mr. Bridgman was the son of Herbert L. Bridgman, newspaper publisher, and was ill for several months. He was well known and respected in newspaper circles and in addition to those already mentioned, held important positions on the New York Sun and Tribune.

Mr. Bridgman was born at No. 604 Carlton avenue, Brooklyn, on November 24, 1874, and was a graduate of Public School No. 9. He was a member of the class of 1891, of Adelphi College. Among his classmates were included Herbert L. Pratt, Lawrence E. Abraham, Darwin R. James, Jr., John E. Searles and John F. Geis.

In 1901 Mr. Bridgman married Marion Kinproth. Among his relatives were Elias and William Howe, inventors of the sewing machine and the truss bridge and Allan N. Spooner, who was Dock Commissioner under Mayor Low's administration. For the last decade, up to the time of his illness, Mr. Bridgman resided in Jersey City. A widow and two children, Katherine and Herbert L. 2d., survive. Funeral services were held at the Carlton avenue residence last Tuesday afternoon, the Rev. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, pastor of the Clinton Avenue Congregational Church officiating.

Taxpayers Suggest Remedy.

Establishment of closer relationship between the taxpayer and the tax collector is a matter which the United Real Estate Owners' Associations have undertaken. Many taxpayers attribute the present depression in realty to high assessed valuations, while others believe it is due to over-regulation of buildings and conflicting orders of municipal departments. It has been suggested that one of the tax assessors attend the meetings of each, of the local associations comprising the U. R. E. O. A., for the purpose of explaining the assessed valuations of that particular district and for the purpose of answering questions with relation to the tax department. On the other hand, the members will have an opportunity of making suggestions to the city officials who can in turn report to the Tax Board.

The United Real Estate Owners' Associations is supporting the bill introduced in the Legislature, which has for its purpose the consolidation of the separate purchasing divisions of the various city departments into one central body. L. Victor Weil, chairman of the committee in charge of this bill, said this week:

"The association is in full sympathy with this change, as by the method in use at present, each department secures its own bids for whatever it may require. Another advantage to be gained by a Central Purchasing Bureau would be that articles could be bought in much larger quantities at a lower figure.

"There is, however, one very serious drawback to this method. If a warehouse is to be maintained in conjunction with this bureau, then there will be opportunity for purchasing more supplies than the actual requirements which will tie up too much of the city's money. In fearing this positive danger we are not taking into consideration any dishonesty by the officials in charge.

"The ideal system of purchasing supplies is to obtain bids on all materials and each department head to order whatever his immediate requirements may be."

West Side Taxpayers' Banquet.

Nearly 500 members and guests of the West Side Taxpayers' Association attended its fortieth anniversary banquet, at Terrace Garden, on Tuesday evening. Dr. George Wenner, president of the organization, acted as toastmaster. In his introductory address, he urged all real estate owners to become actively identified with some real estate body in order to more effectually defend realty from hostile legislation.

Borough President Marcus M. Marks, the first speaker, chose for his subject the "Borough of Manhattan." He expressed the opinion that real estate conditions would improve in the near future through co-operation between the property owners and the city departments, working in harmony. Their joint efforts would eventually remedy the promiscuous inspection of buildings by a half a dozen different inspectors. Other speakers were Allan Robinson, who talked on "The Future of Real Estate in New York"; one-time Coroner Gustav Scholer, for ten years president of the association, gave an address in German on "Reminiscences of the West Side Taxpayers' Association," and Frank Demuth, spoke on "Our Fortieth Anniversary."

The officers of the organization are Dr. George Wenner, president; Dr. Philip G. Becker and John W. Jones, vice-presidents; Jacob J. Talbot, recording and corresponding secretary; Frederick Keller, treasurer, and Julius Neke, financial secretary. The chairman of the dinner committee was Joseph Wenner.

Largest Pier in the World.

The Bush Terminal is about to open the biggest pier in existence, 1,400 feet long, 270 wide, 50 high, with fourteen and a half acres of freight space, built at a cost of $1,000,000.

The pier is expected to handle 1,500,000 tons of freight a year. It has been leased for a long term to the American-Hawaiian Steamship Co., which will despatch a steamer every fifth day for the East, a result of the opening of the Panama Canal.

A double-track railroad on the pier connects with the Bush Terminal Railroad, giving access to all trunk lines.

Hopes of seeing the Fourth avenue subway in Brooklyn even in partial operation this year have fled. According to the subway engineers, the tube will be ready, but the cars will not; and, according to the officers of the B. R. T., the cars will be ready as soon as the equipment. Under the circumstances real estate improvers must exercise patience.

A new courthouse for Brooklyn seems to be assured, and no doubt it will be completed and occupied long before the New York courts are halt done. Brooklyn has a way of getting what it wants in short order. The leasing of offices in adjacent buildings for the occupancy of city departments now in the Municipal Building has been authorized, and this old building will soon give way for the new courthouse wing.

General business continues slack and new orders from railroads, which are needed to rouse industry, are disappointingly slow, and no doubt are meant to be so, in order that the Interstate Commerce Commission may be impressed and induced to grant financial relief in the form of higher freight rates. In the meantime material needs are accumulating, and when the break comes there will be a flood.

Insurance interests and brokers are strongly opposing the clause in the Workmen's Compensation act which provides that their rates must be supervised by the State Superintendent of Insurance, and it is reported that they are now engaged in making schedules that will comply with the new conditions. The law will go into effect July 1. Every employer in any hazardous trade, which includes all the building trades, must be prepared to pay workmen compensation for injuries after that date. (See Record and Guide Dec. 20, 1913.) Employers may insure themselves against loss by taking out policies either in the State Insurance Fund, a stock casualty company, or a mutual insurance society.

Columbus Circle and Thereabouts.

There is undoubtedly much to be said in favor of establishing an express station on the West Side subway at Columbus Circle. If that subway were now being planned any traffic engineer who knew his business would situate the express station at 59th street rather than at 72d street. The growth of the city during the past ten years has made it evident that 59th street will be the northerly limit of general business. The intrusion of Central Park with the city plan makes it inconvenient for business to adopt a location north of 59th street. Future business expansion will be lateral rather than longitudinal. In consequence there will be a large concentration of business along the line of that street, which will be put to a considerable inconvenience, in case it is not served by an express station on the West Side subway. Of course, these remarks apply with particular force to that part of 59th street in the immediate vicinity of Columbus Circle.

The neighborhood in question has not attracted business as rapidly as was anticipated some time ago. The amusement and restaurant district has clung to the immediate vicinity of Long Acre Square, and at the present time has almost as much tendency to edge away south of 42d street as it has north of 48th street. But this check is no more than temporary. In the course of time the district comprised within a radius of a few blocks from Columbus Circle will be the location of a large, lively and diverse business activity—the advent of which would be very much accelerated by the establishment of an express station at that point. The only question is, whether the delay caused by adding another stop to the express station would outweigh the unquestionable advantages which would result from its construction. Only a traffic expert can pass authoritatively upon that point. A strong superficial case can, of course, be made out against any increase in the number of express stations. Every additional stop inconveniences more people than it benefits. On the other hand, the failure to situate express stations at points where they are really necessary may also be a cause of confusion and delay. At the hearing before the Public Service Commission counsel for property owners argued that the express trains would be more delayed at the 42d street and 72d street stations by people who would have to transfer to a local in order to reach Columbus Circle than they would be by the necessity of stopping at 59th street itself. It may be doubted whether at the present time this statement is true. The business which is now being transacted in the vicinity of Columbus Circle is probably smaller than that which is transacted in the vicinity of many other local stations. The neighborhood of 23d street, for instance, can present stronger claims for recognition than can 59th street. But the claims made by the property owners will be true at some future time, and eventually an express station is likely to be established at the southwest corner of Central Park.

The Plan of Central Park.

New Yorkers are extremely and justifiably proud of the appearance and of the plan of Central Park. No other city in the United States can boast of a park of such a considerable area, surrounded on every side by such a dense population, and so much enjoyed by so many people. Neither can any other city boast of a playground, which is such a charming example of picturesque and irregular landscape gardening. The attempt of the designers of Central Park was to make its layout similar to the appearance of a natural park. They wanted to get away from the artificiality of so-called formal landscape gardening, and to give to New Yorkers the illusion that they were enjoying themselves in the real country. They succeeded admirably, and their work has been emphatically and very generally popular. Any proposal radically to alter the plan of Central Park would be received with a storm of denunciation. Yet most assuredly the existing layout results in very grave inconveniences for the inhabitants of both sides of the Park.

One essential rule of the "naturalistic" school of landscape gardeners is the avoidance of straight lines. All the roads, pathway and walks pursue serious and devious routes, and insist upon being the longest rather than the shortest distance between two points. The consequence is that a pedestrian who seeks to go straight across the Park is obliged to walk more than twice as far as the actual distance, and frequently gets lost in the attempt. At a few points he can take advantage of the straight transverse roads, but they are not numerous enough to be of much use to him. The plan of the Park constitutes a flagrant and wholly unnecessary barrier to the free movement of travel between the east and west sides of Manhattan. Families that own motor cars or can afford to hire taxicabs freely do not feel the inconvenience very much, because they can use the nearest transverse road, but the existing methods of getting across Central Park constitute a real hardship for poorer people. They cannot make a call or keep an engagement on the other side of the Park without a wholly unnecessary loss of time, and in the long run they are not likely to submit without protest to the inconvenience.

If general public opinion is wholly opposed to a change in plan, which would increase the number of straight or comparatively straight roads and walks across the Park, three or four tunnels ought certainly to be built, and a motor omnibus run through them at sufficiently frequent intervals. Such an improvement in transverse service would promote both the business and social intercourse between the east and west sides, and would be worth in public convenience far more than it cost.

The Oversupply of Skyscrapers.

How long is the delay in establishing limits to the height of buildings to be continued? The city administration should act in this matter at an early date, and in an effectual manner. Public opinion is fully convinced as to the public desirability of real restrictions. Property owners are far less opposed to it than they used to be. The specific proposals made by the Commission appointed for the purpose have been in general approved. It only remains to take some decisive action on the basis of these recommendations. There has seemed to be no particular hurry in taking such action because of the existing stagnation in the speculative building industry. As a matter of fact, fewer skyscrapers have been planned for erection in New York during the past six months than during any similar period during the last fifteen years. But even in the dullest times there are some investors or corporations, which can afford to build, and an example of this kind has just turned up.

Taking advantage of the existing lack of regulation, the American Express Company has just filed plans for the construction of another thirty-two story building on lower Broadway. Real estate conditions do not warrant any such addition to the building equipment of the financial district. A large proportion of vacancies already exist, and it will be larger still by the time the Equitable Building is finished. The construction of the new building will help to prolong indefinitely the existing unsatisfactory condition of rentals, and will injure the value of the property of those owners whose improvements date back ten or fifteen years. Its effect will be injurious to both public and private interest, and cannot produce any great advantage even to the American Express Company. The repetition of such occurrences should be stopped.

—The Steel Corporation is now paying the highest average wages in its history, or $905 per man annually, compared to $717 in the year 1902.

Brokers or Speculators.

March 24th, 1914.

Editor of Record and Guide:

I approve of the policy of not "boosting" when no rise in values is possible, but why the organs of real estate should persistently "knock" real estate is a mystery to me, unless the Record and Guide is committed to the idea that "real esate" means land prices and not building sales, voicing the views and wishes of speculators rather than those of brokers or dealers in land?

The Record and Guide editorially sets forth that "the situation is not the result of one of the ordinary waves of depression which take place periodically in every department of business. It is at least in part the result of a permanent change of underlying conditions."

I agree with you that the heavy taxation of land values would, for a time at least, hurt land prices, but you go on to say (1) "that the fact that land and buildings are now assessed to near their full value and bear the main burden of taxation, hurts the real estate market"; and (2) "that the monopoly of available sites that Manhattan had, being broken by the bridges and tunnels, land will never recover its former market."

As to the full value assessments hurting real estate men, it does hurt the do-nothing speculator, who holds tight until others build; but, on the other hand, it helps the builder by a lower tax rate on buildings which always get the worst of it when undervaluations prevail. It also helps the broker by making values more stable and by discouraging the holding of available tracts of land out of use and out of the market for years. * * * My own impression is, that in trying to foster land speculation, you are catering to about ten per cent. of your subscribers and perhaps five per cent. of your advertisers and one per cent. of your building men at the expenses of the other ninety and nine.

Certain realtv interests are, I understand, opposing the Jersey bridge on the ground that it will break the Manhattan land monopoly. It is easy to see that that is a false fear. Land in New York is valuable because the City of New York is accessible by sea and land. The value has enormously increased with the completion of each bridge and tunnel. Could you find one Manhattan land owner who would like to have the bridge or tunnel nearest him closed? You know you could not. If accessibility injures our land values, then we ought to fill up the harbor.

To build a wall of any kind around New York, would destroy its value; whereas to connect it up with the rest of the earth better than any other place accessibility injures our land values, then we ought to fill up the harbor.

The growth of Long Island, Staten Island and New Jersey will raise their land values, of course, but as soon as those land values get up to a fair proportion compared to those in New York, the trade and residence will be reflected back into New York. In the meanwhile, we are building up for ourselves customers in all those places, who will utilize directly and indirectly our high-priced business land and still further enhance its value.

You cannot sell anything to vacant lots.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

Is there not some review or appeal to be had from a real estate standpoint concerning these added stations on the "L" road? The point is, have not the people along the line, who selected their houses upon a reasonable understanding of what the rapid transit facilities were to be, certain rights in the matter, and is it right to prolong the time required for their daily trips? The time limit is now being invaded by stops at new stations, one on the Sixth avenue road at 38th street, and another is in contemplation for 46th street, which are mentioned as examples.

One of the sections of this city built up with costly homes is within a short walk of the 58th street station. The passengers from this section have no interest in seeing the new stations installed, as their destinations are not there, but in lower New York.

If the new station at 38th street, which is intended to help certain dry goods concerns and shoppers, were to be put out of commission at 8:30 every morning for two hours it would not interfere with the class of passengers spoken of, and at 10:30 a. m., the shoppers are just starting to arrive. No inconvenience would occur if the trains stopped there only before 8:30 a. m. and after 10:30 a. m.

Comparatively few of the many passengers use either the 38th or 28th street stations, and alternately the trains should stop at one or the other and permit an even headway for the trains.

Many prefer to ride on stilts to riding in the subway and the patronage of the "L" should be encouraged, as it relieves the subway crush. Especially when the spring and summer are upon us is the "L" preferable, and the traffic should be relieved of vexatious delays.

"NEW YORKER."

Are Tall Buildings Profitable?

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

The advertisements of the Equitable Building are unique and the building will be a monument to its constructors, but why is it being built?

It is a legal use for surplus funds, but will the advertising compensate for the very small net income? Will the profit be greater than if a smaller building were erected?

Is it for the general welfare? Will the owners of other property benefit by such a magnificent improvement, or will they suffer loss of tenants and have their incomes reduced?

Has the construction of large office and loft buildings usually benefited the owners thereof and the general vicinity?

Would New York realty, as a whole, be more valuable and profitable today if no building over ten stories had been erected?

Does an expensive building curtail the unearned increment and prevent future profit?

These questions are constantly being asked of real estate agents, and it would be interesting to have the single-taxers and double-taxers answer briefly through your columns.

Third-Tracking Third Avenue "L."

The Public Service Commission has ratified the action of its chief engineer, Alfred Craven, in giving his tentative approval to the plans for the third-tracking of the Third Avenue elevated railroad in Manhattan and the Bronx, and authorizing the Interborough Rapid Transit Company to begin work. The company's plans for the third-tracking of this line were submitted to the chief engineer of the commission on January 23, 1914. On March 9, 1914, the chief engineer gave them his tentative approval in order to expedite the beginning of work, but specifically reserved the right to make changes in the plans during the progress of the work if necessary. Mr. Craven explained that a complete study of the plans would take months before he could give them his final approval, but in order not to delay the beginning of work he gave his general approval, subject to the reservation before mentioned.

Work has begun upon the third-tracking at Chatham Square by the T. A. Gillespie Company, who, with the Terry & Tench Company and Snare & Triest Company, have the contracts for the construction of the additional tracks on all the elevated railroads operated by the Interborough Company. The contract covers the Second, Third and Ninth Avenue Lines. The work in Third avenue has been legalized by the authorization of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, which has approved the report of its commissioners in favor of the building of additional tracks on that line. No determination has yet been received from the court as to the other two lines, and that is the reason that work starts first on the Third Avenue Line.

When the third-tracking is completed express stations on the Third Avenue Line will be as follows: City Hall, Chatham Square, Canal street, Grand street, Houston street, 9th street, 23d street, 42d street, 106th street, 125th street, 133d street, 138th street, 143d street, and 149th street.

Hearing on the Billboard Ordinance.

Surprising evidence was given on Tuesday afternoon at City Hall of the widespread interest in billboards. The Aldermanic chamber was packed at the public hearing on the Curran ordinance to regulate billboards. So many desired to be heard that the committee decided to give up the whole afternoon to the opposition and appoint another day to hear the advocates of the measure.

Alderman Curran in some explanatory remarks which he was permitted to make at the outset of the meeting referred to the activity of the billboard companies in opposition to the ordinance, but said it was evident that the public misunderstood its nature and effect, because it was not the purpose to disturb any existing billboard or sky-sign not now violating the law. No real estate owner's income would be reduced by a single dollar through anything contained in the pending ordinance, which if enacted would regulate only those boards and signs that would be erected in the future.

While this was not disputed, it was soon developed from the remarks of the first speaker in opposition, an attorney who represented the billboard companies, that it is their belief that the commissioners who drafted the bill are trving to get results by indirection, because under the terms of the ordinance when the present lease for a billboard expires either through change of ownership or by limitation, it will be necessary to obtain a new permit. (See Record and Guide, February 14.) Then it will be unlawful to maintain a billboard over ten feet high and it must be of fireproof construction. No board may be opposite any schoolhouse, church or public building or on a parkawy, and nowhere without the consent of all property owners within two hundred feet. Neither may any structure for advertising purposes be erected outside of the building lines.

President McGuire of the Real Estate Board, Rev. Dr. Reisner of Grace Methodist Church, representatives of local property owners' associations, theatrical interests, lithographers and out-door advertising companies, were among those who spoke in opposition.

Tunnel Route Changed.

Owing to engineering difficulties, the route of the Brooklyn crosstown subway line has been amended so that the tunnel from Union Square will terminate at Greenpoint avenue instead of North Seventh street. The lawyers for the commission are now working on the legal phase of the plans. The map shows that the Union Square subway from Fourteenth street, Manhattan, will be built to the foot of Greenpoint avenue, and then carried through Manhattan avenue and Roebling street, occupying two tracks in the crosstown subway between Greenpoint avenue and North Seventh street. At North Seventh street the Eastern District line runs through Metropolitan avenue and Bushwick avenue, and then through the Evergreen right of way to East New York. The plan for an elevated on Johnston and Wyckoff avenue has been abandoned, and through the right of way the road will run in an open cut if possible.

Croton Water Charges.

Next Tuesday is the last day upon which the regular Croton water charges for 1914 can be paid, without penalty. On the day following five per cent. penalty will be added to unpaid charges.

THE WEEK'S REAL ESTATE NEWS

Brokerage Sales, Auctions, Foreclosure Suits, Building Loans, etc., Together With Brief Personal Items.

Upper West Side Properties Figured Prominently in Reports

Planning to Continue Affiliation.

Concerted effort on the part of the various real estate interests produced such excellent results in the successful oposition to the Herrick-Schaap bill and other measures, that a number of real estate associations sent representatives to a meeting at the Vesey Street Exchange Salesroom on Tuesday afternoon for the purpose of continuing this temporary organization. Allan Robinson, president of the Allied Real Estate Interests, presided. The speakers were Henry Bloch, president of the United Real Estate Owners' Associations, Stewart Browne and Alderman Henry H. Curran.

Mr. Bloch outlined the purpose of the meeting. "It is desirable," he said, "that all the associations which joined in opposing the Herrick-Schaap bill, remain affiliated. No new permanent organization need be formed, but a combination of associations, which may be called together when the occasion arises, is desirable." At the close of his address he offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That a committee, consisting of a representative of each of the associations represented at this conference, be appointed by the temporary chairman, for the purpose of representing all of the associations, members of the conference, at the hearings before the special committee to be appointed by the Mayor, to consider the matter of the revision of the tax laws; and for the purpose of embodying and presenting to this conference, a plan whereby legislation may be enacted looking toward either the appointment of a commission for the purpose of consolidating or merging two or more of the existing city departments having jurisdiction over buildings, or the introduction of a bill which shall establish a Bureau of Inspection for Buildings for all departments, and that this committee be requested to report as early as may be consistent with a careful study of the situation.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

WHILE there was no substantial improvement in the real estate situation and conditions remain practically unchanged, the week's business was not without interesting developments. With the spring renting season at hand the leasing market is holding the centre of interest, and there is a demand for all kinds of property, in both the downtown and midtown sections.

The sales market, which has been moderately active, shows tendencies to improve. Washington Heights contributed a number of deals involving apartment houses. An estate controlling large unimproved property, disposed of another block front which will probably be resold to builders. The interest of buyers in building sites available for immediate improvement in that part of the city, as evidenced by the numerous recent transactions, may indicate a general revival of building activity for the spring.

Other important transactions of the week involved an Eleventh avenue block front, and the old Brooklyn Academy of Music, part of the former Lord and Taylor store. Large leases reuported during the week concerned an upper Broadway block front to be improved with a theatre and stores and a plot in the Grand Central Terminal zone, which will result in the erection of a tall commercial structure.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 28, as against 31 last week and 39 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 9, compared with 6 last week, and 15 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 19, as compared with 25 last week and 24 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 124, as against 141 last week, 14 having stated considerations totalling $464,225. Mortgages recorded this week numbered 67, involving $1,958,711, as against 81 last week ,aggregating $4,053,535.

From the Bronx, 18 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 18 last week, and 17 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $930,006, compared with $772,107 last week, making a total since January 1 of $10,156,450. The figure for the corresponding week last year was $1,029,320, and the total from July 1, 1913, to March 22, 1913, was $14,098,955.

Builders Buy at Hunts Point.

Eddy A. Weinstein, of the A. N. Gitterman Corporation, sold for the Hunts Point Estate, Robert E. Simon, president, to the Baronette Construction Co., the southeast corner of Hunts Point and Garrison avenues, seven lots for improvement with three 5-story apartment houses. The houses will be ready for occupancy in the autumn. Directly opposite is the projected subway express station of the Lexington avenue extension, as well as the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. station. These builders have lately completed ten houses of similar type in this section, all of which are fully tenanted, and several sold to investors.

Brooklyn Academy Site Resold.

The Morris Building Co., representing the Pratt interests, bought from the Record Holding Co., through H. Galitzka the site of the former Brooklyn Academy of Music, a two-story taxpayer on plot 100x100, in Montague street, between Court and Clinton streets. The seller acquired it in 1912, from the Brown-Weiss Realties, who had intended to erect an office building. It is believed that the new owners will carry out these plans. In part payment was given twenty-four 2-story dwellings on the north side of Lafayette avenue between Classon avenue and Taafe place.

Riverside Drive Block Front Sold.

Harris and Maurice Mandelbaum have bought from the Loyal L. Smith estate the entire block front on Riverside Drive, from 160th to 161st streets, through the J. Romaine Brown Co. The Messrs. Mandelbaum have been buying most of the Smith holdings and reselling them to builders. Their present purchase comprises about 12½ lots, 200 x155, which probably will be resold shortly.

Broadway Corner Changes Hands.

Catherine Deane and other heirs of Henry Badeau, have sold through George H. Chivvers & Co., the southwest corner of Broadway and 20th street, part of the site recently vacated by Lord & Taylor. The property has been in the Badeau family since 1842, when it was purchased for $3,000. The plot, 27.6x94.11, is now assessed at $277,000.

West Side Deal.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Co. sold, through John N. Golding, to John H. Lynch, president of the Terminal Warehouse Co., the block front on the west side of Eleventh avenue, from 27th to 28th streets, a 3-story building, 197x100, formerly used by the seller for its cab service. The buyer recently leased six buildings in the block to the Francis H. Leggett Co., which will shortly move from their location in Franklin street.

You Don't Have To Buy High Priced Coal:

A Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler will burn Bituminous Coal smokelessly. So even in New York City, where the city ordinance prohibits smoke, you can use the cheaper bituminous coal instead of the high priced Anthracite which must be used in the ordinary boiler to secure smokeless results.

And a Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler will be the means of reducing fuel bills to a large extent.

AUCTION SALES OF WEEK.

Except where otherwise stated, the properties offered were in foreclosure. Adjournments of legal sales to next week are noted under Advertised Legal Sales.

* Indicates that the property described was bid in for the plaintiff's account.

The Auction Market.

Thirty-nine offerings at the Manhattan and Bronx Salesrooms this week, including some choice holdings offered at voluntary sale, attracted good-sized crowds and outside bidders were in evidence. While parties in interest bought twenty-one parcels, and ten were withdrawn or adjourned, eight offerings were obtained by outsiders. Bing & Bing paid $174,500 for the buildings at 128-138 West 45th street. An interesting phase of the Bing purchase was the fact that their bid of $174,500 was $22,500 above the assessed valuation. J. R. Thompson made a high bid of $43,000 for the tenements at 342-4 Eighth avenue.

For the coming week a number of small properties will be offered in various sections of the city, tenements and dwellings, as usual, comprising the bulk of the offerings. Among the properties scheduled for sale at the stand of Joseph P. Day, is the apartment house at 244 Riverside Drive; also the two-story theatre at 689 Amsterdam avenue.

Every day in Brooklyn some already-built apartment house is made modern and convenient by the installation of electric light.

The owners of these buildings realize that the public is educated to the many advantages of electric service. They are quick to grasp not only the fact that vacant apartments rent quicker when electrically equipped, but also that tenants are willing to pay more for an electric-lighted apartment than for any other.

The money spent, then, to make the necessary installation is really not an expense, but an investment that pays large returns.

SAFEGUARDING BUILDINGS AGAINST FIRE

By FRED J. MILLER*

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager for the American Real Estate Co.

PUBLIC sentiment is more and more placing full responsibility upon the owners of industrial establishments for the thorough protection of employees from death by fire. This responsibility is being reflected in legislation requiring the provision of suitable means of egress from buildings, fire drills, fire walls, automatic sprinklers, enforcement of rules against smoking, etc.

The outside fire-escape, constructed in the ordinary manner, has been proved in numerous fires to be almost, if not absolutely worthless. It is extremely difficult for a large number of employees, especially where many of them are women, to descend the ordinary fire-escape, even when there is no panic and no reason for special haste. At the time of a fire it is practically useless.

Fire drills are probably justifiable and have in many cases saved lives. If properly maintained they are expensive, however, and in some recent fires have proved worthless.

Some of the other things mentioned, particularly suitable fire walls, are very good, but experience seems to have proved abundantly that the best of them all is the automatic sprinkler. In theory, at least, it is supposed to be always ready for instant use, and it puts water where and when it is needed at the very beginning of a fire, before it has had time to assume threatening proportions, and usually before there is enough smoke to alarm the occupants of the building seriously or start a panic.

It has other important uses, such as the formation of an effective water curtain capable of arresting the progress of a fire which has assumed the character of a conflagration.

Without Cost to the Owner.

It is interesting to note that several construction companies are now offering to install automatic sprinklers without the payment of any cost whatever by the owner, the company making the installation offering to take as its pay the difference between the present insurance premiums and the lower premiums that will be paid after the installation is made, for a number of years to be determined upon. The meaning of this is simply that the owner of the building and its occupants are very much better protected against fire without any additional outlay, and that at the end of a few years the owner will have the fire protective system thus installed for his own, free of cost.

I do not intend to advise either for or against these companies, but cite the fact simply as conclusive evidence of the pecuniary as well as the other advantages of automatic sprinklers.

But sprinkler heads when once installed must then be kept ready for service when needed. Sprinkler heads are usually arranged in groups with a supply pipe for each group. In each of these main supply pipes is a valve, by means of which water can be shut off from that section when necessary for repairs or by reason of the opening of one or more sprinkler heads, either in performing its normal service or by accident. These valves cannot be locked open, because it may be necessary in an emergency to close them as quickly as possible.

These valves introduce an element of danger, and with this it is the main object of this paper to deal. The inspectors of the mutual companies frequently find the valves referred to closed, and the sprinkler heads, therefore, are of no more use than as though they had never been installed.

In an effort to lessen this evil the factory mutual companies occasionally send to their policy holders a circular letter on the subject of the danger of closed sprinkler valves. In such a report, covering the months of April and June, 1912, 72 cases were reported where inspectors found such valves closed. In 63 of these cases the number of sprinkler heads controlled by the closed valves are given, and these foot up to 8,274 heads. Assuming that the cases in which the number of heads is not given would average about the same, this means that for this report, covering two months, nearly 10,000 sprinkler heads were found out of use by reason of valves closed when they should have been open.

The Danger of Closed Sprinkler Valves.

In many cases no reason was assigned for the valves being closed, which means, we may infer, that the proprietors did not know how the valves came to be closed. It is inconceivable, of course, that they would go to the expense of installing automatic sprinklers and other fire-protective devices, and then allow them to be thrown out of use if they had the organization and the discipline necessary to keep such devices always available.

The Remington Typewriter Company owns and operates five factories on which it carries in the mutual companies insurance policies aggregating about $6,000,000. These factories are protected by nearly 10,000 sprinkler heads, the water supply for which is controlled by 84 valves.

To decrease the liability of valves being either closed without authority, or left closed when they should have been opened, we have devised and have in use in our factories the system to be described:

Valves All Numbered.

Our sprinkler valves are all numbered and upon each valve there is hung a tag, as shown in Fig. 1. This tag is marked with the number of the valve to which it is attached, and, printed upon the tag, is a prohibition of the closing of the valve without a signed permit to do so, except when, in an emergency, or for any special reason, it must be closed at a time when no permit can be obtained, in which case it is to be detached and hung upon a board, shown in Fig. 3. This is as directed by the card itself, and when it is done the blanks upon this card must be filled in to show by whom the valve was closed, when it was closed, and the reason for closing.

When such an emergency closing of the valve takes place, at a time when the person in charge of the board (Fig. 3) is away, the watchman or other person having access to it goes to the board with the person who has closed the valve. Both these men then see that a red card complete but left blank is hung upon the board over the card removed from the closed valve. These are hung upon the hook numbered to correspond with the number of the closed valve. These cards thus hung upon this hook are intended to attract the notice of the person having the board in charge, who will, after proper investigation, fill out the blanks on the red card, hang the lower portion of it on the numbered hook corresponding to the closed valve, and attach the upper portion to the valve itself, as shown in Fig. 2, unless it shall have previously been reopened.

Get a Permit.

In most cases it will be possible to obtain a written permit before closing a valve, and in such case the permit is given by the person in charge, by filling in the blanks printed upon the red tag. It is then torn in two at the dotted line, and the upper portion of it given to the person applying for the permit, who attaches it to the valve before closing it (Fig. 2). The lower portion of the same red tag is hung upon the hook numbered to correspond with the number of the valve, as shown by Fig. 3.

The board is fastened to the wall of the room, or above the desk of the person having the system in charge, who may be the chief engineer, the superintendent, or one of his assistants, and the red tag hanging upon the hook is a constant reminder to him and a token to all others who may be interested that the valve is closed. During this time the valve itself will have hanging upon it the red permit tag, as shown by Fig. 2, which is a sign and reminder so long as it remains there that the valve is closed and that the sprinkler heads controlled by it are therefore out of commission.

It will, of course, be perceived that the main feature of this system is the board with numbered hooks, which is in plain view of the factory official charged with responsibility for the sprinkler valves; a red tag upon this board is a danger signal, which means it should be taken off as soon as possible, and this can be done only by re-opening the valve. The card has written upon it the time at which it was expected that the valve could be re-opened. It is the business of the official having the board in charge, when this specified time has passed, to investigate the reason, and if a later time must be assigned to indicate it upon the card and again take it up.

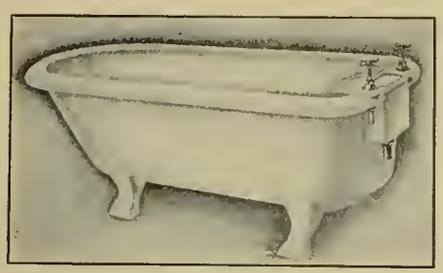
USEFUL APPLIANCES



Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration.

Mixing Boxes on English Tubs.

INSEPARABLE are the Englishman and his tub. Hence it is only natural that we should look to the English to produce a bath-tub that embodies all the comfort and convenience that that former luxury can produce. It is, therefore, not to be wondered at that our ruddy cousins across the sea have solved a problem in bathtub comfort that we United Staters have sought to solve in complex mechanical devices.

Now, a mechanical device that will mix water hot enough to make a Caucasian the hue of a Sioux chief, with aqua pura that is cold enough to turn red blood blue, so that the said Aryan can enjoy his morning tub in a safe temperature, is a source of much joy and healthfulness, provided the tenant downstairs does not suddenly take it into his head to take a simon pure cold water plunge and so permit the hot water to gain the ascendancy in the mixer with consequent violent and somewhat startling change to the accompaniment of an also ascending thermometer. Upon such an occasion as that the parboiled bather will be inclined to wish he had one of the English mixing boxes shown in the accompanying illustration attached to his aquarium.

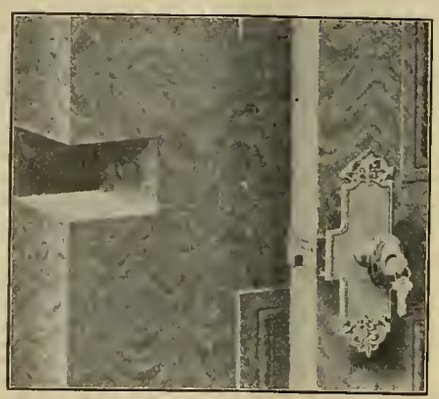
Fact is, not many Englishmen even know of this package of comfort the Avon Sanitary Engineering Works, of Birkenshaw, Larkhall, England, are turning out under patents recently acquired, but it is, nevertheless, on the market. Furthermore it does away with the shower attachment and provides instead a cascade which is non-splattering.

Cause of Knocking in Pumps.

BUILDING managers may be interested in the following probable causes of "knocking" in pumps:

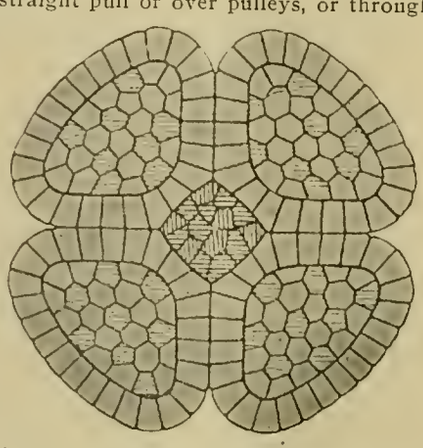


The water may be so low in the supply tank that the end of the suction pipe is exposed to the atmosphere admitting air to the pump instead of water or preventing a sufficient amount of water to reach the pump. When this is the case water and air are both drawn into the suction end of the pump. The pressure is very much lower in the cylinder until the air is compressed to the working pressure of the pump. The plunger travels much faster at the beginning of its stroke until this air is compressed to the normal working pressure, which checks the speed of the plunger.

The feed pipe valve may not be opened enough or the pipe may be partly clogged, due to the sediment in the water. If this is the case, the water cannot get into the cylinder fast enough to fill the space in the cylinder before the plunger starts on its return stroke, thus causing a partial vacuum in the suction end of the pump which would jerk the plunger back against the water as soon as the steam is released.

The feed or suction pipe may be too small. This would have the same effect upon the plunger as that noted if the springs were too weak to force the suction valves on their seat, this short jerking or kicking motion would result and continue until the spring or springs were replaced with stronger ones.

An Easily Installed Lock.



ILLUSTRATED herewith is a new type of lock that is being introduced by P. & F. Corbin, 106 Lafayette street. In applying this lock it is only necessary to cut the edge of the door as shown, slip the lock set into place and drive four screws through each escutcheon. The escutcheons are made extra heavy so as to give even greater rigidity to the lock door when pressure is applied than possibly could be secured under the old modest style of front door lock. All parts are fastened together at the factory and are never detached, preserving the alignment of parts and the nice adjustment made by skilled lock makers. The lock is said to be absolutely safe and has a remarkable ease of operation. By reason of the fact that it is assembled at factory and applied without dismemberment on the door it is quite impossible for it to get out of order no matter how hard or frequent the use of the lock or door may be.

The Wear-Resisting Rope.

ROPE is a building commodity that is almost universally used, and yet it is subject to fearful wear because, no matter how it is operated, whether by straight pull or over pulleys, or through sheaves, every fibre in the structure is in minute motion. This constant wearing of unit upon unit ultimately results in a general weakening of strands from within with a result that complete failure cannot always be detected until too late to avert action.

With the idea of giving to the building construction and management world a rope so constructed as automatically to resist wear, the American Manufacturing Co., of Brooklyn, has introduced the type shown. Transmission rope wears out first on the inside. The severest strain it undergoes is internal as already stated. The transmission rope manufactured by this company is made up of yarn and core laid with a special lubricant that permeates all the fibres and thus overcomes internal wear. This lubricant can never leave the rope no matter what its age and as long as the yarns and strands remain together they are kept soft and pliable. When they are in this condition wear is most satisfactorily prevented. Sufficient of this lubricant weakens the surface through the minute channels shown in the illustration, which is said to give ample protection against external injury, such as cutting over sheave ribs.

An Improved Steel Ceiling.

IN harmony with a movement for steel ceilings that will more thoroughly conform to the duty imposed upon them, a change in the construction of steel ceilings has recently been effected by the Berger Manufacturing Co., of Canton, Ohio. The bead has been enlarged, lengthened and shaped to half an oval, which is said to add strength and rigidity to the finished fabric. A feature of the new type of ceiling is that the top of the nailing button has been disposed or countersunk, forming a self-centering, self-guiding, never-slip nailing point which acts as a guide for the erector in placing the nail in the correct position, and is said to prevent slipping while driving, without any inconvenience to the ceiling erector, every bead and button fitting accurately over the underlapping bead and button. This makes a tight and perfect fitting joint, according to the manufacturers, which, they claim, eliminates calking and tamping of joints, which heretofore has been an expensive factor in the cost of erection.

A Handy Bar Bender.

THIS is a device that can be kept in an ordinary tool box for the purpose of bending bars of any size to any angle. It takes plain, round, square, twisted or deformed bars and bends them readily to conform to any of the emergencies that the concrete constructing engineer frequently has to meet. Furthermore, it permits of more efficiency in reinforcement, because the contractor is able to stretch his bars around anchors to exact sketch. It is simple in construction and can be operated by an unskilled laborer. It will bend hooks on rods in one operation, a fact which undoubtedly will appeal to contractors. It is manufactured by the Electric Welding Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Positive Light Distribution.

IN almost no place is perfect light distribution so essential as in the draughting rooms of architects' offices. There must be no shadow upon the draughting-board to cause the pen to err, and for that reason there has been a demand for some kind of a light distributing agency or appliance that would bring the light down to the draughting-board and at the same time shield the eyes of the operator and remove him from the heat radiation of the globe.

We reproduce a scene in a well known architect's office where a special type of bracket, manufactured by the Faries Manufacturing Co., Decatur, Ill., has been installed. It shows how much a difficult light problem was met. These brackets permit the delivery of strong, flickerless and shadowless light by means of attachable brackets that put the light where it is most needed.

THE NEW STANDARD OF FIRE—RESISTING CONSTRUCTION

The National Fire Protection Association's Model Specifications for Ideal Structures Treats of Piers, Columns and Elevator Shafts.

An Interview (Concluded) With
IRA H. WOOLSON
Consulting Engineer, National Board of Fire Underwriters.

In last week's issue Professor Woolson described for the benefit of Record and Guide readers the purpose and the results of the study and research conducted for almost a year by a special committee appointed by the National Fire Protection Association. The new standard of building construction as approved by Mr. Woolson's committee is concluded in this number.—Editor.

PIERS must be built of hard-burned brick laid in cement mortar, or of concrete. If bonds are used in brick piers they shall consist of perforated rolled steel plates, ⅜ of an inch thick. Each plate shall be full size of the pier, and shall be perforated by three 15/16-inch holes to each square foot area of the plate. No holes to be nearer than 3 inches to the outside edge. If capstones are used, they must be protected against fire by 4 inches of fireproofing. If a pier exceeds in height seven times its lease dimension, it shall comply with the best practice in column design.

Columns.

Columns must be constructed of steel, or reinforced concrete. If of structural steel they shall be protected by at least 4 inches of brickwork, with the space between the brick and metal solidly filled with mortar, concrete, or masonry; or by 4 inches of hard-burned terra cotta tile, with spaces between tile and metal solidly filled the same as for brickwork; or the columns may be surrounded by substantial steel reinforcement and this envelope solidly filled with concrete, and protected on the outside with 2 inches of concrete. The total thickness of the concrete protection shall be not less than 4 inches. If terra cotta is used, it will be secured by substantial interior anchors or by other equivalent method. All column protection shall make close connection to the floor construction at top and bottom.

No pipes, ducts or wires shall be placed within the area of the required fireproofing of columns or beams, and plaster must not be considered a part of any required fireproofing.

In reinforced concrete columns, the metal shall be protected from fire by a minimum of 2 inches of concrete. The effective area of such columns will be taken as the area within the protective covering. In hooped columns it will be taken as the area within the hooping. The corners of the columns must be beveled or rounded.

Stair, Elevator and Other Shafts.

Floor and roof construction in the terms of these specifications shall consist of a series of steel or reinforced concrete beams, with interposed arches or slabs of such material and construction as shall meet the requirements of the fire test previously specified. All structural members must be protected at all points by at least 1½ inches of fireproofing. All parts of girders shall be protected by at least 2 inches, and of beams by at least 1½ inches of fireproofing, which shall be securely attached to the girders and beams by substantial steel reinforcement, or other suitable means of anchorage. Reinforcement used in floor slab or arch construction must be protected by at least one inch of fireproofing.

All structures above the roof must be of approved fire-resistive construction. Roof coverings also shall be of approved materials.

Stair, Elevator and Other Shafts.

When the walls of shafts are self-supporting, they are required to be built of hard-burned brick laid in cement mortar, or of concrete. The thickness shall be not less than 8 inches. When shaft walls are supported in each story they may be of hard-burned brick, or terra cotta, 8 inches thick. Terra cotta tile shall have three cells in its thickness, with shells and webs not less than ¾-inch thick, and all wall openings shall be reinforced by structural steel members securely attached to the floor construction above and below.

Brick and tile shall be set with flush joints of cement mortar. All such shafts must extend at least 3 feet above the roof.

Stairways and Smokeproof Towers.

All stairs, landings, and openings shall have an unobstructed width throughout, of at least 44 inches, except that hand rails may project not more than 3½ inches into such width on each side. There shall be not more than 12 feet vertically between landings. Furthermore, all stair landings shall be large enough to permit opening of the doors without interfering with traffic within the enclosure. Suitable hand rails or banisters must be provided on each side of each flight of stairs. The treads and risers shall be uniform throughout, and the treads constructed and maintained in a manner to prevent persons from slipping. No winders are allowed.

All stairways shall extend to the street level, and open on the street, or to an unobstructed passageway, affording safe egress to a street. Smokeproof towers do not communicate directly with the building on any floor. Entrance to these enclosures from floors above the street level shall be either from external balconies, or through vestibules entirely open to the outer air, and from floors below the street level through ventilated covered areaways or vestibules.

Balconies must be of substantial fire-resistive construction, with solid floors properly drained. The sides of open air stairs and balconies must be protected by sheet metal, or other suitable solid material, to a height of not less than three feet. One smokeproof tower may serve two buildings if the size of the enclosure and capacity of the stairway is adequate for the number of occupants to be accommodated.

All exits shall be provided with approved self-closing fire doors, arranged to open in the direction of the traffic toward the outside of building. The doors shall be equipped with hardware that can be operated in the direction of the exit, without the use of keys. The doors of smokeproof towers must have a panel of wired glass not more than one-third of the area of the doorway. All exits shall be properly and clearly marked both day and night.

All stairway enclosures, smokeproof towers, and passageways leading to the street, shall be lighted by electricity, the current for same to be obtained from a source outside the building. A vent shall be provided over each stairway or elevator shaft equal in area to at least three-quarters of the horizontal area of the shaft, and be protected with approved incombustible skylights or side windows. Vent shafts shall be protected at the top by approved ventilating skylights or louvres.

All other openings in roofs or roof structures shall be provided with approved skylights, doors or windows.

Room, Hall and Fire Exit Partitions.

Partitions, if any, sub-dividing allowable areas, shall be not less than 4 inches thick of solid or hollow brick, 4 inches of two-cell terra cotta, 4 inches of hollow or 2½ inches solid metal lath and cement plaster, or other approved incombustible material and construction. All studding shall be of steel, and the lath shall be of galvanized steel. Doors and windows in such partitions must be incombustible.

Protection of Exterior Wall Openings.

All openings in fire walls shall be equipped with approved automatic fire doors on each side of the wall. If an opening in a fire wall is made to serve as an emergency exit, it shall not exceed 48 square feet in area, and a self-closing door shall be substituted for one of the automatic fire doors.

Interior openings to ventilating shafts shall be protected by approved automatic trap doors or shutters. Openings in stair, elevator, and other shaft enclosures shall be protected by approved self-closing fire doors. All fire doors shall be mounted with approved wrought iron or steel hardware, and shall be securely attached to the wall or partition, or to approved frames anchored thereto. Interior windows in stair or elevator shafts are prohibited.

Belt openings, and chutes for merchandise or waste are prohibited unless completely enclosed in fireproof shafts, and all openings protected by approved self-closing fire doors. Openings for power shafts shall be provided preferably to fit shaft neat in wall or floor.

Drainage.

Each floor shall be impervious to water, and arranged to drain away from floor openings, provision being made for discharging water at the rate of 300 gallons per minute per each 1,000 square feet of floor area. The lowest floor of the building shall be drained to a sump chamber, which is provided with adequate facilities for removing surplus water therefrom.

The room or rooms in which boilers and all power and operating machinery are located, shall be separated from other portions of the building by an 8-inch wall, having an approved fire door at each opening; and such rooms shall not have direct communication with the floor above. All boilers shall be separated from operating machinery by 8-inch walls, with approved fire doors at openings.

The installation of standpipe and sprinkler equipment shall conform to the requirements of the standards established by this Association. All electrical equipment in the ideal building must be installed in accordance with the requirements of the National Electrical Code.

Express Company's Project.

Another step was taken this week in the gigantic project of erecting a new building for the American Express Company, James C. Fargo, president, at 63-65 Broadway, when plans were filed in the Building Department by Renwick, Aspinwall & Tucker, 320 Fifth avenue, architects. According to the preliminary estimates the new structure, which will be 32 stories high, will cost about $1,800;000, but this figure is only an approximate one.

The property to be improved is the site now occupied by the express company and has a frontage in Broadway of 75 feet, a depth of 209 feet, with a frontage on Trinity Place. The facade will be of brick limestone and terra cotta and in a measure will conform architecturally with the Adams Express Company Building now nearing completion on the plot to the south.

The Cauldwell-Wingate Company, 381 Fourth avenue, has been awarded the general contract. It is the present intention of the American Express Company to occupy about ten stories in the new building, and the balance will be offered for rent. It is unlikely that active work will be commenced for some time to come, at least a year, though this plan may be changed and operations started sooner.

William C. Fargo, secretary of the company, and a large stockholder, said to a representative of the Record and Guide this week: "We have no intention of erecting our new building at the present time, and in all probability nothing will be done this year. The filing of plans has no special significance, though it will serve to eliminate several problems which will have to be faced with the Building Department. The present situation does not warrant the erection of such a large structure."

Court House Plans Approved.

With the understanding that the plans of Guy Lowell for the new County Court House will be further modified, in accordance with a report made by three disinterested architects, the Supreme Court Justices decided on Thursday not to any longer withhold their approval. The plans had already been tentatively approved by the Court House Board.

The circular plan is retained, but the interior will be changed. The inner wall of the top story will be set back from the lower wall of the inner court. So far as the exterior elevations are concerned the plan remains unchanged.

The disinterested committee of experts—H. J. Hardenbergh, Bertram Goodhue and William Woodbridge—was appointed to go over every detail. They reported to the judges several days ago that with a few further modifications the plan would be an admirable one.

No action was taken as to the site. The Board of Estimate has yet to make the necessary appropriation for the construction, and it is almost certain Mayor Mitchel will oppose the expenditure of so large a sum of money for building it this year.

To Figure New Grand Central Building

Warren & Wetmore, 70 East 45th street, will be ready to receive estimates in about two weeks for the twenty-story business building which the Vanderbilt Concourse Corporation of 103 Park avenue (David R. Todd, president, James M. Todd, secretary and Harmon V. Swart treasurer) is to erect at the southwest corner of Vanderbilt avenue and 45th street, on a plot 100.5x90.8 feet. The property is owned by the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad and the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company, and has been leased to the corporation for a term of twenty-one years. The cost of the building will be around $600,000.

Contract For Church of Notre Dame.

Norcross Brothers, 103 Park avenue, received the general contract this week to erect the new church on Morningside Drive, 114th and 115th streets, for the Notre Dame Roman Catholic Church, 40 Morningside Drive, of which the Rev. Father T. Wucher is the pastor. The building will be strictly fireproof 100x160 feet in size, and cost about $800,000. The exterior will be of limestone with cornices, pediments and column caps, richly ornamented. Cross & Cross, 10 East 47th street, are the architects. For illustration and further particulars of the building see issue of Record and Guide, February 28, 1914, page 399.

Whitney Co. Get $1,000,000 Contract.

The Central Branch Y. M. C. A., 11 Bond street, Brooklyn (George D. Pratt, chairman of building committee), has awarded to the Whitney Company, 1 Liberty street, the general contract for its new home on Hanson Place, extending from Fort Green Pl. to South Elliott Place, which is to cost about $1,000,000. The construction will probably be of limestone and terra cotta, twelve stories in height, about 200x100 feet in size. Trowbridge & Ackerman, 62 West 45th street, are the architects.

Activity in Brooklyn Dwellings.

Peter J. Collins, builder, of 610 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn, is having plans prepared by Frank C. Collins, of Carrere & Hastings office, 225 Fifth avenue, Manhattan, for eighteen brick and stucco dwellings, 17x45 feet, three stories each, to be erected in Brooklyn. The site will be announced within a few days. About $160,000 will be expended.

Terminal Improvements at L. I. City.

Interests connected with the Degnon Construction Company have been developing a manufacturing and shipping terminal district by filling in the low-lands on either side of a tributary of Newtown Creek in Long Island City. A large acreage has in the course of years been made available for buildings, several of which are now in course of erection, including the Loose-Wiles Biscuit Company's buildings and the Ever Ready National Carbon Company's building. One of the biscuit company's buildings has been nearly completed by the Turner Construction Company, and the second building for the same concern has been started. This week the Raymond Concrete Pile Company began driving piles for the foundation of the Ever Ready Company's plant.

The Degnon Railroad and Terminal Improvement Company has now received a franchise from the Board of Estimate to enable it to construct and operate an industrial railroad through its property to connect with the Long Island Railroad and the Sunnyside yard of the Pennsylvania, with permission to cross the neighboring streets at twenty-three points. This will give the property the best possible shipping facilities by both rail and water. Considering that the location is close to the Queensboro Bridge and that every factory can have its own wharf and its own railroad switch, the combination of facilities is most unusual.

The motive power for the industrial railroad will be electricity after January 1, 1916, and until then steam will be used.

The Degnons will make an initial payment of $15,000 to the city, besides an annual sum which will start at $2,500 and grow to $10,000. A few years from now will see great transformation come over these lands which were once ranked as almost useless. At the upper end of Newtown Creek plans are being laid for a terminal in the Palmer interests.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

QUEENS SHOWS GREATEST GAIN IN BUILDING PLANS FILED—BROOKLYN LOSES LEAD AS QUEENS MOVES FORWARD—VALUES LOW

New Jersey Suburbs Slow in Placing Spring Orders—Brick in Sacrifice Sale

QUEENS developed the lead in volume of new building construction during the last six days. Brooklyn opened weak, with Bronx striving to regain the ascendency in new building construction it lost some time ago. The East Jersey suburbs also felt the spirit of spring progress, but the building material dealers are still following a conservative policy in buying, and the inquiry from that section has not impressed the wholesale market here as being even up to normal. The movement of material into Queens and Brooklyn is much improved, but Bronx is almost as slow as East Jersey in placing commodity business. Brick was the only exception. It had a good week.

Linseed oil has moved up another cent, making the price now 54 and 55 cents for city raw, American seed. Common brick continues to be firm, but prices are yet not stable. Lumber is divided. Some lines are reported to be exceptionally active on inquiry and order, while others are almost like drugs on the market. Whether this lack of activity reflects the effect of the new fire limits operative since the first of the year in Newark where frame construction has until recent years been the rule rather than the exception, an over-supplied market is not yet apparent, but heavy timber continues to show the greatest activity while building orders only show nominal mid-winter activity. A fortnight of building weather would permit a more accurate survey.

Current inquiry in the building material market presaged no marked change in the volume of realty improvements in any part of the metropolitan district for the next two months. The quantity of material to move under orders so far taken is less than that of last spring. Competent estimates place this shortage at twenty per cent., a figure, however, that easily could be converted into a gain should a fairer percentage of the plans filed actually go ahead. Taking the district as a whole, the sentiment on the floor of the Building Material Exchange is that the year will show a gradually strengthening building movement, because of the reports coming in from realty interests that the renting season is closing exceptionally active, and that money is loosening on interest rates and in volume.

Rumors in the steel market this week were to the effect that the volume of inquiries for structural steel was such as to give little hope at this time, at least, for an upward movement in prices after the first of the year. The inclination among the steel interests is to encourage new business as much as possible, even if profits have to be curtailed to some extent to do so instead of trying to force higher prices at a time when the building situation is making its recovery conservatively instead of vigorously as was anticipated at the first of the year.

January and February volumes were encouraging, and March will show an improvement over these two months, but second half inquiry has not yet developed so much strength as the steel producers would like to see. In the meantime the mill capacities will be maintained at the 65 per cent. base, which has been ruling since the middle of February in the hope that after the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission has been handed down late in June or early in July, there will be an immediate rebound which will readjust steel prices upward and carry with the strengthening tone all other staple building commodities.

The best opinion in the building material markets deplores any attempt to manipulate prices, and consumers coming into the market for materials or figures are finding and will continue to expect dealers and distributors to show a disposition to meet them half way.

LINSEED OIL UP.

Advance of Another Cent Reported in Market.

LINSEED oil has stiffened in this market to such an extent that as the week closes the basis of 54 and 55 cents has hardened so as to indicate a new price of a cent higher by the close of the week. As the Record and Guide goes to press the actual change has not taken place, but was expected to be announced hourly.

The cause of the pending advance was ascribed to a heavier demand from paint manufacturers who are reporting an early, active season with indications for a continued strengthening movement.

LUMBER.

Heavy Timber Still Holds Lead Over Building Orders.

SPRUCE has passed through a period of light demand; and though offerings from the East by cargo have been very light, the West Virginia spruce shippers showed a decidedly weak front earlier in the month. Much of the lost ground has since been regained. The outlook is for steady improvement, as the next two months is the best season for West Virginia spruce in this market.

The position of spruce throughout southern New England has held strong, and while slightly below the basis of a year ago, there has been no difficulty in finding an outlet for all available shipments at a remunerative figure. This will mean that New York must bid somewhat above the closing figure of November when it comes into the market for supplies. The market can be quoted today nominally at $20 to $24 for spruce cargoes, with very little offering for prompt delivery.

Hemlock has shown little activity during the month; and though the Pennsylvania base price for New York City delivery has held uniformly at $24.50, transactions have been light. As the West Virginia shippers have been offering this class of lumber here on a basis of $22, they have taken much of the business that has been placed. As the warm weather approaches this product will either be sold out at the low figure or will move up to the level of Pennsylvania boards and share the market with the latter.

North Carolina pine has developed no changes in the selling prices, but the heavy snow and cold weather throughout the North Carolina pine belt gave production a severe jolt; but as the general demand kept up, the result of the month's activities show the shippers in better strategic position in the relation of supply and demand.

Long leaf yellow pine has aparently made few if any gains within the month and stocks at the water shipping points are generally reported as quite heavy. Vessel rates have returned to a summer basis and there is ample volume of tonnage available for the cargo mills. The interior long leaf mills, as well as the short leaf mills in Arkansas, have been booking orders more freely, particularly for flooring, partitions and car siding, and are exhibiting a stronger tendency to hold up their price list than at any time in the past six months.

White pine has shown a fair volume of business booked during the month, but a very slow movement of stock from the eastern distributing yards, as the Tonawandas, Burlington and other northern markets were brought to a standstill by the recent accumulation of snow.

THE STONE MARKET.

Some Signs of Spring Activity—Changes Millford.

STONE is improving in inquiry, but contracts still seem to hang fire. Competition is keen, the supply for current business moderate and prices are shaved to very close margins in all departments. The trade is optimistic regarding the future of 1914, this feeliug of confidence being expressed frequently in closer organization and greater efficiency.

Conspicuous in this connection was the change reported in the personnel of the Milford Pink Granite Company, which has long been an important factor in the New York stone market. The George Dodds & Sons Granite Company, of Xenia, Ohio, have purchased 200 acres of granite land and the so-called East plant and Norcross plant of the Milford Pink Granite Company, of Milford, Mass. This includes all of the present equipment, such as cranes, derricks and cutting sheds. The Dodds Company is the owner of the Victoria White Granite Company, of Xenia, Ohio, and is extensively interested in the structural granite business. The large sheds which were used as cutting sheds by the Norcross Construction Company will be removed and in their place will be erected a modern cutting shed for structural work, roofed in, with all improved machinery, in which our cutters can work all winter. An office building also will be erected.

These negotiations had scarcely been completed when the plant of the Victoria White Granite Company, at Keene, N. J., owned by the Dodds Company, was two-thirds destroyed by fire, with a total loss of about $25,000. Work was immediately started rebuilding the shed, and a 100 h.p. electric motor has been ordered to replace the one destroyed. The fire threw 134 men out of work temporarily.

BARGAIN WEEK IN BRICK.

All Covered Hudsons Gone—First 1914 Barges in—Six Opens Left.

HUDSON common brick closed the biggest week in half a year Thursday night when a total of thirty-four barges went off the wholesale market. Every covered barge in the city was disposed of and practically three million Gnybco brick were unloaded, which represents about sixty per cent. of the total number actually ridden to jobs. Four barge loads came in, representing the first arrivals for the year, and last night the first tow started for Haverstraw. On Monday night the first tow of the season will start for Newburgh, taking up the empties that have been accumulating here all winter. Two boatloads arrived here yesterday morning.

It has been a long time since the common brick market has had the concerted cooperation of all interests simultaneously and for that reason the last week in March, 1914, will go down in local building material history as a most conspicuous one, mainly because practically 15,000,000 brick went out of the wholesale market, all practically within three days. But aside from volume as a distinctive feature in the incident the price range also helps to make it memorable. Manufacturers came into the market with one accord to dispose of their brick at prices considerably below the Record and Guide's quotations of a week ago.

The situation was forced upon the market by protracted winter weather ending abruptly in a warm spell and a heavy reserve supply up the river. It was not possible to control shipments when manufacturers were hungry both for barges and cash and the only alternative was to break the market here and clean up the winter's supply before the shipments began to come in from up river. Counts show a large quantity of brick along the Hudson between Haverstraw and Kingston, and the Raritan interests are in splendid shape to make an aggressive selling campaign in this district, if settled building weather prevails for a reasonable period.

In a measure this movement of brick reflects the splendid gain in building plans filed reported in this department last week. That the strengthening tone of the brick and other departments of the building material market will be sustained seems evident from the volume of new building plans filed this week. These show a gain of ten for Richmond and a full recovery for Queens which went behiud Brooklyn last week. The jump in that borough ran from 93 to 199 this week while Bronx indicated an improvement of three; slight, but nevertheless a gain. Manhattan developed strength in value incidental to the filing of plans for the American Express Building that will cost $1,800,000. Brooklyn's new plan filings this week shows a loss of 45 with value of $709,200, as compared with $1,134,200 for last week. Brick prices probably will remain at conservative levels for a while.

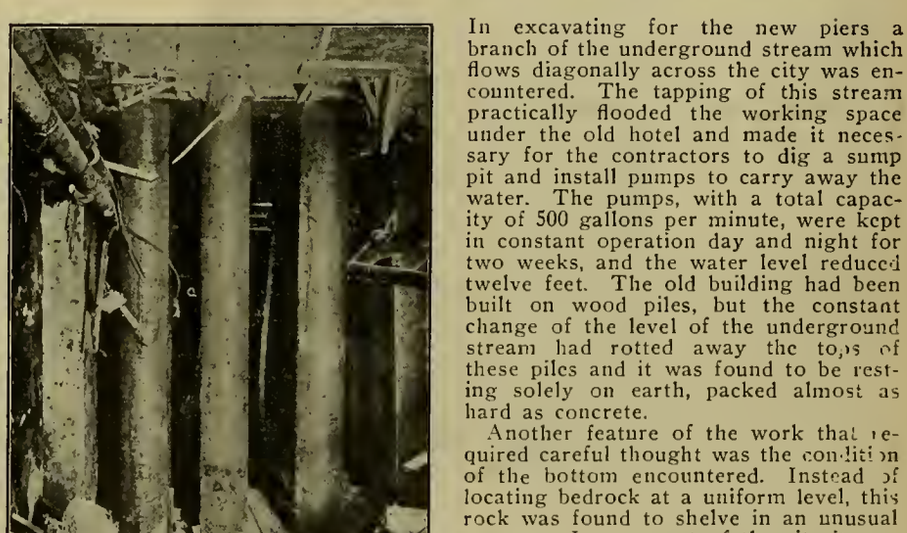
UNIQUE FOUNDATION FEAT SAVES TIME

Preparing Excavations for New Structure on Old Victoria Hotel Site, While Wreckers Are Demolishing Hostelry — Engineering Problems Present Unusual Difficulties



THE fact that time is one of New York's most valuable commodities is responsible for an engineering feat never before attempted. The foundations for a new twenty-story mercantile building are being placed while the original building on the site is being demolished. The building in question is to be built for the 230 Fifth Avenue Corporation (Johnson-Kahn Company), and is to occupy the site of the old Victoria Hotel at Broadway, Fifth avenue and 27th street, from plans by Schwartz & Gross, architects, of 347 Fifth avenue. The placing of these foundations simultaneously with the wrecking of the building it is calculated to save at least two months of time to the owners, and makes possible the completion of the new building by January 1, 1915, in time for the rental season.

STARTING PILES THROUGH FLOOR.

The Underpinning and Foundation Company, 290 Broadway, took the contract for the work and gave a guarantee for its completion in the time specified. The problem was one which involved difficulties of a serious and various character. The new building will rest on 680 steel and reinforced piles. These piles are grouped in 63 piers, each one composed of from 9 to 14 piles, sunk to a maximum depth of 50 feet below curb level, and capped with a slab of concrete. The piles being used are known as the "Hercules" steel piles, and are made and placed under patents held by the Underpinning and Foundation Company. They are heavy steel cylinders, with walls ⅜ inch thick and an inside diameter of 12 inches. These cylinders are driven to bedrock by means of a 3,000-pound hammer. When the piles reach bedrock they are blown clear of sand, mud and loose rock by means of a compressed air blast under a pressure of 150 pounds to the square inch. The mud and water displaced by this terrific blast sometimes rises to a height of 150 feet, and rock weighing as much as fifty pounds has been blown from a distance of 40 feet below the surface. After the cylinders are cleaned out and the bedrock exposed their tops are cut off at exactly the same level. An oxy-acetylene torch is used in this operation and the work is accomplished with dispatch. Each steel shell is next filled with concrete reinforced with three 2-inch square rods running the entire length of the pile. Every rod is capable of sustaining a weight of six tons, and the completed pile will sustain 100 tons, allowing 20 tons as a margin of safety.

A TYPICAL FLOOR PLAN.

DRIVING PILES IN CELLAR.

Chief among the numerous difficulties involved in the present operation was the fact that the piles had to be placed while the greater part of the old building was standing. To do this it was found necessary to cut away the floors in the first and second floors directly over the locations of the proposed piers. The driving hammer is slung by chains from the beams of the third floor. Another problem encountered was water. In excavating for the new piers a branch of the underground stream which flows diagonally across the city was encountered. The tapping of this stream practically flooded the working space under the old hotel and made it necessary for the contractors to dig a sump pit and install pumps to carry away the water. The pumps, with a total capacity of 500 gallons per minute, were kept in constant operation day and night for two weeks, and the water level reduced twelve feet. The old building had been built on wood piles, but the constant change of the level of the underground stream had rotted away the tops of these piles and it was found to be resting solely on earth, packed almost as hard as concrete.

Another feature of the work that required careful thought was the condition of the bottom encountered. Instead of locating bedrock at a uniform level, this rock was found to shelve in an unusual manner. In one part of the site it was found to be less than five feet below the old cellar level, while in the nearest pier to this place, or about a distance of 20 feet, the contractors were forced to sink piles forty-five feet before bedrock was found. This condition made much drilling and blasting necessary, which was a delicate operation considering that the old buildings above was in process of demolition.

All the power used, both steam, electricity and compressed air, is being generated by the old power plant for years used to serve the hotel.

The work of driving the piles for this foundation was started March 9, and the entire foundation will be completed and ready for steel grillage by April 10. A force of 150 men, in day and night shifts, have been employed from the time the work was started. An open pit foundation would have taken at least four months to install, so it is easily seen that much valuable time has been saved.

The new building will occupy practically the entire plot, with an area of 20,000 square feet, with a frontage of 62 feet on Fifth avenue, 254 feet in 27th street, and 106 feet on Broadway. This unbroken floor area makes it an exceptional one for display and salesroom purposes. The building is designed with a minimum of columns on the Fifth avenue and Broadway sides, giving a clear floor space 40 x 40 feet. The facades will be built of Quincy granite at the base and matt-glazed terra cotta above.

Eleven high speed electric elevators will be installed and the car doors and all hatchways will be provided with the latest safety devices for control and the prevention of accidents. In the 27th street front a driveway 60 feet wide is being provided so as to allow for the speedy handling of freight and to reduce sidewalk obstruction. Four elevators will connect this driveway with the cellar, in which will be installed the latest package chutes and freight handling devices.

The first floor will be arranged for stores, and an entrance and arcade 19 feet wide is being provided, extending from Broadway through to Fifth avenue. The entrance hall and arcade will be finished in rich marbles and mosaics. Fire proof stairways, four of which are entirely enclosed, and smoke proof and one outside stair reached from two different points of the building, with steel window frames, sash and trim and a sprinkler equipment with a 100 per cent. efficiency will complete the fire prevention equipment that will make this a model of its kind.

WATERFRONT DEVELOPMENT A PROBLEM

Owners Careful in Making Improvements, Fearing Possible Mistakes—Must Anticipate Future Growth of Commerce — Double-Decked Pier at Bush Terminal.

PROBABLY the only class of realty which does not allow for considerable expansion is that which borders on the waterfront. In fact, the available space is almost a known quantity, though in some sections of Greater New York the water frontage is in its virgin state and it is difficult to predict just what its development will be. In all of the boroughs the City has acquired large tracts of land, which have been taken out of the market. A notable example is the stretch along the Hudson River, north of Seventy-second street, which is under the jurisdiction of the Department of Parks.

The result of the city's acquisitions necessarily reduces the supply, and owners of the remaining tracts are careful of their development, fearing possible mistakes. Much agitation has been going on during the last five years in regard to water frontages and many schemes have been devised for their improvement. Commissions have been appointed and the importers and exporters have taken up the matter seriously, in order to prevent a possible diversion of trade to other ports of entry. At the present time there is a gigantic waterfront development being created in the Hunt's Point section of The Bronx, Frederick Johnson being one of the prime movers in the undertaking. This follows upon the success which has been met at Bush Terminal enterprise, in South Brooklyn. The Borough of Richmond has also its waterfront terminal, at St. George, and if present plans materialize the development will be enlarged considerably.

THE WATERFRONTAGE AT THE BUSH TERMINAL.

New Double-Decked Pier.

At the Bush Terminal a large two-story pier has been complted. Seven months were spent in its construction, and from the start about four hundred men were employed in the operation. The cost was placed at $1,000,000. The pier has a length of 1,400 feet and is 270 feet wide, with a height of over fifty feet. Every foot of space on upper and lower floors are available and the joint area is about fifteen acres. Down the middle of the lower floor runs a double-track railroad for the movement of standard freight cars, a miniature railroad system, with switches, crossovers and signals. At the bulkhead entrance the tracks connect with the Bush Terminal Railroad, which in turn connects with all the trunk lines entering New York.

Dredging in the slips has been carried to fifty feet and six trans-Atlantic liners can be berthed at one time. The double-deck feature of the pier permits the loading and unloading of a vessel simultaneously. If this is not desired, one floor can be used for the assembling of outgoing cargo, where it will not interfere with the goods being discharged. Saving in time is the result. The American-Hawaiian Line has leased the pier and a representative of the Bush Terminal Company made the statement this week that in view of the revised sailing schedules, not less than 1,500,000 tons of freight will be handled annually at the dock.

Fire-Prevention Methods.

The structure is fireproof throughout; metal being used wherever possible. In addition an automatic sprinkler system has been installed on both floors. The ten service stations in the terminal are also connected up with this pier as they are also with the 130 warehouses and six other piers of the trminal.

The foundation piles were driven 30 feet beneath low water and sawed off just below the surface. Grouped in lots of ten and twenty, they are capped with concrete hoods, measuring 11 feet each way, on which are set the steel columns supporting the super-structure. The lower floor is paved with chemically treated asphalt block to make it firm and fireproof. The upper floor consists of five over-laping layers of the heaviest tar paper, one inch of yellow pine planking and another inch of maple on top. Melted tar was worked into the seams to make the flooring waterproof and air-tight. The upper floor is supported by large steel girders.

Much interest has been manifested in this pier and several records were broken during its construction. The engineering and supervising work was done by Clair Foster, one of the vice-presidents of the Bush Terminal Company. William Higginson, architect, drew the plans.

Provides for Tenant's Needs.

R. E. Ireton, Director of the Educational Bureau of the company, made an address at the Y. M. C. A., Twenty-third street branch, on March 27, and said in part:

"Everything that a manufacturer or distributor needs for the successful and orderly conduct of his business can be found at the Bush Terminal. Spacious, well lighted service buildings are provided, 130 of them, with railroad sidings paralleling the structure. In this way cartage charges are saved and vexatious delays avoided. Porterage charges are also eliminated and promptness and dispatch in handling freight assured.

"On account of the fireproof construction of the buildings the fire insurance premiums are less than under ordinary conditions. The tenant has at his disposal live steam, gas, water and electric current for use in his operations. His incoming freight is delivered to him at the New York rate and his outgoing shipments are taken from him by the Bush Terminal Company, acting as the accredited agent of all the trunk lines.

"The docks of the company are large enough to accommodate at one time fifty sizable steamships of seventeen distinct lines plying between New York and every port on the globe. The Bush Treminal development was planned with farseeing vision, but its layout is such that the facilities may be increased at any time without disturbing the present arrangements."

TENDENCIES IN REAL ESTATE IMPROVEMENT

Decline of Residential Construction in Manhattan—The Growing Preference for Low Buildings as Dependable Income Producers

A NUMBER of analytical tables have been compiled from the records of plans filed last year in the Manhattan Bureau of Buildings under the direction of Supt. Rudolph P. Miller. Some of these tables give an answer to the question, for what purposes were the buildings intended, and what was the relative numerical proportion between one class and another? While multiple dwellings, or "tenements," constituted 27 per cent. of the total number of buildings, they formed by no means so large a part of the whole number as in former years. Legally, their classification as "tenements" survives, but few real tenements are any longer built in Manhattan, and the National Housing Association has dropped the classification altogether.

The average cost of apartment houses has greatly increased during the decade, and last year the total estimated cost of all apartment houses amounted to 30 per cent. of the sum appropriated for buildings of all classes. In the previous three years the appropriation for apartment houses was but 28.5 per cent. of the total estimated cost of all kinds of construction. The extent to which residential construction has fallen off on Manhattan Island will be perceived from a comparison of this figure with the total amount expended for the construction of apartments during the eleven years, 1902 to 1912 inclusive, when the appropriation was 48.8 per cent. of the cost of all new buildings. The year 1911 was remarkable for the large amount of heavy construction, but this class of work has lessened considerably since, which is one reason for slightly larger percentage of expenditure for apartment houses last year.

Average Cost of Buildings.

The average estimated cost of the tenements planned in the borough last year was $140,931, to compare with $167,318 for the year 1912, and with $79,313 as the average cost of the tenement houses during the whole period from 1902 to 1912 inclusive. This means that while the average operation was smaller last year than in the previous one, yet the average multi-family house of to-day is decidedly a larger proposition than it was ten years ago. The following table shows how the average cost of all classes of buildings has grown:

	1913	1912	Average 1902 to 1912 inclusive
Tenements	140,931	167,318	79,313
Hotels	138,500	598,750	426,435
Mercantile buildings.	250,338	264,508	132,114
All buildings.....	128,200	155,666	84,950

Dwelling house construction in this borough has ceased altogether as a speculative operation. The last row of dwellings was erected years ago. Only 32 private houses were planned last year, whereas formerly hundreds were erected every year. The recession in dwelling-house work for contractors is, however, more apparent than real, as many operations officially classed as "alterations," really amount to a general reconstruction, as when only the sidewalls and floor beams are retained, all the rest of the work being new.

There was a marked increase last year in the number of buildings to be altered. The increase is noted among all classes of buildings, as if estates managers had determined, before sending a good building to the scrap heap, to see if it could not be altered so as to produce a larger income until such time as the need of an entirely new building on the site will be made more obvious. For years old buildings on desirable sites had been treated with little or no consideration.

Demolitions.

Last year 750 buildings of all kinds were sacrificed in Manhattan and 1,023 the year before. The demolitions of last year took off the map 341 dwellings, 194 tenements, 147 business buildings, 4 hotels, 33 public edifices and 31 miscellaneous structures. The average number of buildings annually destroyed during the period from 1902 to 1912 inclusive was 1,451. Among the more interesting structures removed was the southern half of the Astor House at Broadway and Vesey street, the Drexel-Morgan Building at Wall and Broad and the New York Day Nursery and Children's Hospital on Lexington avenue at 51st street.

In many instances of late, under a new architectural advice seemingly, a larger number of old buildings have been remodeled into very satisfactory income producers. Thus, there was an increase of 39 per cent. last year over 1912 in the number of dwellings that were the subject of alterations; or in other words, alterations were made to 229 dwellings more than in the previous year. Superintendent Miller says these figures when considered with statistics showing the gradual decrease in the number of new dwellings erected, as already pointed out, prove that the borough is being more and more devoted to business: for the alterations are for the most part with the intent of adapting them to business purposes.

Theatre Construction.

While there was a small increase in the number of new dwellings erected last year, there was a decrease in all other classes of construction except for places of amusement. The growth of this class of construction has steadily increased since the year 1908. One hundred new places of amusement were projected in 1913, as against 78 in 1912, and compared with an annual average of 32.3 from 1902 to 1912 inclusive..

The decrease in number and cost of buildings of other kinds in 1913, as compared with the record made in the previous year is represented by the following table:

	Decrease in number.	Decrease in estimated cost.
Tenements	13%	26%
Hotels	16%	80%
Stores and lofts.....	53%	55%
Office buildings.....	58%	35%
Factories	50%	23%
Stables and garages...	9%	29%

The largest number of buildings in course of erection in Manhattan at any one date last year was about 1,060 at the first of September. The number of alterations going on last year at the height of the season was about 450.

Low Buildings Preferred.

Only fifteen buildings more than twelve stories high were proposed in 1913, as against 33 in 1912. The twelve-story buildings numbered but 33 last year, as compared with 82 planned during the previous year. The increase in the number of low buildings was quite marked, sufficiently so to suggest the thought that more consideration is being given to low buildings than heretofore, and that this change is due not only to the agitation against extremely high buildings in unjustifiable locations but it also is a result of investigating the economics of the question.

Oftentimes a low building will return a much higher rate of income on the investment from rentals than a skyscraper would on the same site, and several low buildings can be erected for the cost of one skycraper. A large real estate developer recently expressed the opinion to the writer that the erection of extremely high buildings without discrimination was an erroneous policy. He said the type of building which should form the basis of an operation for a business building was but two stories high, to start with. It should have foundations capable of sustaining more than two stories, but the other stories would not be added until there were unmistakable assurances of their continued occupancy.

Along upper Broadway have been erected in the last few years a number of buildings with heavy foundations but with only two stories. "Taxpayers," they are called, but they are excellent income payers as a class. After a while, when conditions warrant the change, they can be carried higher. As a rule the two-story building with stores on the first floor and offices on the second is a decidedly safe proposition on any principal avenue in any locality where there is any considerable amount of trading. It is not a commendable civic ornament, but it is more beautiful than a billboard and exerts a decidedly better influence on surrounding real estate values.

The 367 low buildings planned in 1912 represented 65.2 per cent. of all the buildings planned in the borough, and the 327 low buildings of last year represented 76.8 per cent. of all the buildings planned. The average height of all the buildings erected in the borough was but five stories.

Of the 78 fireproof business buildings planned last year 13 were twelve stories high, two had thirteen stories, three had seventeen stories, three were twenty stories high, one was a skyscraper of 22 stories and one was planned with 28 stories. The tallest of all was a 52-story project for which a site has not yet been purchased.

Congressmen to Inspect Port.

For the purpose of becoming better informed as to the Harbor of New York and its value to the shipping business of the nation, the Rivers and Harbors Committee of the House of Representatives will visit New York City this week or the week following. Mayor Mitchel, when he appeared before the committee last January, asking an appropriation for the improvement of the Harbor of New York, extended the invitation, which has been accepted. The North Side Board of Trade, which has for years been working for the improvement of the Bronx waterfront, will aid in the entertainment of the committee.

H. B. Walker, chairman of the Committee on Harbors, Docks and Terminals of the Merchants' Association, suggested to the Mayor in a recent open letter the appointment of a board of engineers, as a port commission, to take up the question of waterfront improvement and submit a report to the Board of Estimate. Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith is of the opinion that the terminal committee of that body is familiar with all the details of port development, and can effectively manage without reopening the whole question again through a new commission.

—The new Bronx County Register's office is more than paying its way and demonstrating its worth and usefulness to the community.

RECENT ACTION ON MEASURES AT ALBANY

Bill Amending Real Property Law, Affecting Past Due Mortgages, Passes Legislature—Many Measures Await Signature of Governor Glynn

OF interest to property owners is the bill which was introduced recently at Albany by Senator Carswell, and passed by the Legislature last week, known as Section 275 of the Real Property Law. The measure provides that the holder of a mortgage, which is past due, upon demand by the owner of the land upon which it is a lien, and the payment or tender of the amount due and the usual fee for drawing the paper, shall deliver an assignment in lieu of a satisfaction piece to any person or corporation named by the owner of the land. This assignment, however, may be without recourse to the assignor in any event. George A. Fleury, President of the United States Title Guarantee & Trust Company, suggested the bill, which was drawn by Charles G. Stevenson, one of the attorneys of the company.

The new amendment to the present law will settle a point which has led sometimes to more or less hardship and injustice where a mortgagee arbitrarily refused to give an assignment when his mortgage was paid off, thus compelling the borrower to continue his loan with him or be obliged to pay another mortgage recording tax upon executing a mortgage to the new lender.

As the law now stands, there is no way to compel the holder of a mortgage to deliver an assignment in place of a satisfaction piece, but if this bill is enacted into law, it will be possible for an owner of realty to change his creditor without being compelled to pay another tax upon the loan on which he has already paid one.

NATIONAL FIRE-SUPPRESSION

Not a Work for Amateurs, But Rather for Trained Experts—Hazards of Construction

By ROBERT D. KOHN

IN an address delivered before the City Club recently I discussed the subject of fire-prevention in its national and local aspects and emphasized the fact that fire-suppression is not a work for amateurs, but rather is a science that can properly be handled only by trained experts. There actually is and has been for some time a science of fire-prevention, and its scope is so extensive that it already is far beyond the capacity of any untrained person properly to grasp its application to the building problems of the day.

In this field of fire prevention, particularly in the matter of inspections, the problem that has to be met is, to be sure, no different than that which confronts almost every field of reform, namely, to bring in the expert and put him in authority. It is remarkable to note how many of our public offices are held by men who have no technical training, even though the office is one dealing with scientific, engineering or structural problems. Our commissioners of public works are still lawyers; our bridge commissioners are almost everywhere still lawyers; our commissioners of highways are lawyers. I am glad to know that the fire commissioner is not a lawyer. Our technical men are said to be lacking in executive ability and political knowledge, and our officials we know are lacking in technical knowledge, and there you are.

In this question of making fire-prevention work effective the public has to be considered. Men are continuing to put up buildings badly constructed, dangerous to life and to other property, putting such structures up mainly through ignorance.

The difference in cost of fireproof and non-fireproof construction has been gradually cut down. To-day, for structures of any importance, this difference is so small that the owner would be amply recompensed for the increased cost by the lower insurance rate. In buildings where the cost of fireproof construction is still prohibitive there are simple protection devices which can be introduced to make a non-fireproof building almost as safe as one of steel and concrete. It is of course in the great manufacturing plants of this country that the science of fire protection has been carried farther along.

The device of the fire division wall has been used for 30 or 40 years in manufacturing buildings, but for some reason or other has hardly come into general use in any other class of structures. It is perfectly feasible to use such a division wall even in a large country house—a wall that would keep a fire in one part of the building from spreading to the other.

The study of fire protection is a study of hazards. One of our committees has recently divided these hazards under six headings: The first, the hazard of exposures. It does not suffice that a man keep his own house in order, build his building with all modern devices, but he must protect himself against his neighbors. In certain parts of Europe an owner is financially responsible for damage done to his neighbor's property by a fire that originates in his own house. Had we laws of that character established here, perhaps we would be more careful. As it is the hazards of exposure are to be fought off by uncombustible exterior walls, roofs, windows, glass, etc., that will resist danger from flame coming from the outside.

In the second place, we have the hazard due to the construction of the building—the more or less inflammable nature of the materials and workmanship.

In the third place, the hazard of height and area—a hazard decreased by the subdivision of areas by fire stops, fire walls, enclosures and subdivisions. As far as height is concerned, we all realize that a building above six stories is dependent on its own apparatus for the suppression of a fire.

In the fourth place, there is among others the hazard due to the greater or less efficiency of the fire-fighting equipment of the building, fire hose, extinguishers and sprinklers.

Fifthly, there is the hazard due to the occupancy of a structure, the machinery, the character of the contents, whether they be combustible, whether explosive or of an inflammable nature, and whether or not the place is kept clean and in order; the housekeeping hazard in other words—one of the most important of all, what is called the "moral hazard," is a part of this, and finally, we have the effect upon the hazard of the character of public fire protection afforded by the city or community.

FAVOR NEW "L" STATION.

Owners Want Structure at Sixth Avenue and Forty-Sixth Street.

A delegation from the Fifth Avenue Association, headed by Robert Grier Cooke, president, representing business and professional men in the district, met the officials of the Interborough Rapid Transit Co. at their offices at 165 Broadway, Thursday afternoon. The delegation was organized for the purpose of presenting a formal request to the company for the erection of a new station at 46th street and Sixth avenue. The members of the association were met by Theodore P. Shonts, president, and Frank Hedley, vice-president and general manager of the company, and the question was discussed at great length.

Mr. Shonts, however, gave very small encouragement to the representatives of the association, feeling that a station was not needed and that the Interborough would not build one.

Merchants, property owners and others interested in the section at and adjacent to 46th street and Sixth avenue have instituted an active campaign to compel the Interborough Rapid Transit Company erect a new station on the elevated system at the junction of these thoroughfares. Owners of mercantile properties and retail concerns conducting business in the Fifth avenue section, between 42d and 50th streets, almost without exception feel that a station erected midway between these streets would be beneficial to their business interests from every point of view. At present the haul between these stations, particularly as the section is essentially a business one, is, in their opinion, too long; and, while another stop would accommodate many patrons of the line, it would make no material difference in the running time of trains to persons travelling farther north or south. A new station located at 46th street would also reduce the great congestion now noticed in rush hours at the 42d street station.

The territory which would be served by the proposed station includes a number of the largest and best retail shops in the city, besides hotels, theatres and many loft buildings devoted to light manufacturing. The shops and theatres especially are visited daily by many people from the upper West Side, to whom a new station would be a great saving of time and energy. To the employers of these shops and lofts the saving of time and distance would mean even more.

The Fifth Avenue Association, where the idea of a new station was crystalized, has been very active in advocating its erection. Robert Grier Cooke, president of the association, sent out about one thousand letters to property owners and tenants of the district, asking their opinions of the project as well as for their support, and the replies received have been gratifying.

Arthur J. Salomon, secretary of the Forty-second Street Association, stated: "The association has held no meeting at which the matter was discussed, but I personally am strongly in favor of the improvement, and will assist in any manner to bring it about."

WORK ON SUBWAY STARTED.

Ground Broken in White Plains Avenue For Elevated Section.

Breaking of ground last week after a wait of seven years, for the new elevated railroad which will be a continuation of the present subway system from 181st street to the City Line, has caused real estate men to regard the future of the benefited section with optimism. That considerable interest is manifested in properties along the line of the proposed extension is evident from the numerous recent purchases. Notable among the buyers have been the American Real Estate Co., Jacob Ruppert and James Butler. While there is no unanimity of opinion as to what class of building will become predominant, the general prevailing impression is that another apartment house center will be created.

White Plains avenue, with its present width and business places and its future chain of railroad stations, will become a principal thoroughfare of that section of the Bronx. Many desirable corners all along the line, and adjacent to proposed stations, have been sold and eventually will be improved with buildings to meet the need.

A. L. Babcock of the American Real Estate Company, in discussing the section this week, said:

"The company owns six hundred and fifty lots fronting on White Plains avenue, Boston road, Allerton avenue, and in the adjacent streets. The property is adaptable for apartment house construction, perhaps with a type of house of the standard five and six-story variety. The properties which we own at Burke avenue, 219th street, 226th street, 233d street and Nereid avenue are available for business buildings and our company is ready to construct such buildings for desirable tenants. There is already a very large community along White Plains avenue from Gun Hill road to the City Line and there will be a very big increase upon the completion of the road."

John H. Behrmann, who is treasurer of the committee which is arranging for a celebration early in May, said:

"There is a lively demand for property contiguous or adjacent to White Plains avenue. Builders are preparing plans for erection of six and eight-family houses. They are holding off from commencement of building operations, preferring to wait until the railroad is actually constructed."

"It is my opinion," said Charles E. Reid, secretary of the North Side Board of Trade, "that the new transit line will be of great value to the East Bronx. The widening of White Plains avenue a few years ago made a marked impression on the locality, and now with rapid transit in sight there should be renewed realty activity."

"The section will develop into an apartment house center," said Hugo Wabst, "which will follow along the same lines as Hunts Point. Owners and residents here have the advantages of two of the finest parks in the state, New York Zoological and Pelham Bay Parks. There is a steady demand for four and five-room apartments which cannot be met and there are practically no vacancies. The generally prevailing price at present is $5 a room."

Real estate in Brooklyn manifests much life and activity this spring. The sales market is reporting interesting transactions frequently, and the plans for building operations are running far ahead of last year's record for total estimated cost.

According to statistics compiled by Stuyvesant Fish, the average man, woman and child in the city of New York is carrying a tax burden amounting in 1913 to $40.37, which represents an increase of 49 per cent. in ten years. From this it will be perceived that the head of a family of five pays for the privilege of being governed $201.85. Directly or indirectly he pays the Federal government $7.02 per capita, to the State $5.10 per capita, and to the city $28.25 for each member of his family. "Is it not time," asks Mr. Fish, that we should begin the slow process of educating the whole people to the awful waste which is going on in the government—Federal, State and municipal?" Yes, it's time, but we hope the lesson will be quickly learned.

The Murray Hill restrictions are again to be tested in the courts to see if they hold against the construction of an apartment house on the site of the old South Church. The case is believed to turn on the question whether a modern apartment house comes within the classification of a dwelling. In the West 71st street case of Kitching vs. Brown, the court held that a covenant made in the year 1873 against a "tenement" house, as a tenement then was, could not stand against the erection of a modern apartment house of the year 1902. In other words, the modern apartment house is not a "tenement" in the old sense. But is it legally a "dwelling" within the meaning of the Murray Hill covenant? As an agreed-on state of facts will be presented to the court, the judicial answer will be extremely interesting.

The Needs of the Port of New York.

The Record and Guide sympathizes with Dock Commissioner Smith in his opposition to the appointment of a new commission to study the question of New York terminals. Surely such a commission will merely cause unnecessary delay and expense. The need of the port of New York and the most economical and efficient methods of meeting them have been exhaustively studied by many different engineers and municipal officials during the past five years. A plan has been worked out which is in the main satisfactory. It deals comprehensively with the whole problem—as comprehensively, that is, as the limited financial resources of the city will permit.

It includes the construction of a modern steamship terminal capacious enough to accommodate the largest ocean liners, which reach the port of New York, a marginal freight railroad in South Brooklyn, a settlement of the vexed problems which have arisen over the handling of freight in Manhattan, and the entrances of railroad cars both from the North and from the West, and a similarly careful treatment of the Bronx and of other parts of the port. The appointment of a new technical commission would result in the abandonment of much of this valuable work. It would mean a prolonged investigation, and probably the eventual recommendation of a plan which could not be very much of an improvement on the existing plan. The problem which confronts the city is quite as much financial as it is engineering. Any body of technical experts would not take sufficient account of the financial conditions to which any available scheme must necessarily conform.

Instead of another investigation and another period of delay and conflicting counsels, what the city needs is energetic and speedy action. If there is one act to which the administration is pledged, it is to the quick and final adoption of a satisfactory plan of port and terminal improvement. The different members of the administration have made a prolonged study of the problem. They are really more competent to solve it than would be a board of technical experts. There has been enough investigation, discussion and recrimination. What the city needs and what public opinion is demanding is the adoption and the early carrying out of the official plan.

Public Dissatisfaction With Legislatures.

The record of the performances of the Legislature at Albany during the past winter affords a peculiarly flagrant illustration of the incompetency of that body as the protector and promoter of the public interest of the most populous State in the country. Both by what it has done, by what it has left undone, and by its methods and manners, the Legislature has exposed itself as wholly incompetent to legislate for seven million people. The performance began in December, when the Legislature for the preceding year met and passed without consideration or discussion, and by an almost unanimous vote a series of bills embodying certain desirable political and economic reforms. The passage of these bills might be supposed to be a creditable performance, inasmuch as the new laws will be approved by the better public opinion of the State; but, desirable as was the legislation, its adoption reflected no credit on the Legislature.

That body merely accepted a series of bills which it had formerly rejected with the utmost deliberation because the Governor believed their passage to be necessary to the future success of the party. If they had any real reason for opposing direct primaries and the Massachusetts ballot on previous occasions, why did these convictions vanish so completely and so suddenly? As a matter of fact, the Legislature was in both instances merely taking orders—in one case from the machine and in the other from the Governor. The existing legislative body at its regular session failed in every respect to do what was demanded of it. It has not arranged for a thorough and impartial investigation of the admitted corruption in state executive departments. Its whole time has been occupied with partisan squabbles between the Senate and the Assembly, the result of which has been the failure of almost all desirable legislation. The two houses were not able even to transact the necessary business of the State, and have imposed upon the taxpayers the wholly unnecessary expense of an extra session.

At the urgent solicitation of various outside reform associations a few good bills have been passed, but these bills did not originate with the legislators, and their passage did not mean any approval or understanding of the policy involved by its members. If they had received orders of a different kind, or had been subjected to a different kind of influence, they might just as well have voted the other way. The two bills, in which New York had most reason to be interested, were defeated. One of these bills proposed to restore to the Police Commissioner real authority over the members of his force, and the other proposed to reorganize the office of Commissioner of Accounts so as to make it a really effectual agency of the fulfillment by the Mayor of his legal responsibilities. The failure of these bills merely meant that the municipal administration was unable to bring to bear upon the Legislature the right kind of influence. It is no wonder that discontent with the behavior of legislatures is still upon the increase. In the case of New York State the work of the new constitutional convention, in case it is called, will be very much affected by the recent absurd performances of the legislative body of this State.

A Better Feeling Coming.

While no decisive improvement in activity or outlook has taken place, a somewhat better feeling seems to be coming over the real estate market. A little more business is being transacted, as is only natural this time of year. Brokers report an increased demand for property—slight but perceptible. Very little speculative building is being undertaken, but certain large estates are taking advantage of low prices to put up new buildings. In a few cases, also, operators who are unusually well provided with capital are buying lots and financing apartment houses in the expectation that living space will become scarce by next fall.

When all is said, however, a decidedly smaller amount of business is being transacted this year than was transacted last year; and the year 1913 during its currency was not considered precisely a matter for jubilation. It is evident that while the market is likely to recover from now on, the recovery will be slow, and it will not extend throughout all parts of the city and all different kinds of property. Any revival of building activity will be preceded by a speculative movement in the property affected, which is likely to appear late during the current year.

Whether the increasing inactivity in general business will have a depressing or a helpful effect on New York real estate has not yet appeared. The chief cause of business depression is the reluctance of capital under prevailing conditions to engage in new enterprises. But in that case uninvested capital ought to accumulate very rapidly, and an increasing proportion of it will seek investment in real estate. The scarcity of new business promotions has a most depressing effect on the business of the rest of the country than on the business of New York. Even if the slackening of general business continues, it should not prevent the revival in New York real estate and building operations which is due next year.

The Importance of 149th Street.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

One hundred and forty-ninth street is destined to be the most important business street of the Bronx, and should be the center of the department store trade. To ensure this, everything should be done to make it a better street, and three or four large department stores, besides those which are located there now, should be built in the vicinity of 149th street and Third avenue, so that when the housewives of the Bronx, Mt. Vernon and Yonkers begin to think of shopping, they will "think Bronx" instead of some other place, as they do now.

The day has gone by when business men think it wise to remove as far from their competitors as possible. It is better for everyone that they centralize in one locality. I think that eventually a subway or moving sidewalk will be necessary across 149th street from the New York Central Station at Park avenue to the subway express at Eastern Boulevard. Either of these means would make it necessary that 149th street west of Third avenue be graded by cutting off the hill at Cortlandt avenue, and filling in the hill at Morris avenue. This should be done now, when the cost of such grading will be comparatively cheap, and before costly buildings are erected.

As part of the general improvement of this street—but not necessarily connected with the grading of it—would be the creation of an open square bounded by Third avenue on the west, 148th street on the south, Bergen avenue on the east, and 149th street on the north. This could be done by purchasing the triangle between 148th and 149th streets and Willis and Bergen avenues.

While the cost will be considerable, it would be more than made up by the increased values of the property around the square and in the immediate neighborhood. Large department stores then could be erected around the square, so as to make it a shopping center which would not only attract all the people of the Bronx, but of neighboring places as well. For a Boulevard Through Central Park.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

In an editorial in your issue of March 28 you speak of the need for improvement in the transverse service under Central Park between the east and the west sides. The suggestion which I would make is not new. In fact, it was submitted to the Park Department and to the Water Department during the preceding administration, and met with some recognition from Commissioner Stover, but not with much from Commissioner Thompson.

It is that the transverse road between East 85th street and West 86th street should be widened, so as to take in all of the space between the two reservoirs, and if necessary, even cutting off the northeast corner of the southerly reservoir, but retaining the bridle path and the walk along the south end of the northerly reservoir. It should then be improved as a sightly crosstown boulevard.

In this connection I understand that the Park Department looks forward to the abandonment by the Water Department of the southerly reservoir. I would also call attention to the fact that 86th street is approximately half way between the north and south ends of Central Park. This, taken together with the growing importance of East 86th street as a business and amusement center, and the connections which are, or will be, available at this street with the elevated and subway lines, seems to make this particular transverse road most appropriate for such improvement.

The traffic through this road by vehicles, street-car passengers and foot passengers is often heavy. The resulting conditions where automobiles attempt to pass the street cars is dangerous, and has led to many accidents, and to some fatalities. To those who must use it the road is most attractive. On one day it is excessively damp, and on another excessively dusty, because the water and dirt from the adjacent park drain into it. It is cut off from all prospect of the surrounding park by stables, walls and tunnels. I feel, therefore, that this is a point where a very small sacrifice of the scenic beauties of the park could properly be made, and result in the great improvement of traffic conditions.

The Taxable Value of Buildings.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

The interesting letter of Hon. Cyrus C. Miller, in your edition of February 14, in which he claims that the untaxing of buildings would make realty investments uncertain may justify another letter on the uncertainty, the injustice and practical dishonesty inherent in our system of taxation, because of the taxing of buildings and other improvements. There are records extant in this city which show assessments on realty for the purpose of taxation which run from 25 per cent. to 500 per cent. of the consideration for which the property was sold. But suppose the variances run only from 60 per cent. to 120 per cent. of the value of the property, what effect does this discrimination have on values?

To make real estate a safe and certain investment, the grantor and grantee should have access to tax records, which, under the full value assessment law, would be some guide in realty matters. A man forced to sell and a purchaser ready to buy will come nearer the "meeting of minds" if both know that the fair market value is expressed in the consideration.

Now, the assessment of buildings, on anything like a just basis, is an impossibility, for the assessor cannot be found who can estimate with any degree of exactness the market or taxable value of a building. No more can he do it in assessing other improvements, and the various forms of personal property. He may take his field book, his maps, his tape line and his Hoffman rule and use his very best judgment and his factors in fixing the value of a building, and yet the problem is so absolutely difficult, from the point of view of justice in taxation, that it baffles him at every point. If Mr. Miller were a member of a club in which the dues were fifty dollars per annum, what would he say if some members were permitted to pay only 25 per cent. of the dues while others were mulcted to the extent of 200 per cent.? Such a club could not last very long.

Mr. Miller has injected into the interesting discussion concerning the wisdom of untaxing buildings the statements that the annual increase in New York City valuations is only 3 per cent. and that this amount is lower than the interest if the same money were loaned. But Mr. Miller forgets that one cannot eat his cake and have it, too, and that when one loans his money at any rate of interest he loses the use and control of his money for the interest period. But when one invests his money in land, and the land increases in value, he is in control of and can use the land and yet gain the increase. Mr. Miller's comparison is unhappy; and still more so is his argument that owners of real estate should be allowed to recuperate themselves from depreciation in their buildings through use, by the annual increase in the value of the land.

No owner of a truck or sewing machine, or thresher or railroad car, who is daily receiving money for its use, if he does not use it himself, can expect that the wear and tear depreciation will be made up to him by the community through a defective system of taxation, by donations, or in any imaginable way. And the owners of such property, all taxable under our system, have a right to object to making good to the owners of real estate the depreciation of buildings through use, by taxing their personal property.

But the untaxing of buildings would do more to make realty investments certain than almost any measure yet proposed. With our block and lot system we can make every property owner a guarantor of such certainty. By posting maps of the streets, blocks and lots of each school district in the school houses therein, with the assessed value of the lot of each owner plainly marked thereon, the owners of realty would examine such maps and would be able by comparing the assessments thereon to check up the assessors' work and thus bring about an assessment fair to all. But this cannot be done with buildings. For buildings that look alike outside vary greatly in value. One building may be erected under a carte blanche order to the architect to spare no expense, so that the best material, day labor and workmanship of the best artisans may go into the building. Another building, on the same block, similar in size and appearance, can be erected in skimping and cheap contract labor for half the money.

But who can distinguish the exact difference in cost between these buildings. One building, ten years old, may, by hard usage, be almost worn out, while another building, no younger, alongside, by careful use, may be almost as good as new. Do tape lines and factors help the assessor to carefully discriminate in finding his "full value?"

Mr. Miller perhaps has not considered the important fact that the taxpayer (owner of real estate) must pay the cost of assessing the property and of collecting the tax. This cost he finds in the budget and the tax rate, about which he is continually complaining, but without excuse so long as he advocates the present clumsy system. If he prefers to pay ten men for work that one man could do under a better system he should not complain if some of the other realty owners object to it.

Committee to Meet the Mayor.

Representatives of all the boroughs, comprising a sub-committee of the recently formed Realty Owners of the City of New York, met at the rooms of the New York County Bar Association on Tuesday, to arrange for an interview with Mayor Mitchel regarding the scope and personnel of the proposed Tax Commission.

Charles H. Fuller, president of the Brooklyn League, was elected chairman, and the committee discussed various suggestions made with reference to the new commission, and outlined a plan of action. Those present were Allan Robinson and Henry Bloch for Manhattan; Edward B. Boynton and James L. Wells for the Bronx; Charles H. Fuller and Frank Harvey Field for Brooklyn; E. R. Macdougal and H. S. Johnston for Queens, and William S. Van Clief and Henry B. Morrison for Richmond.

Commission Form of Government.

The list of cities that are governed by a commission rather than by a Mayor with a board of aldermen is steadily growing, and now includes: Atlantic City, Birmingham, Chattanooga, Dallas, Dayton, Denver, Des Moines, Duluth, Erie, Fort Worth, Galveston, Harrisburg, Haverhill, Houston, Jersey City, Kansas City, Lawrence, Lincoln, Lowell, Lynn, Memphis, Mobile, Montgomery, New Orleans, Oakland, Oklahoma City, Omaha, Passaic, Portland, Ore., Sacramento, Salt Lake City, San Diego, Sioux City, Spokane, Springfield, Ill., Springfield, O., St. Paul, Tacoma, Taunton, Topeka, Trenton.

The Mechanics and Traders Library.

The directors of the General Society of Mechanics and Traders are contemplating selling all but the reference section of their library of one hundred thousand volumes. President Lewis W. Harrington says the time has come when it should be disposed of and the money that is now spent for it applied to filling the vacant schoolrooms with pupils from the waiting list. Established in 1835, the Mechanics and Traders' Library was one of the first to circulate books here. According to the annual report, the society is unable with present facilities to receive all who apply for instruction.

Brokerage Sales, Auctions, Foreclosure Suits, Building Loans, etc., Together With Brief Personal Items.

Market Conditions Remain Stationary

New Real Estate Regulations.

REGULATIONS which define more specifically the commissions chargeable for selling, leasing and managing property were posted this week by the Real Estate Board, to take the place of those heretofore in effect. A committee of eighteen members, with Lawrence B. Elliman as chairman, drew up the new code and the board adopted it on March 10. Changes in geographical divisions and professional practice, caused by the growth of the city, made the revision necessary. Forming part of the committee's report, which the board adopted as a whole, is a series of rules for business conduct between members, and between members and clients.

Regulations For Private Sales.

The following commissions shall be chargeable on private sales:

For selling real estate within the limits of the Borough of Manhattan 1%

For selling real estate within the limits of the Boroughs of The Bronx, Brooklyn and Queens, 1% to 2½%

For selling leaseholds within the limits of the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx (according to agreement) .....2½% to 5%

No sales shall be made for a commission of less than $100.

Should the title of property prove imperfect, whereby a sale cannot be consummated, the claim for commission shall not be invalidated thereby.

Brokerage shall be deemed to be earned when the price and terms are arranged between buyer and seller, the minds of both parties having fully met.

It is understood that all real estate commissions are due and payable as soon as agreements are executed by both parties thereto.

Leasing and Management of Property.

For general management of property 5%

Renting for a term of one year or under, a commission shall be charged on an amount equal to one year's rental, of.....2½%

For renting private dwellings or apartments for a season, commission on the total rent to be paid of 2½%

If the term be for a period of over one year and less than three, a commission shall be charged on the average yearly rental of....2½%

Renting for a term of three years and upward on gross rental..... 1%

Renting country property, first year 5%

Renting each subsequent year to same party 2½%

The commission on leases for over three years shall be based on the rent actually to be paid, including any additional sums to be paid as interest on the cost of any improvements made by the owner except by special agreement in writing.

Should there be a clause in the lease for a term under twenty years, giving the lessee the option of a further term, and should he avail himself of such option, the owner shall pay the broker the commission due on the rent to be paid during such extension.

Should there be a clause in the lease giving the lessee the option to purchase the property, and should he avail himself of such option, the owner shall pay the agent the difference between the commission already paid and that to which the agent would be entitled had the original transaction been a sale, except by special agreement.

No rental shall be made for a commission of less than $25, except between members of the Real Estate Board of New York.

Owners Examine Pending Bills.

Ira J. Ettinger, special representative of the United Real Estate Owners' Associations at Albany, made his report Thursday to the Law and Legislative Committee of that body at Arion Hall. The report covered in detail the action taken by the Legislature on all measures directed against real estate. Of the many bills which property owners thought prejudicial to their interests, practically none succeeded in being enacted into law.

"At the opening of the legislative session," said Henry Bloch, at the close of the meeting, "things looked particularly ominous for the owner of real estate. The horizon seemed clouded with a threatening storm, since the many single tax bills, the increment tax bills, the tenement house and factory bills, and many others were all directed against the ownership of real estate. Fortunately, the legislators ascertained that the realty interests had at last asserted themselves and were watching what was going on. The largest representation of owners of real estate ever known in New York attended Albany in a body and with one blow killed all of the so-called single tax bills. Our organization had a special representative at all the sessions of the Legislature, and the vigilance of the taxpayers was certainly well repaid in the defeat of all the obnoxious bills."

East Tremont Taxpayers Meet.

At the recent meeting of the East Tremont Taxpayers' Association, the members discussed a number of matters of local importance. Their efforts for the establishment of a post office branch in West Farms has been rewarded by the winning over of Postmaster Morgan, who has favorably recommended the project to the Washington authorities. The association voted to commend various city officials for their efficient service, and among other things asked for the removal of the old grand stand in Crotona Park, which has become a public nuisance.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

Several large deals were closed last week, the more notable involving a "million-dollar" apartment house on Park avenue; also a vacant plot on Washington Heights, and a group of houses in West 30th street which are to become the site of a new hotel. Generally, throughout the week the market continued the same dullness which has been its chief characteristic of late. While in the last few weeks there appeared to be an upward tendency which gave cause to optimism, even these slightly improved conditions have not been consistently maintained. From time to time the outlook appears to brighten, one week by evidence of heavier investment buying and another week by a large increase in the number of plans filed for new buildings. But substantially, the situation remains unchanged.

While money is still scarce and lending institutions are not too eager to advance large sums, several good building loans placed this week in well-located sections of the city may have an encouraging effect on this branch of the market.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 26, as against 28 last week and 39 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 9, compared with 9 last week, and 16 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 17, as compared with 19 last week and 23 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 180, as against 124 last week, 19 having stated considerations totalling $719,214. Mortgages recorded this week numbered 101, involving $2,103,619, as against 67 last week, aggregating $1,958.711.

From the Bronx 19 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 18 last week and 18 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $882,997, compared with $930,006 last week, making a total since January 1 of $11,039,447. The figure for the corresponding week last year was $2,148,106, and the total from January 1, 1913, to April 5, 1913, was $16,247,061.

Deal in West 14th Street.

Edward J. Kelly, of Henry Kelly & Sons, dealers in fruits and vegetables, at 413-419 West 14th street, signed preliminary contracts this week for the purchase of that property from John Gillen. The property comprises four three-story Astor leasehold buildings on plot 85x103 feet. Final contracts are expected to be signed this morning. Henry Brady was the broker in the sale.

New Hotel for Women.

Hotel Irvin (Inc.) bought from Hugh Getty and Mrs. Maria S. Simpson three houses at 308-312 West 30th street, on plot 66x98.9, through the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Co. A twelve-story hotel will be erected which will provide moderate-priced homes for working girls. The project is philanthropic, and among those interested are Mrs. Richard Irvin, Mrs. William Herbert, Charles H. Strong, W. Fellowes Morgan and Chase Mellen.

Large Deal Pending.

Negotiations are pending for the sale of the one-time Hotel Metropole, a six-story building, on plot 60x100.5, just east of Broadway, to the Vaudeville Comedy Club, now at 107 West 44th street. The property is untenanted and has been in the Hornby family since 1856. Francis Morey, secretary of the Vaudeville Comedy Club, informed the Record and Guide that while nothing definite had been done with reference to the purchase, final action might be taken early next week.

Operators Still Buying.

Harris and Maurice Mandelbaum have purchased sixteen additional lots, 400x100, in the south side of 161st street, 140 feet west of Fort Washington avenue, from the Loyal L. Smith estate, through the J. Romaine Brown Co. Last week the Messrs. Mandelbaum bought sixteen lots in 160th street, and have within a few weeks obtained seventy-two lots from the Smith estate, part of which have been resold to builders for apartment house construction.

Dr. Bishop Buys on Park Avenue.

Northcote Realty Co., Edgar A. Levy, president, has sold to Dr. James Bishop the new twelve-story apartment house at the southeast corner of Park avenue and 62d street, 80.5x117.6, held at $1,250,000. WILMORE REALTY CO., Franklin C. Albee, president, is the buyer of the "Florham," the 7-sty apartment house at 256 West 97th st, reported sold in the Record and Guide of March 14. The property was sold by Electus T. Backus for the estate of George J. Smith.

CHURCH OF THE DIVINE INSPIRATION has taken title to 20 West 91st st, a 4-sty dwelling, from the Runline Realty & Construction Co., and will convert it into a church. The stated consideration was $26,000. The congregation has been holding services in Carnegie Lyceum.

THE TITLE GUARANTEE and Trust Co. loaned $70,000 on a first mortgage to William Storrs Wells, on the 4-sty dwelling at 16 East 57th st, 20.8x100, for three years at 5 per cent.; also $50,000 on first mortgage to Caroline L. Landon on the 3-sty dwelling at 19 East 43d st, 25x100, for 5 years.

NEW YORK CENTRAL RAILROAD, which occupies most of the block bounded by 9th and 10th avs, between 32d and 33d sts, as a freight station, bought 389 10th av from Hugh P. Skelly. There are now only four small parcels at the southwest corner of 10th av and 33d st on that block not owned by the company.

JAMES F. WALDRON and Samuel Freedman, for many years associated with the late Alexander Wilson at 489 5th av, announce that they have formed a partnership under the firm name of Waldron & Freedman, for the purpose of continuing the real estate and insurance business at that address.

EDWARD H. MOUNT is the buyer of the southwest corner of Broadway and 20th st, which parcel formed part of the store of Lord & Taylor. Mr. Mount already held a one-third interest in the property, so that his purchase comprises the remaining two-thirds interest held by Catherine Deane and Millie C. Blagden.

DEEDS were exchanged yesterday at the office of Graves & Miles, attorneys, in the deal reported last November involving the purchase of the West Street Building, 90 West st, by the American Sugar Refining Co. The latter gave in part payment waterfront properties in Brooklyn. The transaction, which involved about $5,000,000, was negotiated by Thomas P. Graham and Frederick D. Kalley.

SMITH & PHELPS have obtained for the Robins Consto. Co. a first mortgage loan of $10,000 on the vacant plot, 131x100, on the west side of Jackson av, 118.9 south of 142d st; also for Minnie Reiffert $3,000 on the vacant plot, 45x100, on the south side of Westchester av beginning 31.4 west of White Plains av; and for Louise M. H. Tannon $3,000 on the 2-sty frame dwelling, 26x80, on the east side of Bathgate av beginning 60 ft south of Tremont av.

WM. LUSTGARTEN & CO., William Lustgarten, president, recently incorporated, has taken over all of the holdings of The Ralph Wallach Co. and the interests of Mr. Wallach and Mr. Newman. The company is incorporated for $200,000. All of the capital stock has been paid up. The Rudolph Wallach Co. will hereafter devote itself exclusively to building construction, and Joseph H. Newman remains president.

UNITY CLUB OF BROOKLYN will hold a meeting tomorrow to ratify the contract of purchase made by its committee for the Union League Club property on Bedford av at Grant sq. The price agreed upon between the club representatives and the Dime Savings Bank is said to be $125,000, including equipment. The Unity Club is reported to have received a good offer from the Brooklyn Chapter, Loyal Order of Moose, for their clubhouse at Franklin av and Hancock st.

WILLIAM F. BAKER obtained for the Olds Construction Co. a loan of $143,000 for the erection of a 6-sty elevator apartment house at the northeast corner of 7th av and 110th st, 71x100; also for the Jacobs Construction Co. $160,000 for a similar structure in the south side of 151st st, 150x100, 150 ft. west of Broadway; and $190,000 for the Coast Construction Co. for a 9-sty apartment house in the south side of West 87th st, 67x100, 100 ft. west of West End av.

VARIOUS RUMORS during the week involved the "Cleburne," the 14-sty apartment house occupying the block front in the north side of 165th st, between Broadway and West End av. The report had it that George Noakes was the buyer, but nothing definite could be learned except that the Federal Court would have to sanction the deal, since the property formerly belonged to Harry Schiff. J. Clarence Davies is receiver for Mr. Schiff, and he could not be reached yesterday. His presence in the Federal Court Building, however, may indicate that permission of that court to sell may soon be obtained.

MRS. PETER COOPER HEWITT has taken title from J. Sergeant Cram as executor of the estate of Henry A. Cram, to the vacant plot, 125x83x175, occupying the west side of the junction of Lenox av and St. Nicholas av, from Cathedral Parkway to 111th st. For many years Mrs. Hewitt resided at 11 Lexington av and it is believed that the trade invasion in the neighborhood of Gramercy Park has caused her to seek a new home further north. It is reported that she will build a residence on the newly purchased plot. Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish and Mrs. Lloyd Warren are also said to be considering home building in the neighborhood. The brokers in the present transaction were Davis & Robinson.

AUCTION SALES OF WEEK.

Except where otherwise stated, the properties offered were in foreclosure. Adjournments of legal sales to next week are noted under Advertised Legal Sales.

* Indicates that the property described was bid in for the plaintiff's account.

The Austin Market.

General conditions were reflected in the Exchange Salesrooms where parties in interest bought twenty-six of the thirty-seven offerings. Six were either withdrawn or adjourned, and outside bidders obtained only five. Earl A. Smith paid $65,400 for the tenements at 260-264 Broome street, and Jesse J. Culling obtained the tenement at 422 West 45th street on a bid of $20,700.

For the coming week, dwellings and apartment houses will comprise the bulk of the offerings. Several holdings of the New York Real Estate Security Co. will be sold by the M. Morgenthau, Jr., Co., and Bryan L. Kennedy, who will also offer the 10-story "Hotel Langdon" at 157-159 West 124th street. Joseph P. Day offers the 7-story loft building at 179-183 Wooster street, among a variety of other properties.

WAYS OF RENTING SPACE IN AN OFFICE BUILDING

BY WILLIAM H. GLASS, Secretary Geo. R. Read & Co.

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager for the American Real Estate Co.

THE renting of space in office buildings during the last few years has developed to such an extent that it requires men and work of a specialized character. It is a form of salesmanship which requires demonstrating to a keen business man the fact that he requires the particular space which you are offering. The man who engages in this work must have the best of dispositions, a ready smile and the ability to make the prospect feel that the man is not only endeavoring to rent the space and earn a commission, but that he is also looking after the best interests of the prospective tenant. He must be a good judge of human nature, a good mind reader, and have the ability to secure the right tenant for the right space.

The renting man must be a hard worker, not easily discouraged, but willing to smile at his failures, always hoping that ultimately he will obtain the tenant. Above all things, the renting man must have confidenec in the property he is offering. He must not only be thoroughly familiar with the space which he wishes to lease but must know everything about the building in which the space is located, thus being able to point out to the prospective tenant the advantages that his building has over others.

Methods of Renting.

The methods of renting an office building—either one that is new or one that has been established for some time—are by personal call, letter canvass and advertising. Of these, it is my belief that one cannot succeed without the other. Letter canvass and advertising bring the leads, make it possible for a personal call and bring the agent into contact with the prospect, and give the opportunity of offering the desired space. In a new building project, long before the building is completed, the plan of campaign should be mapped out and the public familiarized with the desirability of the building as to location, construction, layout and other features. The more work done along these lines before the completion of the building, the more that building will have a proper start, it being remembered that the carrying charges of an office building during construction, and the operating expenses after completion, are tremendous, and unless there is activity in renting the space, the owners quite properly will be dissatisfied. The best building will not rent itself, but requires the services of a good office renting man, who, in my opinion, is not made, but born.

Constant Personal Representation.

In renting a new building it is necessary to have a good man on the premises at all times, as well as to have the district in which the building is located thoroughly circularized or visited. The outside men should make a personal call on individuals and concerns in the section, whose names are procured in various ways. Letters should be sent out, descriptive of the building, and be accompanied by a pamphlet showing illustrations of the building, together with diagrams of the several floors. The renting man should keep in close touch with the prospective tenant, and maintain an interest in the building. He should at all times be careful not to force the prospect too much and not to confuse him with too many offerings.

The needs of the prospective tenant should be first ascertained, and then the renting man should constitute himself the representative of the tenant, aiding him by showing how the office could be sub-divided for his needs, and, if necessary, how his furniture can be placed to the best advantage. This will give the tenant the minimum amount of space for his needs, which often prevents dissatisfaction on the tenant's part if he finds that he has more space than he really requires. The renting man may not be rewarded in every case with a rental, but he has at least given the impression to the tenant that he has been aiding him, and I have found this plan to result in rentals several years after.

Office building renting is unlike other forms of leasing, in that the prospect is a business man or concern, expected to pay very high rental and justly demanding the best of everything, and it is for the renting man to prove to him that the building being offered is where the best value can be found, and that the location is the best for the tenant's particular business. One of the vital points to bring out is the character of the occupancy of the building, and the manner in which the property is maintained.

Use Care in Selecting Tenants.

Great care should be exercised in selecting tenants, as many a good building has started with a bad reputation, due to the character of the occupancy, and when this reputation is once established, the building manager has obstacles to overcome which appear to be unsurmountable. But, on the other hand, if the building is tenanted by reputable concerns, its future has been established and no apologies are necessary. It will be found that in approaching prospective tenants they often ask the question, "Who is in your building?" If your tenants have been well selected and those who have not a good reputation have been rejected, you should take pleasure in showing the prospect a list of your tenants. This is a material help in the renting of offices.

I have told you much about the renting of new buildings. The same methods would apply in those that have been constructed for several years. In the older buildings all the work and energy expended on the part of the renting man result in few tenants if the building is not properly maintained; but given a well operated building, the renting man, if he is a good one, will have success. When he brings his prospect into the building it should not be necessary for him to apologize for any condition of uncleanliness or apparent neglect in it. On the other hand, if he takes his man into a vacant space, properly lighted and painted and thoroughly clean, the impression received by the prospective tenant is a good one, so that, when all has been said, it is necessary for the renting man of the older property to have the assistance and co-operation of the operating man.

Ascertain the Tenant's Needs.

The renting man should not take his prospect through all the vacant offices he may have for rental, but, as mentioned above, should ascertain the needs of the tenant, find the particular space or spaces meeting these needs, and then center all his activities on those spaces. To illustrate: It would appear foolish to submit to a man requiring 2,000 square feet of office space divided into six or seven rooms, a space of that size which could not be divided into more than, say, five rooms. This mistake of applying the tenant to the space rather than the space to the tenant, is seldom productive of good results.

The net returns of office building properties are not so great as from other forms of real estate, and the rent roll should, therefore, be maintained at the maximum. This can only be done by the efforts and success of the renting man in increasing the gross income, and by the operating department maintaining the building at the lowest figure consistent with the character of its occupancy. The renting man should be always wide awake, working hard not only to obtain new tenants, but to retain the old ones. With the right man in the right place and working along proper lines, he will obtain the results and the owners of the property will be satisfied.

COST OF OFFICE BUILDINGS.

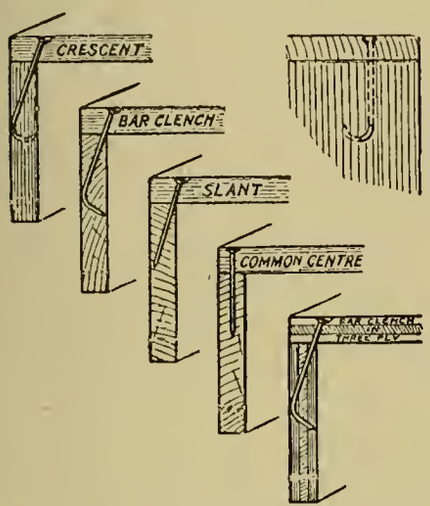
33 Cents Per Cubic Foot Considered a Fair Working Average.

William C. Hazlett, architect and engineer, 1133 Broadway, considers that the cost of constructing first-class office buildings should not exceed 35 cents per cubic foot. In an article on the economical planning and designing of high office buildings which he prepared for Engineering and Contracting (Chicago), Mr. Hazlett agrees that the cost of buildings of this class and the opportunity afforded for an economical reduction of the cost are matters of interest and moment to the investor. As it would be useless to compare the gross cost of two buildings varying in size, scheme, and numberless conditions, or to predicate anything about gross cost, unless all conditions are known, such a comparison is not attempted.

There is, however, he says, a means of comparison—by the unit cost—which may be useful, and that unit has been, by convention, assumed to be the cost per cubic foot. In other words, we can safely compare the cubic foot costs of buildings if the conditions are known. In arriving at the cost, however (which cost is the gross cubic contents multiplied by the price per cubic foot), we must agree upon some method of determining the gross cubic contents. The following is thought to represent the best present practice: Multiply the area of the plot by the distance from the average ground level to a point 1 ft. below the lowest basement floor; add to this the cubic contents of the walk vaults, areas, etc.; then add to this sum the cubic contents of the building above the average ground level, omitting courts; the sum will give gross cubic contents.

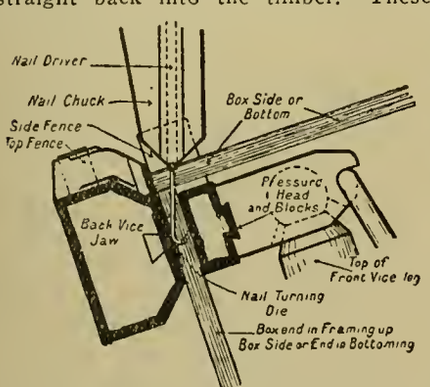
The cost of these buildings may be further differentiated thus: Gross cost, which is the sum that the owner has expended at completion and which includes all fees, commissions, interest charges, taxes, etc.; and net cost which is the builder's charge, including his profit and the designer's fee.

Without going into an exhaustive investigation of this matter and without quoting unverified data, Mr. Hazlett says it may be assumed that the cost of first-class buildings of this kind should not exceed 35 cts. per cubic foot. By reason of a fortuitous combination of circumstances, this cost may be reduced to 30 cts. per cubic foot. Perhaps 33 cts. per cubic foot may be a fair working average, but no building of this kind should cost more than the first-named figure. It is quite true that many, in fact most, buildings have been built at a greater cost; but the reasons for this increased cost lie within the limbo of an economical and logical distribution of the plan, the structure of that plan, and the machinery which goes with it. The exterior finish of the building may greatly affect the cost.



USEFUL APPLIANCES

Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration



A Nail-Clinching Machine.

BUILDERS, especially concrete contractors, who have experienced the costly annoyance of having forms pull apart when tamping is in progress, may be interested in a new machine that is being introduced, the great novelty of which lies in its ability to turn every nail driven into a mold into a hook that holds intersecting boards together tighter than screws, lags or bolts. It not only drives the nails, but clinches them so that thinner boards may be used to obtain the same nail-holding power.

The nailing is effected in a nailing-machine fitted with a patented device attachment which automatically grips the under or vertical board while the nails are being driven. The back jaw of the vice carries a series of nail-turning dies, so shaped as to turn the nails back into the boards in hook form. The nails are driven angularly across the intersection of the boards, then through the outer face of the box-side or end, and turned back into the board in hook form. The nail-turning dies are made in two forms, being known as "straight" or "bar" dies, and "curved" or "crescent" dies. The bar dies turn the nails straight back into the timber. These are most suitable for driving nails across the grain, as when nailing on bottoms. The curved or crescent dies turn and hook nails back into the timber in a diagonal direction, as shown in the sketch of crescent driving, this form being used for frame nailing with the grain, as when nailing sides to ends. The dies make slight impressions in the board, but cause the nail stitches to lie beneath the surface. The indentation, however, does not materially detract from the virtue of the mold. The device is manufactured by J. Collis & Sons, 43 Regent Square, Graves Inn Road, Kings Cross, London, N. C., England.

Concrete Columns with Iron Core.

DR. F. von Emperger, of Vienna, Austria, after three or four years of experimenting has perfected a concrete column with an iron core that is attracting considerable attention from concrete construction interests.

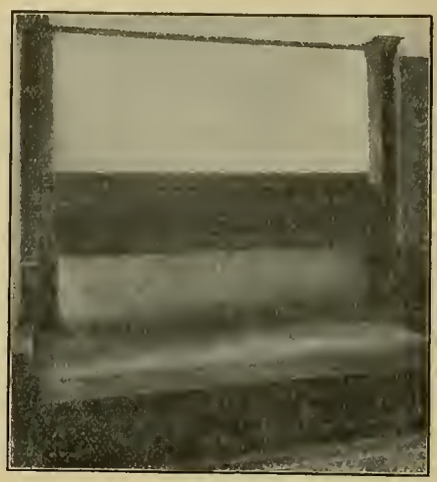
The core, as proposed, was so large that the column would in effect be a cast-iron column, strengthened by a shell of hooped concrete to toughen it. He has not limited the idea to columns, but of late has extended it also to compression members such as the ribs of arch bridges. An arch bridge of 138-foot span, the Swarzenberg bridge, was built during the last winter in Leipzig, Germany, as a footbridge over the railway tracks near the International Architectural Exhibition. Experiments made on members built according to the combination cast-iron-and-concrete system have shown very remarkable toughness and high strength. They show in the testing machine a complete absence of the brittleness which characterizes the ordinary crushing, in failure of cast-iron columns. The failure loads of such columns, after deducting the load-carrying capacity of the hooped concrete shell, were over twice as high as the capacities of the unreinforced cast-iron columns.

Electric Fans as Fly Screens.

AN enterprising business man in Mobile, Ala., has installed a ceiling fan over the entrance to his store to prevent flies from coming in. He has found that this form of fly screen is effective and does away with the bother of having a screen door for his patrons to open and slam shut. Heretofore flies would enter when the door was opened, and would collect in the display windows, making it necessary to clean the windows and the display objects frequently. Now he has no trouble.

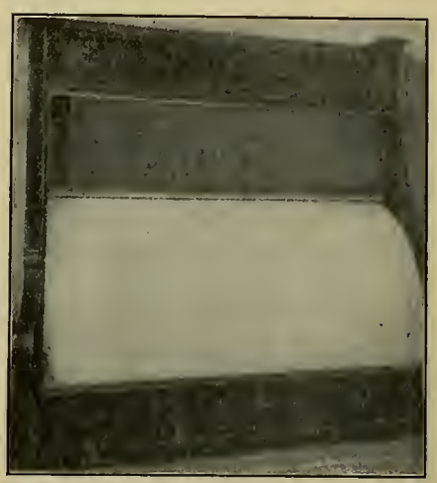
Exterior Wood Paint.

A VERY satisfactory formula as to vehicle and pigments for use in painting exterior wood work of new soft pine and woods of similar character and also for second coat consists of 80 per cent. pure raw linseed oil and 20 per cent. pure spirits of turpentine. For third coat, 90 per cent. oil and 10 per cent. turpentine. When four coats are applied, the first, second and third coats should be the same—that is, 80 per cent. oil and 20 per cent. turpentine.



These proportions will permit of a uniform expansion and contraction. The 10 per cent. of turpentine in final coat will assist in drying and hardening, also in enabling the painter to better control the application of his paint. In repainting over old work the condition of the old paint must determine the proportions of oil and turpentine in first coat. The second coat should consist of 90 per cent. oil and 10 per cent. turpentine. Notwithstanding a diversity of opinion as to pigment and combinations of pigments, use from 75 per cent. to 80 per cent. pure white lead and from 25 per cent. to 20 per cent. zinc oxide.

An Inside Outside Bed.



CALIFORNIA, famous for its fruit, flowers, fogs, fires and fresh air, now bids for further fame through a combination inside-out bed. It is a device that gives ample opportunity for getting all the vivifying ozone a person can absorb, not only in the daytime, but through the night as well. The accompanying illustrations show the three stages of the bed in each twenty-four hours. First, there is the spacious davenport that rests the weary daytime visitor. Then night comes; the host or guest retires in a nocturnal glory that only Californians or those who have been there can understand. It seems a crime to draw apart from that glorious outdoors with its pure air, the drowsy hum of night bird and insect, the languid, majestic sweep and breath of the healthful eucalyptus. So came about the sleeping porch and the saying that all California sleeps outdoors.

The guest retires. His bed, the couch he rested on earlier in the day, is now transformed as in the twinkling of an eye, into a spacious double bed. A curved alcove panel that seemed to be only part of the architecture of the room, is raised, and, behold, a bed, one-half of which is in the house and the other out of doors.

Closer observation reveals that the dome shaped wall of the alcove revolves and by simply swinging it over to the inside, the occupant of the bed finds himself out in the open, protected by a heavy wire screen and an adjustable storm-proof curtain. By reversing the operation, the bed is really inside again, just as much so, in fact, to all intents and purposes as any other article in the room, thereby making it possible for one to retire to his room, sleep in the life-lengthening fresh air all night and arise in the morning, again in the warmth and comfort of his own room.

Sleeping porches are expensive luxuries, except in new homes when they can be figured in the general plans and, with the idea of bringing the desirable benefits of out-of-door sleeping to those of modest means, the California Fresh Air Bed Company, of 166 Geary street, San Francisco, perfected this device that puts the sleeper out of doors while, in reality, he is still within.

The device can be used as a three-quarter fresh air bed and as a davenport at the same time. The bed can be installed at a very small cost in houses already built as well as in new houses being planned.

COMPARATIVE TABLE OF PLANS FILED

Brooklyn Shows Increase in New Dwellings and Tenements—Decrease in Manhattan of $9,408,625 and of $3,000,000 in the Bronx.

THE following tables show the number and estimated cost of new buildings for which plans were filed since January, according to the revised figures of the Building Bureaus in the various boroughs, after allowing for the plans withdrawn, rejected and revised.

In Manhattan the quarter closed with a decrease compared with the corresponding quarter in 1913, by 52 buildings, at a total cost of $9,408,625. Tenement house construction in this borough compared with the same period last year shows a small increase in numbers. In stores and lofts costing over $30,000, there was a falling off of five buildings, totaling $4,445,000.

There was a better showing in the volume of plans for alteration work, an increase of 229 buildings to cost $1,312,509 more than last year.

In the Bronx there was a decrease of 66 buildings, costing $2,994,611. A steady growth continues in the construction of factories, workshops and office structures, while there is a large falling off of tenement houses and dwellings.

Brooklyn has taken the lead over all the boroughs, showing an increase of 30 buildings, costing $1,178,815, the advance being especially in one-family dwellings, involving less than $20,000 and tenements costing between $20,000 and $50,000.

The boroughs of Queens and Richmond show a more equal average with the figures of the corresponding quarter.

There is every promise of a better building record for the coming three months of this year. The Southern Boulevard from 174th street to Bronx Park is becoming an active center of a new and attractive apartment house district. With its good transit facilities and natural advantages of its location, it has attracted the attention of both the builder and investor. About thirty-five plans have been reported in the last few weeks for new buildings in this section. The P. J. Dwyer Building Company is having plans prepared for several apartment houses to be erected at the northwest corner of Southern Boulevard and Crotona Parkway. John McNulty, a Bronx builder, will soon start two five-story houses at the southwest corner of Southern Boulevard and Elsemere Place. Edward A. Thornton, of Thornton Bros. Co., will soon start ten two and three-story residences with stores in the south side of 169th street from College to Findlay avenues. The Nesta Building Company is now excavating at the northeast corner of Crotona avenue and 187th street for several apartment houses. At the northwest corner of Third avenue and 188th street Reville Siesel Company is preparing to erect a brick taxpayer.

On the upper west side the Aspinwall Apartments Company is planning for the immediate erection of four five-story apartments on the east side of Audubon avenue, between 185th and 186th streets, and on the north side of 181st street west of Northern avenue the Harvey Realty Company will soon start a six-story apartment house. Another high class apartment is contemplated at the northwest corner of Fort Washington avenue and 169th street by the 114th Street and Seventh Avenue Construction Company of which Julius Weinstein is president. A large number of similar buildings of this type too numerous to mention, have been previously announced in these columns.

THE BILLBOARD WAR.

The Ordinance Is Both Strongly Favored and Opposed.

Few ordinances that have been introduced in recent years in the Board of Aldermen have claimed so much attention from real estate interests as the one which Mr. Curran has introduced for the Billboard Commission. The bill-posting companies have marshaled strong forces in opposition, while on the other hand the fundamental principle in question is supported by various city departments, a number of civic organizations and by a strong current of public opinion. The indications are that the committee will make a number of amendments.

Real estate owners who may eventually be affected by the ordinance if it should be passed, in cases where they derive revenue from permitting billboards or sky signs to be erected on their premises, while not opposed to regulation of some sort, seem to be out against the Curran bill.

At a hearing on Wednesday given by the Building Committee, which is in charge of the ordinance, one of the governors of the Real Estate Board, Mr. E. A. Treadwell, stated that while the board had taken no action with respect to this ordinance, it was in favor of regulation on general principles. But it was also the feeling of the officers of the board that the ordinance should be recast.

A member of the committee asked if the Real Estate Board would assist the committee in perfecting the regulations, and Mr. Treadwell replied affirmatively, saying that no doubt the board would be willing to appoint a committee to work with the Aldermanic committee.

Mr. Treadwell in some further remarks spoke of the large revenue which the city receives from electric signs, and said the Building Committee should consider the city's interests as well in this connection. At the same time the aesthetic side of the city should be encouraged. "You have got to do something to make the city more beautiful," he said. "At present the city touches on the question of beauty only in the high spots. We believe in regulation, but we ask for a workable ordinance."

Ingalls Kimball said he had talked with several billboard advertisers and that they had agreed that if the number of signs was reduced it would make the remaining space more valuable.

Raymond Fosdick, Commissioner of Accounts under Mayor Gaynor, made a strong plea for the regulation on general principles. He said there were 3,700 billboard spaces in the city, twenty-five per cent. of which were double-decker boards. Out of 500 billboards investigated 412 violated the existing law; 165 extended outside of the building line, and the sanitary conditions around many of them were bad. It was inconsistent to lay out beautiful boulevards at great cost and have them defaced by billboards, as was the case of Riverside Drive, opposite Grant's Tomb; upper Fifth avenue, opposite Central Park, and many other prominent places.

Those who were against regulation were using arguments fifty years behind the times.

Others who appeared in favor either of the ordinance as it stands or the main principles contained therein were Walter Stabler, Comptroller of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, which loans more money on New York City real estate than any other institution; representatives of the Department of Health and the Department of Charities; Frank B. Williams and Dr. James P. Haney, of the Municipal Art Society; Mrs. Rosalie Loew Whitney, of the Woman's Municipal League; George M. Welsh, of the Brooklyn Legislative Committee; Franklin W. Hooper, of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, and Mrs. Florence Spiegelberg and Sidney Newborg, of the Citizens' Union Aldermanic Committee.

On request of Charles O. Maas, attorney for the O. J. Gude Company, the committee decided to hold another hearing next Wednesday. Mr. Maas stated that he would submit an alternative regulating ordinance in behalf of the outdoor advertising men at that time.

Brooklyn Bridge To Be Double-Decked.

Double-decking Brooklyn Bridge, the oldest of the three suspension bridges connecting the Boroughs of Manhattan and Brooklyn, of Greater New York, will probably be undertaken when work on the Queensboro Bridge, a cantilever structure spanning the East River at Blackwell's Island, is sufficiently advanced. The tentative plans, which have been made public by F. J. H. Kracke, Commissioner of Bridges, contemplates building the new level on top, where it will be used principally for pedestrian traffic, although provision for one trolley line will be made. On the lower level all other surface and elevated lines will run, including the Brighton line, which will connect with the dual subway system.

Eastern Parkway Subway Contract Awarded.

The Public Service Commission during the week awarded the contract for the construction of Section No. 1-A of Routes No. 12, a part of the Eastern Parkway subway in Brooklyn, to the Cranford Company, for $2,225,519.25. This company was the lowest bidder among eighteen contractors who submitted proposals last Friday, and it has had previous experience in subway construction in the Centre street loop subway in Manhattan and on the Fourth avenue subway in Brooklyn. Alfred Craven, chief engineer of the commission, recommended that its bid for this section be accepted.

Section No. 1-A of Route No. 12 lies in Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn, between St. Marks avenue and Prospect Park plaza. The plans call for a subsurface railroad with six tracks for the greater part of the distance. Four of these tracks will connect with the existing subway and will extend out Eastern Parkway to Buffalo avenue. They will be operated by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company. Two of the tracks will connect the Fourth avenue subway with the Brighton Beach Railroad, and will be operated by the New York Municipal Railway Corporation. These two tracks separate from the other four tracks at the plaza. When completed, the Eastern Parkway subway will be extended as a three-track elevated line from Buffalo avenue through East 98th street and Livonia avenue to New Lots avenue, and will also have a two-track branch subway down Nostrand avenue from Eastern Parkway to Flatbush avenue.

The school will be four stories high and the residence five, of fireproof construction throughout; the entire floor construction will consist of steel framing with cinder concrete floor arches and wooden floors. The exterior will be finished with a light brown Pompeian brick with light terra cotta trimmings and slate mansard roof. Special features will be a chapel in the first story of the residence, and roof gardens for boys and girls in connection with the school. The building is to be erected by the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament of Cornwells, Pa., Mother Mary Katherine Drexel, Superior. Ballinger & Perrot, of Philadelphia, who have New York offices in the Marbridge Building, are the architects and engineers. The cost will be about $50,000.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

WATCHFUL WAITING THE APPARENT KEYNOTE IN CONSTRUCTION—MARCH STEEL TONNAGE ABOUT EQUAL TO JANUARY

Brick Makers in Conferences—Lumber Quiet —Plan Filings Continue Moderately Active

WATCHFUL waiting seems to be a settled a policy in the building construction. Hesitation is frankly ascribed to the continued unsettled weather conditions, but the recent discharge of large numbers of railway employees by one of the prominent lines has had a dampening effect upon the business outlook at a time when conditions were showing some signs of improvement.

But the action of the railroad companies should not be construed a 100 per. cent. narcotic to the building business in general.

In the first year of the operation of the parcel post system one mail order house turned over to the parcels post more than 1,000,000 shipments that would otherwise have gone by express. The express companies are paying the railroads 50 per cent. of their revenue from their shipments; the government is forcing the railroads to carry parcel post shipments for comparatively nothing. The system is invading the regular freight business of the railroads. Suppose the rate limit was raised to 100 pounds as the Postmaster General now advocates, it would permit the further extension of postal mail carrying and the railroads would have to charge off still more of their income now derived from express haulage and freight shipments. Bags of cement could be shipped under that rate through the mails! And after 100 lbs. are permitted what will be the ultimate limit?

In addition to that loss, the railroads have been confronted with hostile legislation, such as the full-crew bills, and those for the compulsory use of steel cars and consequently heavier rails. In the mean time they have asked for an increase in freight rates, but have not yet received that permission from the Interstate Commerce Commission, nor have they any intimation as to whether that privilege will be extended to them when the decision is rendered.

Under such circumstances it naturally will greatly impress the commission if a few roads find it expedient to make wholesale discharges and pass a few dividends at the psychological moment; the moment, by the way, when the time expired for all railroad companies to have their reports in the hands of the commission.

As far as the metropolitan district is concerned, there is plenty of evidence showing that, given settled weather, construction will go on apace. New building plans filed for the city this week showed Queens, with 203 valued at $563,575; Brooklyn, with 83 valued at $770,000; Bronx, with 15 valued at $393,500; Manhattan, with 12 valued at $932,600, and Richmond, with 41 valued at $41,384. The total for the city was 354, valued at $2,701,059, as compared with 349 valued at $4,037,706 reported last week. New building plans filed in East Jersey show a healthy development and increasing activity.

BRICK MARKET HOLDS FIRM.

Manufacturers Plan Organization of Barge Company.

HUDSON common brick held firm on demand this week and prices also showed more stability and unloading was more active. Raritan brick also reflects the improvement noted in the Hudson department.

Interest this week centered in meetings held by manufacturers with the idea of changing the system of operating brick-carrying barges. The plan is to form a barge company composed of owners of brick-carrying barges and to move all brick of stockholders on their own barges, paying a dividend upon the company's profits, and incidentally, if possible, to obtain more efficiency and to operate a smaller number of barges. About 400 are now regularly employed in the Hudson brick trade to supply this market and about 225 of these are owned by brick manufacturers. There is some talk of the 175 other barge owners combining to meet the proposed organization with a rate cutting campaign if the company finally is formed although no attempt has so far been made by these private barge owners to organize.

Official transactions for Hudson common brick covering the week ending Thursday, April 2, in the wholesale market, with comparisons for the corresponding period last year, and a comparative statement of Hudson brick unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

LINSEED OIL DEMAND BRISK.

Shortage of Supply of A Quality—Window Glass May Boost Prices.

PAINT and varnish manufacturers were active buyers of linseed oil this week with the result that ruling quotations of fifty-four and fifty-five cents were firm to stiff. A continued movement of linseed oil at this time of the year indicates heavy supplemental orders that an unusually active retail paint selling season makes necessary. Seed prices in the Northwest have fluctuated mildly with an upward tendency, according to late advices received in this city.

Turpentine is being held in yard at forty-nine to forty-nine and one-half cents with purchases rather light. Rosins are dull and nominal with substantially no change in quotations, common to good strained in yard on the basis of 280 pounds, a barrel ruling at $0.25 and D grade at $4.35 a barrel.

Prospective builders will find the window glass market strengthening. Production is proceeding again normally. There is reported to be a shortage in A quality and higher prices are predicted later in the season.

WHOLESALE LUMBER FIRMER.

Quick Shipments the Rule Throughout the District.

A GOOD part of the current wholesale lumber business is for quick shipment, and for the past few weeks there has been much complaint made of delays in transportation. The supplies in the hands of the local manufacturing trade and the yards are still below normal, and it seems that restocking must come soon.

COAL MARKET.

Anthracite In Good Shape—Quiet Follows Issuance of Spring Prices.

THE anthracite trade, both as regards the present situation and future prospects, is in much better shape than anybody anticipated a few weeks ago, when the outlook was for a dull April followed by a period of comparative quite after the spring prices went into effect. Owing to the size of dealers' stocks, it appears certain that an unusually large quantity of coal will be carried over into May.

REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS GUIDE.

GREENWICH VILLAGE INVESTORS' MECCA

A Thousand Flats Wanted, to Rent from $20 to $50 a Month—Land Cheap and Investment Possibilities Large—Record and Guide Thanked in Resolutions

BY DR. EDWIN ZIMMERMAN

WHEN the announcement was made that the new subway system was to be built through the Greenwich Village section, a new field for the speculative builder was immediately created, and the process of discounting the new transit improvement commenced. On some of the main thoroughfares new loft structures were erected and tenants were readily found, but this condition did not apply only to mercantile buildings. The influx of new concerns into the section brought a large number of residents, and the apartment houses became well filled. There is hardly a house which has a vacancy, and in fact in several of the real estate offices there is a waiting list of people who desire flats averaging about $50 a month.

Probably the most important sign of the times, as applied to this section of old Manhattan, is the fact that the professional operator invaded the section to be traversed by the new subway line and bought many of the available corners, at increasing prices. The parcels will be resold, in all probability to builders for improvement, as this class of speculator rarely improves for his own account, unless he has a prospective tenant in sight who is willing to lease the entire structure for a long term of years.

Some investors have realized the residential possibilities of the section as shown by the recent apartment house construction movement in the vicinity of Washington Square. Others are building flats in the village itself, but the volume of this type of construction is still so limited that it is apparent building investors are not yet fully aware of the changes that are taking place.

Look back for thirty or forty years at this section of New York and then compare it with the Greenwich Village of to-day. In the former days the street layout was most inconsistent and caused much traffic confusion.. In the last few years marked progress has been made in straightening out this condition. True, many of the thoroughfares to-day follow the cowpaths and trails laid out by the early settlers in the section, but counteracting that is the one-hundred-foot wide swath the city is slashing through the very heart of its most populous district to create an arterial street providing direct and easy communication to every other part of the community.

Wanted, 1,000 Flats.

Three hundred pieces of property were condemned by the city for the extension of Seventh avenue, a project which the committee has fought for consistently more than six years. During all that time the splendid support of the Record and Guide has been given, and its influence has done much in bringing about the present happy conclusion. Therefore, it was only fitting that at a meeting held on March 11 at the home of Harman Reher, at 276 West Eleventh street, at which I had the honor of presiding, a resolution of thanks should have been unanimously adopted and ordered sent to the Record and Guide for its valuable services. These three hundred buildings, which housed at least a thousand families, are now being torn down. Where have these residents gone? They have been compelled to seek quarters in other sections of the city. They are trying to come back, and the appeal we make to building investors is not the appeal of mere speculative possibility, but of positive knowledge that we need a thousand flats renting from $20 to $50.

Not a Loft Building Centre.

Our fight, now that we have won the Seventh avenue extension and the four-track subway, was not with the purpose of making Greenwich Village a great loft building section, but rather a great residential district. I appeal to those men with money to invest in flat and apartment houses to come to our rescue and build for us at least a thousand flats and apartments similar to those that are being erected in Harlem and the Bronx. All we ask is that you give us the same rent. Tell me what man, woman or child will hang on a subway car strap for an hour after a tiresome day in the store, shop or office when homes can be had within walking distance of their downtown places of business, or the wives can walk to good shopping districts?

We shall maintain this district as a residential section for fifty years or more. West of Hudson street we have a natural loft building territory by reason of its proximity to the river front. There may be found abundant space for business buildings, but in Greenwich Village, east of Hudson, in the territory lying between 14th street, Houston, Sixth avenue and Hudson, we must preserve the true residential character.

I say to those who will build these flats and apartments that we can fill them with a most desirable class of permanent tenants. But we are not going to be a village of Micawbers, waiting for something to turn up. We are alive to the possibilities of this territory because we have lived here so long.

For years the residents in the Greenwich Village section have been under a severe handicap in the matter of rapid transit. This is specially true during the morning rush hours, for by the time the trains on the elevated system reach the locality, all the seats are occupied and passengers are forced to stand. Of course, it must be considered that the time consumed in travel is only a few minutes, but still, when taken in the aggregate, this time amounts to considerable at the end of a month. In the evening, however, the condition is somewhat reversed, and those boarding trains downtown stand an even chance with those residing in other sections of Manhattan.

When the new system is opened we look for a decided betterment in conditions and hope that the present congestion will be greatly relieved. The Greenwich Village section has been neglected so long, as far as improvements are concerned, that only those with unbounded faith were able to maintain hope. When the Board of Estimate and the Public Service Commission finally came to a decision as to the Seventh Avenue route and work started, hope was renewed, and today we actually see the physical work in progress. Houses are being demolished in several sections along the line and it should be only a comparatively short time before the remaining building obstructions are removed and the actual digging commenced.

The extension of Seventh avenue in itself is a great boon. At the present time we are hemmed in, but soon we will have a main north and south artery, which should have the affect of increasing the population in the section.

A RESOLUTION.

By the Greenwich Village Public Service Committee.

Whereas, The Greenwich Village Public Service Committee has, with the aid of the people of Greenwich Village, been successful in obtaining from the City of New York the much needed extension of Seventh avenue and a four-track subway, and

Whereas, For eight years prior to this meeting (held on the eleventh day of March, 1914, at the home of Herman Reher, 276 West 11th street, in the City of New York, with Dr. Edwin Zimmerman presiding), the Real Estate Record and Builders' Guide consistently aided us in the accomplishment of our purpose; be it therefore

Resolved, That we, the members of this Greenwich Village Public Service Committee, give public expression of our thanks to the Record and Guide for its generous services; and that it be further

Resolved, That our President be directed to have a copy of this resolution forwarded to the editor of the Record and Guide as an evidence of our gratitude.

INDUSTRIAL CENTER AT LONG ISLAND CITY

Railroads are Large Influencing Factors in Upbuilding a District Which Has Long Been Dormant—Many New Structural Operations Projected and Under Way.

ONE of the interesting developments in the real estate field during the last two years has been the reclaiming of a large amount of vacant land in Long Island City and the establishing of a large number of manufacturing plants, which will in time employ many thousands of artisans. This new field was opened largely as a result of the locating of the Long Island terminal at Sunnyside yards and the projected New York Connecting Railroad, to the Bronx and the New England States, but aside from this the erection of the Queensboro bridge, which produced direct communication with Manhattan, had a far reaching effect. When the industrial movement to the east started land values were very low; in fact, the entire district was a "deserted city." Since the development has taken place, however, realty values have jumped, but even today there are many choice parcels, ripe for industrial improvement, which can be obtained at reasonable figures

The entire section was in a comatose condition, largely because owners were afraid to make any improvement, fearing mistakes, but once the trend was established and it was found that improved railroad facilities were to become an actual fact, the entire situation changed.

In addition to new manufacturing concerns, there is in progress a decided building movement in the erection of tenements to house those employed with these concerns, and plans have been drawn for many multi-family houses to meet the demand. One of the difficulties experienced by manufacturing concerns was that there was not adequate housing facilities for their employees, but this condition is righting itself and in the course of a few months will be eliminated almost entirely.

To Develop Another Section.

Announcement was made this week that arrangements had been completed by the Stuyvesant Realty Company, which is affiliated with the Pennsylvania Railroad interests, for the expansion of the industrial zone in Long Island City. Ten blocks at the east end of the Sunnyside yards will be improved and developed for factory purposes. The property extends along the main line of the railroad from Laurel Hill avenue in the west, to Woodside avenue and the extension of the Old Newtown road, in the east, and is crossed by Packard, Bliss, Grove, Locust, Heiser, Piling, Stone, Dickson and Caroline avenues The north boundary is Jackson avenue and the south is Dryer avenue and the railroad right of way. The union station is within a few blocks of the property.

When the Stuyvesant Realty Company purchased the Sunnyside yard property several years ago, much land was acquired which was not needed for the railroad improvement, though it was deemed advisable to purchase the land as an insurance against unexpected requirements. The streets have been mapped out to conform with the topographical charts covering that section of Long Island City, but several important changes will be necessary in order to provide for the railroad sidings which will have to be installed.

Tentative diagrams showing these changes have been submitted to the Board of Estimate, and will come officially before that body on April 17, when a public hearing will be held. It is said that negotiations are pending with several large manufacturing concerns, which propose to improve some of the property with modern buildings, but no definite information along these lines could be obtained this week.

As projected more than $10,000,000 is involved in the tentative plans for factory plants to be erected upon the new tract and it is estimated that about 15,000 workmen will be employed there after the development is well under way. This will mean that between 30,000 and and 40,000 people will have to be housed within a reasonable distance of the property.

Concerted opposition, by the Taxpayers' and Business Men's Associations, of Astoria, is being taken to the suggestion to establish barge canal terminals on Bowery Bay and on Dutch Kills Creek, but none on the East River. At a meeting recently held, L. C. L. Smith, formerly chief engineer of the Borough of Queens, stated that $19,000,000 had been appropriated for barge canal terminal purposes and that the Astoria or Long Island section should get at least $1,000,000 of it. Mr. Smith states that careful soundings had been made of the waters in Hallett's Cove and that it was found that the depth varied from seventeen to thirty feet, at mean high water, which he considered ample to meet the requirements of the canal barge. The following resolution addressed to the Borough President was offered and unanimously adopted:

"We, the undersigned business men or property owners in Long Island City, hereby urge that you will use your influence to have a barge canal terminal located in the vicinit of Hallett's Cove. We further urge that inasmuch as the two Brooklyn terminals will give that borough a total wharfage of 10,156 feet, Long Island City is entitled to at least one-half this amount, and we therefore urge you to use your influence to have terminals in Long Island City, one of which shall be on the East River, in the vicinity of Hallett's Cove, and in such other location as may be approved, the combined dockage of the terminals to be not less than 5,000 feet."

Below is a table of twenty-four new manufacturing plants projected or in course of construction in Long Island City. The estimated cost of these improvements aggregate $3,843,000 the largest being that owned by the Degnon Realty Company, at the corner of Thompson avenue and Orton street, 212x437 feet, from designs by William Higginson, architect, and being erected by the Turner Construction Company. The building is nearing completion. There are a number of operations not enumerated in the table, but all these operations involve less than $20,000 each. As will be readily seen by glancing at the first column, there is a large variety of interests which will shortly locate in the district and which should give further impetus to the development of the section.

On Forehandedness.

Everyone familiar with the usages in vogue in renting real estate in New York City knows there is hardly ever a lease made where the owner does not bind himself to make certain alterations or renovations. The nature of these is pretty much fixed in every lease, and for this reason, they can almost always be anticipated. While, of course, tenants are pretty generally allowed to choose their own wall paper, as a rule the painting of the woodwork, and the finishing of the floors, as well as attention to the plumbing and heating system, can be just as well done long before the lease is signed as afterwards, and if a tenant desires immediate possession and finds these things demanding attention, it naturally may prejudice him in favor of some other location, where less time would be required for the necessary repairs.

Pease & Elliman, as renting agents, advise their clients to be forehanded in such matters, on the general principle that tenants appreciate the thoughtfulness that saves them from inconveniences and annoyances.

REAL ESTATE BOARD'S BILLBOARD POLICY

Definitely Stated By the President to Aldermanic Committee—A New Ordinance to Be Substituted Which Will Be Less Drastic.

SO STRONG was the opposition to the proposed billboard ordinance that Alderman Curran, who introduced announced at the close of the hearing held at City Hall this week, that he would withdraw this particular measure and replace it with another. Chairman Hamilton intimated during the hearing that the Building Committee wished to report an ordinance that would be generally satisfactory. The most powerful influence that has so far been brought to bear against the measure is the Real Estate Board. Opposition was expected from the billboard and advertising companies as a matter of course, but the judgment of the Real Estate Board was awaited and has been the decisive argument against the bill.

Should Be Sanely Regulated.

The reasons for the opposition of the Real Estate Board were made plain at Wednesday's hearing (which was the third) by President Laurence M. D. McGuire, who spoke for the board on this occasion under special authority. He said that the board believes there is wide room for improvement in the character and also in the methods now employed by the billboard and advertising companies. The board would like to see the enterprise regulated, but it believes in sane legal control. He continued:

"To a certain extent the ordinance works unnecessary hardship on the bill-posting business. But the board is not interested in this phase of the matter. It is concerned entirely with the effect this ordinance would have on the revenue to real estate owners. If it were merely a question of reduced revenue, necessary to proper regulation, worked out upon practical and legal lines, the objection would be less emphatic. But this ordinance is impractical in many provisions, and in many particulars does not seem to me to be legal.

"The section providing that ground signs shall be only 10 feet high, though not a serious matter, is coupled with a provision that these signs may exceed this height when set back one and a half times the height of the sign. This may be a necessary provision, but the need for it is not obvious. Certainly it would confiscate the double-deck signs and would very materially reduce their number.

The Most Serious Provision.

"Section 7 is perhaps the most serious of all the provisions. It prohibits the erection of signs on any tenement house, hotel or other dwelling, except detached dwellings, which are at least 40 feet from any other dwelling. The word 'tenement' suggests to the casual reader the tall multi-family house; but this section applies equally to any building in which three families live and do their cooking independently. The word 'hotel' suggests the magnificent tall hostelry, but the provision applies with equal force to the many small buildings along the lines of the 'L' and railroads in suburban territory which are operated under hotel licenses.

"The larger hotels are permitted signs only when they advertise the business of the hotel. It is doubtful whether this provision is legal. Certainly it is neither fair nor reasonable to restrict the owners of low, safe buildings, occupied by only three families, or the owners of small hotels. If signs are allowed at all, there should be no discrimination of this sort.

"Nor is there any reason why the owner of a private house should be deprived of this form of revenue. Such advertising may not be desirable, but I believe the ordinance in this respect invades a constitutional right.

"Section 9 provides that there shall be no closed roof signs on any except fireproof buildings. There is no justification for this. It would practically eliminate all roof signs; and to say that the owner of a frame dwelling in the suburbs facing railroad stations and tracks cannot receive the benefit of this advertising is going a great deal too far in the restriction of property rights. I am reliably advised that it is not legal.

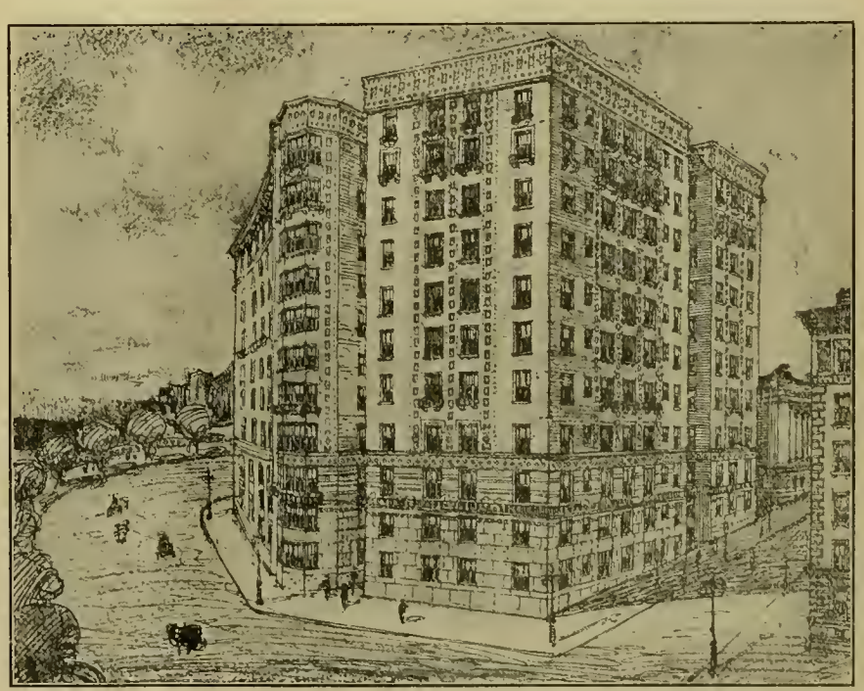
"Section 10, which requires that signs should be able to resist a 40-pound wind pressure is unreasonable. Section 16, to regulate signs on property facing parks, etc., touches an unpleasant form of the advertising business. Unfortunately, however, this provision cannot do what the courts many times have decided is unconstitutional.

"Section 19 is wholly unnecessary as a regulating provision. It is absurd to say that because a cornice encroaches 6 or 8 inches that an owner cannot have the right to erect a sign.

"Another exceedingly serious fault in the proposed ordinance is the unfair position in which it would place owners of existing buildings upon which sign structures are erected. If this ordinance were passed it would be practically impossible for the owners of these buildings to renew their leases except upon terms satisfactory to the advertising concerns and the signs they might wish to erect could not be made to comply with the proposed ordinance.

"The only proper thing to do is to recast this ordinance in such a way as to conserve the interests of the city and the owners of real estate and still give due weight to legitimate aesthetic requirements."

United Owners Protest.



President Henry Bloch, of the United Real Estate Owners' Association, said:

"Our organization—a federation of large local taxpayers' associations—is opposed to this ordinance in its entirety.

"We believe that the present ordinance is crudely drawn. Instead of wisely regulating billboards and outdoor advertising, it attacks the ownership of real estate, seeking to deprive it of a legitimate source of income. Real estate, which now practically alone pays the cost of the running of our city government, is constantly being made a target of attack The ordinance should be recast in such a way as to overcome the evil complained of, and at the same time conserve the interests of owners of real estate.

A special committee of the United Real Estate Owners' Associations has been appointed to draft a new ordinance. This committee has been working industriously on the matter for the past four or five days, and we expect that the ordinance will be ready for submission shortly."

UNIQUE APARTMENTS FOR THE DRIVE

George and Edward Blum, Architects.

WORK on a new ten-story apartment has recently been started at the northeast corner of Riverside Drive and 155th street. Plans of the building were prepared by George and Edward Blum, architects, 505 Fifth avenue, for the Strathcona Construction Co., Harry Falk, president. The building will occupy a plot 100x150x irregular and will contain seventy-two apartments, which are arranged in an interesting manner.

On the ground floor there will be a six-room apartment with two baths, and a specially planned doctor's apartment of seven rooms with two baths. The upper floors will have seven apartments to each floor, the apartments ranging in size from seven rooms with two baths, to four rooms and one bath. Each apartment will have a large entrance foyer and ample closet room.

The facade will be striking and distinctive. Limestone in large blocks will be employed from the granite base course to the second-story level. Tapestry brick and faience tile in ornamental design will be used above this point. The building is surmounted by a rich parapet wall of the same materials.

The building is to be entirely fireproof, each apartment having two separate exits to fire stairs. The estimated cost of the project is about $500,000.

TAXATION LAW UNCHANGED BY LEGISLATURE

Some of the Bills That Failed—Factory Law Modified in Favor of Small Buildings—Added Powers for Fire Commissioner Opposed.

NO important changes in the tax law were made at the recent session of the Legislature. Among the bills passed in the closing days and now before the Mayor is one which amends the New York City Charter in relation to assessments for public improvements. (Senate bill, printed No. 1084, by Mr. Duhamel.) Section 1089-a is changed so that an assessment may be paid in ten installments if the amount exceeds three per centum of the assessed value of the property, "exclusive of improvements."

A new clause provides that when in the opinion of the Board of Estimate an assessment is excessive or confiscatory, or the combined assessments against any parcel in any two consecutive years exceed fifty per cent. of the assessed value of the property, the board may direct that the assessment be divided into twenty parts or take such measures for the relief of property owners as it may deem just and equitable.

A bill was passed and is now in the hands of the Governor making some changes in the administration of the mortgage recording tax; its chief effect would be to enable the entire tax to be paid on mortgages covering property both within and without the State, with a corresponding exemption of the total value of the bonds secured thereby.

A bill was passed revising the methods of assessing and collecting taxes in Westchester County, and substituting a more efficient system for the present cumbersome and expensive methods. This proposed change has aroused some opposition, and the Governor announced that a hearing would be given April 9.

The so-called "half-rate" tax bill (reducing the tax on buildings in the city of New York) which has received much notice was not reported from committee.

The Inheritance Tax Law Unchanged.

Bills were introduced in both Senate and Assembly to change the Inheritance Tax law in three particulars: first, to repeal the present exemption of intangible personal property of non-resident decedents, and thereby restore the double taxation, which was abolished by the present law in 1911; second, to tax bequests to benevolent and educational institutions in other States, and, third, to abolish most of the present exemptions for small bequests and to change the gradings in such a way as to make a considerable increase on bequests of moderate amounts. All of these changes were strongly opposed by the New York Tax Reform Association, of which A. C. Pleydell is secretary, and those relating to the taxation of non-residents had opposition from financial institutions that foresaw a possible loss of business through the withdrawal of deposits and securities by non-residents of the State. The Senate bill was reported favorably by committee, but advanced no further than second reading; the Assembly bill was not reported.

Bills were introduced in both houses to repeal the Secured Debt law, but were not reported. Subsequently, near the end of the session, a bill was introduced in the Senate making the tax on securities that now come under the secured debt law 30 cents per hundred dollars annually, and exempting from this tax for a period of three years the securities which have already been registered under the secured debt law. This bill was reported favorably from committee but did not reach a vote before adjournment.

Tenement Law Changed.

An important bill which awaits the Governor's signature was introduced by Assemblyman McGrath and amends the Tenement House law in relation to civil penalties for violations by providing that the judges of the Municipal Courts shall have the power of discretion instead of being subject to a mandatory law requiring a fine of $50 for the first offense and $250 for a continued violation.

The Herrick bill, making property owners criminally liable if certain nuisances or evils exist on their premises, was amended so as to require a guilty knowledge of the facts on the owner's part before he can be punished.

The widowed mothers' pension bill was defeated in the Assembly, but the same body passed the McCue Child's Welfare bill, which would have caused a heavy expense to taxpayers had it been enacted. The bill was defeated in the Senate.

Modifications in the Factory Law.

The amendments to the Labor Laws which were secured by the efforts of the Real Estate Board of New York, as contained in Senate bill No. 1224, which received the Governor's signature this week, are briefly as follows:

Fire-escapes can be used as a required means of exit on buildings of five stories or less in height, except when in the opinion of the Industrial Board they do not furnish adequate means of escape from fire.

Fire-escapes on buildings over six stories in height may be used as the required means of exit, when in the opinion of the Industrial Board they can be safely used.

Interior stairways, serving as a required means of exit, do not have to be enclosed in buildings of five stories or less in height, unless the Industrial Board, because of conditions, deems it necessary.

Window frames and sashes can be covered with metal, instead of being of metal.

Standard Fire Policy.

The Horton bill (Assembly Int. No. 1789), which provided for the changing of the Standard Form of fire insurance policy, was lost. While the present form of policy is explicit, it covers a large number of subjects, still, since its adoption, many changes have taken place, and at the present time policies are apt to have a number of exceptions stated on their face which confuse the insured. The new form is in concise shape and is so arranged that specific clauses can be found at a glance, which is a matter of great convenience. The bill failed to pass, but this introduction was only designed as a preliminary step, and in all likelihood the matter will be taken up again when the Legislature re-convenes. Under the present form of policy the clauses are so placed that without careful study it is almost impossible for one inexperienced in insurance to locate any desired section, while under the suggested form each important clause has a margin note indicating the subject dealt with.

More Power for the Fire Commissioner.

During the closing hours of the Legislature a large number of bills were hurried through both houses, not all of which are for the good of real estate. Among these was the Hoff bill (Int. No. 1254) which amends the city charter so as to give the fire commissioner authority over fire-escape equipment, as well as over the storage, keeping, sale, manufacture and transportation of combustibles.

The Bureau of Combustibles is abolished and its power and authority vested in the fire commissioner. With his added authority he has power to declare any building a nuisance which he considers perilous to life or property in case of fire therein, by reason of the nature or condition of its contents, overcrowding of persons therein, defects in its construction, fire-extinguishing or fire-escape equipment, or by reason of any violation of law or order of the fire commissioner. He has power in case his orders are ignored to vacate the building.

The Board of Trade has appealed to the Mayor for a hearing on this bill and will strongly oppose this extension of autocratic authority, and Wednesday, April 15, at two o'clock, in the Mayor's office, have been appointed as the time and place.

The alleged joker in this bill, according to the Board of Trade, rests in the fact that it not only abolishes the Municipal Explosion Commission, but it also empowers the same man who detects alleged nuisances to abate it. This is considered to be too arbitrary for the best interest of real estate owners in New York City and it also is said to be a real menace to a person's business in that he may be forced to vacate premises, a removal from which would mean the possible wrecking of his business.

Elevator Insurance.

The Ramsperger bill to amend the insurance law, which encountered stiff opposition in the Legislature, has been signed by the Governor. This authorizes the incorporation of life, health and casualty companies for the purpose of insuring against loss or damage to elevators or other property, except by fire, caused by the maintenance, operation or use of elevators, and including loss by legal liability for damage therefrom and against damage from loss or use or occupancy of premises by reason of the breakage or leakage of sprinklers, pumps or water pipes.

Bills Before the Mayor.

Mayor Mitchel granted hearings this week on the following named bills, which passed both branches of the Legislature and have come to him for approval:

Senate Bills Int. No. 898, to amend the Greater New York Charter in relation to salaries of the teaching staff; Int. No. 34, to amend the Greater New York Charter, in relation to salaries of the members of the supervising and teaching staffs of the board of education; Assembly Bill Int. No. 1243, to amend the Greater New York Charter, in relation to salaries of the teaching staff of the board of education. These bills were strongly opposed by representatives of the Real Estate Board, the United Owners and many taxpayers' associations.

Senate Bill Int. No. 191, to amend the Greater New York Charter, in relation to assessments for local improvements confirmed after the first day of January, 1908.

Senate Bill Int. No. 944, to amend the Greater New York Charter, in relation to the adoption of rules and regulations by the Commissioner of Docks and their enforcement.

Senate Bill Int. No. 231, to amend the Greater New York Charter in relation to costs awarded to the City of New York.

Senate Bill Int. 772, to amend the Greater New York Charter in relation to the funds for street and park openings and for street improvement.

Senate Bill Int. No. 1073, to amend chapter 4 of the laws of 1891, entitled "An act to provide for rapid transit railways in cities of over one million inhabitants," with reference to procuring work and materials, with reference to security, with reference to contracts for limited amounts and with reference to the acquisition of property.

EFFORTS TO AVOID PLATE GLASS WAR

Meeting Held By Plate Glass Underwriters' Association To Avert Critical Condition Now Existing.

THE Plate Glass Underwriters' Association of Greater New York held a meeting last Wednesday at the office of the Great Eastern Casualty Company for the purpose of discussing the local situation and to consider ways and means of adjusting the present rate situation. A full representation was present and after considerable discussion a committee of seven was appointed to prepare a rating plan which would provide district rates according to the general hazard which ultimately would do away with the specific rating of risks, and it is anticipated that this scheme of rating will meet with the approval of companies which are not now members of the association and also will have the support of the Insurance Department. The committee is expected to make its report before May 1 and a meeting will be called to give further consideration to the subject before that date.

An Acute Situation.

During the last few months a serious condition has arisen in the plate glass insurance business, so much so that several meetings of the Plate Glass Underwriters' Association have been called, in order to discuss fully the situation and apply the proper remedy. So acute is the situation that a large number of the members of the association seriously considered the suspension of the rules regarding rates and commissions, due to the growing competition of non-members. Of course the final analysis spells a rate war, which would be disastrous to business interests. It is the easiest thing in the world to reduce rates and "go after" business in a cut-throat manner, but when the day of reckoning comes the property owner pays the entire bill.

Temporarily, the owner might benefit by the rate war, as far as the actual outlay of money is concerned, but it is only a matter of a comparatively short time before the stability of the insurance companies is affected and the security impaired. The question would be continually in the owners' mind, "Am I insured in the safest company?" or, "Is my broker insuring me to my best advantage, or is he placing the risk in the company which will yield him the best returns?" Eventually the rate war would be over and then premiums would rise to such a figure that, in some cases, hardships might result.

Co-operation the Remedy.

There is one remedy that could be applied which would cure the existing evils that beset the Plate Glass Underwriters' Association, namely the co-operation of the brokers in the maintenance of proper practices. The average plate glass account of brokers of importance will run from $3,000 to $5,000 a year. The average premium of a store front risk is about $12, therefore it can be inferred that the broker places about 350 to 400 risks a year. This means that he has between 30 and 35 clients a month whose interests have to be conserved, requiring him to obtain the best possible rate and incidentally to insure himself against competition on the general lines which he carries for his client, it is imperative that he deliver a plate glass policy at the lowest rate.

Twenty-five companies are writing plate glass insurance in New York City, and in order that he can make sure that he obtains the lowest rate he has to submit an application to every company, necessitating the procurement of about 750 estimates a month. In order to make sure that each company quotes upon the schedule covered by the existing policy, a comparison of twenty-five surveys has to be made with the original schedule. The work attending this procedure is of such importance that it cannot be neglected.

If the carrying company quotes a higher rate than one of the competitors and it develops that there are broken plates on the premises, then the broker has to require the replacement of the plates. It frequently happens that the tenant does not want the glass replaced, which results in friction between the property owner, the tenant and the insuring company.

There are many other difficulties which arise in a situation following a rate war that should prompt brokers to exert every possible means to prevent such a disaster in the business. The commission return from his present volume of $5,000 or $1,250 per annum. is reduced by reason of the cutting of the rates to $600 or $700. It is therefore clearly in the interest of the broker to encourage the companies to maintain instead of reducing rates.

It may be held that the broker is employed by the property owner instead of the insurance company, which is of course true. Nevertheless, satisfactory results never have been had from a chaotic condition. Insurance rates should be based upon substantial lines, giving the property owner real insurance, the broker his legitimate commission and the company enough profit so that the business may be conducted upon a thoroughly conservative basis.

THE EASIER WAYS.

Of Meeting the Requirements of the New Factory Laws—Efficiency of Horizontal Exits.

Real estate owners have been agitated over the requirements and limitations of the new factory laws, which apparently require them to make expensive alterations in their buildings, but fire prevention experts say there are easier ways of complying with the law and avoiding its penalties.

Instead of going to the expense of constructing fireproof walls around the stairways of their non-fireproof loft buildings, and of fireproofing windows and doors, owners have at least two alternatives. One is to cut a doorway through into the next building on every floor, which is one way of making a horizontal exit and at the same time getting the advantage of a firewall.

Another way is to connect the balconies of their fire-escapes with the balconies of their next door neighbor's, or build a balcony around the party wall.

Mr. A. L. A. Himmelwright of the Masonic Hall Building, at Sixth avenue and 23rd street, said yesterday that he believed that fully 90 per cent. of the existing old style residences used as factory buildings in Manhattan not now complying with the law are situated so that they can make this easy and inexpensive connection. In many cases adjoining buildings are under the same ownership and it is a simple operation to cut doorways through the party wall and protect the openings with firedoors. The cost would be about $200 per floor.

Connect Fire-Escapes.

Another way of getting a horizontal exit is to connect the exterior fire-escapes (or fireproof stairways) of adjoining buildings on either side or in the rear. All windows opening on outside fire-escapes must extend to within six inches of the floor level, and must be made fireproof. The cost of the alterations would be in this case $300 per floor. Mr. Himmelwright showed how easily this could be done in case of some buildings within view from the windows of his offices. In one case the fire-escape of a building fronting on 23rd street comes within a foot or two of the fire-escape of the building in the rear, fronting on 24th street. Five or ten dollars per floor would probably defray the cost of making the physical connection in this case.

What the Law Says.

In respect to horizontal exits the statute reads (paragraph 6 of section 27-e) that in any building where a horizontal exit is provided on any floor, as many persons may be employed on that floor as can occupy the floor of the adjoining or nearby building which has been connected by either putting a doorway through, or by connecting the exterior fire-escapes, or by bridging the intervening space to the building in the rear, allowing five square feet of unobstructed floor space per person. Anyone can figure how many persons can be employed on any one floor of given dimensions under this rule. This expedient takes no account of stairway widths or fireproof stairways and enclosures; if owners can show a sufficient and legal way of escape into the next building, the authorities will be satisfied.

Efficacy of Fire Walls.

Mr. Himmelwright and his associate, Mr. H. J. F. Porter, are firm believers in the efficacy of fire walls and horizontal exits, more so than in fireproof stairways and ordinary fire-escapes. Both were retained as engineers in an advisory capacity by the Legislative Factory Investigating Commission which framed the new factory bills, but they regret to say that the factory laws as enacted are far from being what they recommended or can approve.

The danger of depending solely on interior stairways grows out of the limited capacity of the stairs and the proneness of persons using them in an emergency to become panic-stricken. It was Mr. Porter's recommendation to the commission that the occupancy of each factory floor should be limited to the capacity of the stairway, which he figured at two persons for every foot of height of ceiling on stairs three feet wide. People going downstairs must have a vacant step in front of them to tread on, and they can, therefore, be on every other step only, or they will be lock-stepped and cannot move.

In a loft building with 10-foot ceilings the floors are about 1 foot 3 inches thick. In the height of 11 feet 3 inches the flight of stairs there are eighteen steps 7 1-2 inches high. The flight of stairs can, therefore, hold nine persons in single file and eighteen in double file, and two extra persons can stand on the landing, making twenty in all; if the stairs are wide enough for three abreast, the total capacity will be thirty persons.

The Legislative commission, however, took liberties with Mr. Porter's figures and adopted as a standard a dwarf building having ten feet between floors of which there are none except old converted tenements, instead of a building with 10-foot ceilings, as he had specified.

The allowable capacity of stairways was arbitrarily increased to 14 persons for each 18 inches of width of stairs, with one person added for the thickness of the floor between ceiling and the finished floor above, making 15 in all, which was a 50 per cent. increase over the 10 persons he had specified. Fifty per cent. additional was then allowed for the presence or installation of automatic sprinklers, which latter Mr. Porter regards of problematical value as to life-saving and useful principally as a property-saving device. This arbitrary allowance by the commission increased the allowable stairway capacity to over 100 per cent. more than he had recommended; thus permitting one person on every step of the stairways and making the lock-step condition legal in every factory building.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed upon the better, safer, quicker and much larger capacity offered by the fire or division wall with its horizontal exit, according to Messrs. Himmelwright and Porter.

Bradstreet's index number for cost of commodities is down to 8.8320, the lowest since October, 1911. The highest point was 9.5462 in December, 1912. The cost of living ought to be declining, but will have to descend to a much lower level and include lower taxation before the difference will be very noticeable.

Out of 108,000 premises inspected last month by the uniformed force of the Fire Department, under the provisions of the Fire Prevention law, dangerous conditions were found to exist in only 849 places, which is less than one per cent. of the whole number. In 80,000 cases there was no cause of complaint, and in 28,000 the violations were only minor, and doubtless have been or will be quickly remedied. The firemen inspect all classes of buildings except tenements. For the first going-over, this speaks fairly well for the good conditions maintained in this great city.

The attempt of the manufacturers of non-union trim in the West to force open-shop conditions upon New York City has, after several years of litigation, resulted in their defeat. The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals has dismissed the suit of the Paine Lumber Company and others against the representative organizations in the local carpenter and woodworking trades, both employers and journeymen, who have made for many years common cause against the non-union material. The court, holding that the New York craftsmen have violated no law, sustains the Circuit Court, in dismissing the injunction which the Westerners had obtained in the New York State courts. The decision seems to give countenance to the principle long contended for by local mechanics, that they cannot pay the high cost of city living and compete with the product of Western planing mills operated with non-union labor.

Real Estate Bodies Should Be Public Spirited.

It is very much to be hoped that the success obtained by the real estate interests of New York in defeating the proposed increase of the land taxes during the Legislative session will not result in any false appraisal of the real nature and dangers of the existing situation. The same or some similar bill will undoubtedly be introduced at the next session of the Legislature, and the same fight will have to be made all over again. In order to meet an attack of this kind successfully, the real estate interests of the city should not wait until a crisis has arrived and they are forced to put forward all their efforts to avert the danger. They should keep an active organization and agitation alive between Legislative sessions, and they should show the same kind of interest in the better government of the city and in its general welfare as their opponents do.

Whatever one may think of the proposed increase of the land tax, its advocates are for the most part public-spirited people who sincerely believe that the single tax or the nearest possible approximation to it will make for the social betterment of the poorer inhabitants of New York. If the organization of property owners exhibited somewhat more general public spirit and made more effective and extensive contributions to the better government of the city, they would be in a stronger position when they came forward to oppose undesirable and harmful proposals for an increase in the land taxes and excessively expensive plans for social betterment.

Property owners' associations will never attain the weight in the community to which they are entitled as long as they confine themselves to advocating municipal improvements from which they benefit or to opposing social reforms which affect their interests injuriously. The collective interests of the inhabitants of New York are becoming of more importance than the interests of any section of the city or of any class of its citizens. Property owners' associations should recognize this fact and should become as far as possible civic rather than merely class organizations. They should study not merely their own interests, but the public needs of the whole city and the best means of satisfying.

Prepare for the Constitutional Convention.

One matter of large public policy which should be carefully considered by the property owners of the city is the approaching Constitutional convention. The people of New York have voted by a very small majority of a very small vote to hold a convention in April, 1915, to revise the fundamental law of the State. It is a great pity that so important a decision should be made by such an exceedingly small proportion of the voters; but this evidence of the lack of public interest in the matter makes it all the more necessary for good citizens to organize for the purpose of electing able and disinterested delegates and to agitate on behalf of a sound policy of Constitutional revision; otherwise it will be easy for the politicians or the extremists to secure control of the convention and to draw up a new instrument which would be even worse than that under which we are still being governed. No intelligent citizen of this city needs to be informed as to the importance to him of securing a better Constitution for the State. To call the existing government representative would be a joke.

The Legislature has shown again and again that it is incompetent, cowardly and open to all kinds of dubious influences. It will oppose desirable reforms for years at the bidding of political bosses, only in the end to pass them in the same spirit of abject subserviency. The organization of the Executive is equally unsatisfactory. The Governor has no control over his own proper subordinates and cannot be made responsible for the conduct of the business of the State. He cannot even control effectively his own appointees, because the Senate is able to use its power of confirmation to force him to make political appointments. The consequence is a sickening spectacle of corruption and incompetence, against which under prevailing conditions the better public opinion of the State struggles in vain. The expenses of the State government have been increasing faster even than the expenses of the city government.

By far the largest proportion of this increase in taxation is paid by the business or propertied interests of New York City. The approaching Constitutional convention will afford them the best single opportunity which they are likely to have for a great many years to deal a body blow to this system of wholly irresponsible and incompetent government. They can replace it with a government which will be independent of the political machines, which will be organized for efficiency and which will be really responsible to public opinion. What the business and real estate interests of New York should immediately do is to form an association for the purpose of acting effectively in relation to this all-important matter. The association should be well equipped with funds, and should draw up a plan both for the election of non-partisan and competent delegates and for subsequent action in relation to the framing of the new Constitution. In considering the Constitutional changes which it will advise, the association should call experts to its assistance. The improvement of State Constitutions is being seriously studied in different parts of the country, and, as a result of this study, certain conclusions have been reached. The men who have reached them will be very glad to offer to a New York association the benefit of their investigations.

Growth of Long Island Travel.

The Long Island Railroad Company has been obliged to make certain expensive alterations in the plan of its station in order to make provision for the expected increase in traffic next summer which is extraordinary, considering that the station has not been in use for more than a few years. There can be no doubt that the growth in travel will be very considerable in the near future. As the process of electrification continues, the various stations along the line of the road obtain an extremely close connection with Manhattan. When places in which land is still so cheap as Port Washington are brought within thirty-five minutes of the Pennsylvania Terminal, a large diversion of population in that direction is inevitable and will be quick. At present it is retarded by the isolation of the Manhattan terminal, and this isolation will not be cured for several years. But the amount of business transacted near the terminal is constantly increasing, and this fact is adding largely to the number of possible commuters on the Long Island Railroad.

It is becoming more and more evident that the boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens and the county of Nassau will be the areas of greatest activity in real estate development during the next few years. The new subway systems will be on the whole of more benefit to Long Island than to any other part of the metropolitan district. Its residents will have many alternative methods of reaching different districts of Manhattan. They can, for instance, come in from Jamaica either to lower Broadway, the Pennsylvania Terminal or to 59th street; and, of course, the reverse journeys will be equally easy. An enormous and radical shifting of the population will take place before the end of the current decade.

Engineering Societies Consolidate.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

At the annual meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers a paper was read and discussion took place on the subject of combining the membership, or parts thereof, of the national engineering societies into one association.

The primary object might be sufficiently and plainly described as "to foster and develop the human factor in the engineering profession, to place the engineer on the same plane as the lawyer and doctor, for the discussion of engineering in general, except scientific and technical subjects."

There was no adverse discussion, and both paper and discussion show beyond doubt that even the leading members of the great national societies whose objects are to advance science and engineering realize that something more is needed. What they realize may be stated in this way:

(1) An organization separate from those of a scientific character is essential to develop the standing of the engineer as a social unit.

(2) There is no "adjectival" distinction between engineers when their interests in society are to be protected or advanced. At such a time architectural, civil, electrical, mechanical and mining men stand as a unit.

It will probably take much time to develop a scheme which will appeal to the members of four or five different bodies so large in numbers and pregnant with tradition as our national engineering societies, but in the meantime it cannot fail to be of interest to the profession at large to know that younger bodies are leaving the slow and heavy methods of debates to their elders and are, fittingly, up and doing.

The most important consolidation of societies which has taken place in the history of American engineering has just been effected by an order of the Supreme Court of the State of New York which has merged the Technical League of Engineers and the American Society of Engineer Draftsmen, both incorporated bodies, into a new organization, to be known as the Technical League of America. The name was adopted because it includes architecture and every branch of engineering, as well as every grade of worker in all those branches from engineer-in-chief to tracer or technical student.

These two societies, though comparatively young, have done splendid work, the Technical League of Engineers among civil service departments and the America Society of Engineer Draftsmen in commercial fields.

This consolidation is the result of a thorough and comprehensive study of every phase of the question of placing the engineering profession on a higher social plane and obtaining for the engineer and his assistants that recognition, both economic and social, which is due to men through whose untiring efforts almost every possible safeguard for human health and every device for the higher development of the human race is conceived and perfected.

The league cordially invites those members of existing national societies who believe in advancing the status of the engineer through the medium of legislation and organized effort to send in their applications to the league forthwith, without prejudice to their present affiliation. The league most heartily extends this invitation also to the members of other State and local societies, and particularly to that great body of men in the profession, of all grades, who belong to no organization but who have been waiting for the event of the Technical League of America.

WALTER M. SMYTH,
General Secretary,
Technical League of America.

"The Unearned Increment."

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

This is the euphonious phrase used daily by socialists, single taxers, and political economists. It is generally used in relation to real estate; is meant to represent the increased value of land, on the assumption that the community as a whole produced such and the owner did not; that the community is entitled to such increase either in whole or in part, the percentage depending upon the emotional make-up of each individual who is an "unearned increment" taxer.

"Unearned increment" is the basic foundation of the single tax, yet there are people, even so-called economists, who condemn the principle of the single tax and advocate the principle of the "unearned increment" tax. Let us apply the principle of "unearned increment" to other human activities and see where it leads to:

Where a purchaser of commodities or securities for speculation realizes a profit in excess of say 6 per cent, interest on his investment, such profit is "unearned increment." Where silent partners in financial, commercial and manufacturing establishments receive profits in addition to say 6 per cent. on their investment, such is "unearned increment." Where those living solely on fixed incomes receive more than 6 per cent. dividends on stock investments, or where they receive profits due to increased values on stocks and bonds, the excess is "unearned increment."

The difference between the above three classes and the urban vacant lot owner is,—that the former receive annual interest on their investment and in cash a larger "unearned increment," and the latter receives no interest on his investment, but instead pays out taxes annually and special assessments which in many cases eat up his "unearned increment" if he is lucky enough to have an actual and not a paper one.

Where a purchaser of commodities for actual delivery and resale at an advance realizes an abnormal profit, such is "unearned increment." Where active partners in financial, commercial and manufacturing establishments receive a profit in addition to say 6 per cent. interest on their investment, plus a salary for management, such profit is "unearned increment." They are in the same position as the owning managers of business buildings. Where farmers have the value of their crops increased by reason of war, or by failure of like crops elsewhere, such increase is "unearned increment." The part played by the sun and rain in ripening crops is "unearned increment," as is also increased value of crops due to new railroads, new towns, etc.

There is "unearned increment" accruing to merchants, manufacturers, middlemen and farmers due to contiguity to market. There is "unearned increment" due to superiority of the soil of some farm over others.

There is "unearned increment" due to superior opportunity, superior mentality, superior physique, superior psychic reactions, superior sense touch, superior education, superior heredity, superior environment, superior sex (i. e., higher male wages than female for like work).

Every person in every land, from monarch to tramp, enjoys the results of community efforts as well as those of individual efforts; no man or number of men can differentiate between man's active and passive activities and the resulting financial benefits.

The whole trend of taxation to-day is not to tax for the expenses of government according to the financial benefits received and protection afforded persons and property, but to tax so as to equalize all the individual productive differences due to heredity, environment, education, mentality, physique, opportunity, fate and laziness; in fact, the unfit and lazy want State socialism, and everyone on the same level. They are crazy enough to believe that all of them will fare better than they do to-day, instead of which they would die of starvation.

To tax realty "unearned increment" and leave untaxed all other "unearned increment" is illogical, uneconomic, and is class legislation. To tax realty "unearned increment" before it is cashed in, and which exists largely on paper and is generally brought into being by the necessities of increased taxation, is criminal. STEWART BROWNE.

Building Code Revision in Experienced Hands.

Superintendent Rudolph P. Miller, who has been appointed by the Board of Alderman to assist the Building Committee in revising the Building Code, said yesterday that he would not hand in his resignation as Superintendent of the Manhattan Bureau of Buildings until the resolution of the board received the official approval of the Mayor. Immediately upon the re-introduction of the Amended Building Code in the Board of Aldermen, in January, the Building Committee sent a copy to the Superintendent of Buildings in each borough with a request for his criticism and suggestions. Mr. Miller, for one, found it impossible to undertake a task so difficult in addition to his many other duties. The present understanding is that he will be the editor of the new revision and have the assistance of the building superintendents of the Boroughs of Brooklyn, Bronx, Queens and Richmond; and that upon the conclusion of the work he will be restored to his present position.

The original resolution named Mr. Miller only, but as it was explained that building construction in each borough had its own particular features and problems, the majority (45 to 20) voted for an amendment directing Mr. Miller to "consult and co-operate throughout with" the other superintendents, who, on their part, were requested to consult with him in the preparation of the code. Mr. Miller will receive a compensation of $3,000, as it is expected he will be engaged in the work for five months, during which time he will receive no part of his salary as Superintendent.

Mr. Miller desires that it be understood at the outset that he does not mean to prepare an entirely new code. The probabilities are strong that any code which these five experienced men will recommend will be enacted by the Board of Aldermen in short order. After ten years of fruitless revisory work the administration is anxious to dispose of the subject finally.

WOULD STOP UNIFORM RATING.

New Jersey Legislature Asked to Modify the Insurance Law of October 4, 1913.

Building managers and real estate men in general, and particularly those in the New Jersey section of the metropolitan district, were considerably disturbed this week when they learned that the Richard's bill, H. B. 230, had been passed by the House and was in the hands of the Senate. The objectionable feature of this measure is its aim to prevent uniform rating of buildings by classes by the State Rating Expert, approved by 170 companies doing fire insurance business within the confines of New Jersey.

It is the purpose of this bill to compel each building to stand subject to individual inspection, so that the rate of insurance on that structure will depend entirely upon the nature of its construction. Under the present law Atlee Brown, of Newark, has been appointed the rating expert for the entire State, subject to the approval of 98 per cent. of all the fire insurance companies doing business in New Jersey. This schedule of rates is filed with the Commissioner of Banking and Insurance at Trenton, and upon these rates fire insurance in all classes of buildings is placed. In operation it is said that it has resulted in the saving of large amounts of money on high-class private and public structures throughout the State. In Jersey City fire insurance companies holding policies on public buildings recently voluntarily rebated $435 for insurance that had been placed under schedules existing before the new rates were made.

According to Assemblyman Richards, who is the minority leader in the House, there is a great deal of complaint on the part of owners of small buildings, such as residences and flats, that the operation of a general rating system works a hardship upon them and makes their insurance rates higher. It is in response to the protests of these policy holders that the bill has been introduced.

—At the Exposition of the Efficiency Society of New York, which is being held this week at the Grand Central Palace, New York City, the Public Service Commission for the First District exhibits some of the results of its work in building rapid transit lines and in regulating corporations. Charts and maps of the dual subway system and models of some of the new stations, together with stereopticon views of the progress of construction on rapid transit work, are shown.

Real Estate Board's Code of Ethics

The Real Estate Board has adopted the following rules of conduct to govern relations between members and between members and clients:

1. When a member accepts from another member a customer for a property, the first transaction closed shall relieve each member from further obligation to the other in connection with subsequent business done with such customer, unless by prior written agreement to the contrary.

2. A member shall give an unprejudiced opinion, if he gives any, concerning another member's proposition when asked to do so by a prospective customer.

3. No member shall put a sign on a building without first having the written order from the authoritative persons, and it is the sense of this Board that too many signs do more harm than good.

4. No member shall offer property for sale or for lease or submit any application for a loan without the knowledge and consent of the owner, or his authorized agent, and then only on such terms as authorized.

5. No member shall furnish information concerning a property to other members either in respect to its sale, lease or mortgage, claiming sole agency, unless he shall have been retained in such capacity. No member shall offer any property so furnished him upon any other terms than precisely those stated by the member sending out the information, and all negotiations shall be carried on through such member.

6. No member shall under any conditions claim or receive any commission or rebate upon repairs made, or supplies purchased, in the operation and management of properties in his charge without the consent of the owner.

7. Members are advised to invite friendly arbitration by the board rather than to appeal to the courts of law in settling differences with other agents or owners.

8. In all cases where an operator, owner, or other person shall act in bad faith towards a member, and the member claims that he has been unjustly deprived of a commission, the facts may be reported to the board of governors and the governors shall, after consideration of the claim, request the operator or owner or other person to arbitrate the claim of the member, and shall preserve records of all requests to arbitrate and answers thereto which shall at all times be open for the inspection of the members of this board.

9. All requests for arbitration, compaints and communications of any kind to the board must be made in writing.

10. The term "member" as used herein shall include all resident or non-resident active members and men associated in a member's office.

11. A member shall not put his name in the newspapers in connection with a transaction unless he receives a part of the commission or has actually acted as agent for one of the parties.

12. In case of any infraction of these rules, the board of governors shall determine the penalty, which, at the option of the governors, shall be a reprimand, suspension for a given period, or expulsion.

—Outdoor work is being resumed, excavators are starting numerous operations, and there is every indication that there has been a material decrease in the number of the city's unemployed.

Chester Local Improvements.

The Local Board of Chester has adopted the following resolutions:

For paving with bituminous concrete on a cement concrete foundation the roadway of Castlehill avenue, from Westchester avenue to Lafayette avenue, adjusting curb where necessary at a total estimated cost of $54,400.

For constructing sewers and appurtenances in Rhinelander avenue, between Cruger avenue and Wallace avenue, and in Wallace avenue, between Rhinelander avenue and Bear Swamp Road; Bear Swamp Road, between Wallace avenue and Bronx Park, east, Bronx Park East, between Bear Swamp road and the summit north of Mace avenue; Bronx and Pelham Parkway North between Bronx Park east and Olinville avenue; Olinville avenue, between Bronx and Pelham Parkway north and Waring avenue; Waring avenue, between Olinville avenue and the east side of White Plains road; White Plains road, west side, between Waring avenue and the summit north of Mace avenue; and in White Plains avenue, east side, between Waring avenue and Mace avenue, together with all work incidental thereto.

For acquiring title to the lands necessary for Rhinelander avenue, from Cruger avenue to Stillwater avenue.

Acquiring title to the lands necessary for Matilda avenue from East 236th street to East 242d street.

Acquiring title to the lands necessary for Carpenter avenue, from East 219th street to northern line of the city of New York; for regulating, grading, flagging, etc., in Randall avenue, from the Pier and bukhead line of the Bronx river to White Plains road, together with all work incidental thereto at a total estimated cost of $91,600.

The following resolution was withdrawn: For acquiring title to the lands necessary for Wilder avenue from East 233d street to the northerly boundary line of the City of New York.

The following resolution was recommended to the Board of Estimate: For laying out on the City Map Baker avenue, between Garfield street and White Plains avenue at a width of 50 feet, with the understanding that the owners agree to restrict property 5 feet from the building line from any future improvement, but the present improvements shall remain.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

Well distributed sales, early in the week, involving a variety of properties, appeared to indicate that the business would be unusually good, but the approach of the Easter and Passover holidays seemed to have a deterrent effect and toward the end of the week came a noticeable lack of interest in local real estate. Apartment houses on the west side were prominent, however, investors from Colorado and Virginia figuring in big deals. A Denver capitalist purchased a valuable multi-family structure in 105th street, in a transaction which involved about $2,000,000, while a Southerner expended a large outlay of cash for an apartment house on Fort Washington avenue. Other interesting sales concerned a loft building in 20th street, a much transferred Madison avenue building, the St. Thomas apartment on Amsterdam avenue, "Morris Hall," on Cathedral Parkway, and a row of dwellings on Park avenue, which are to become the site of a high class apartment house.

The leasing market was moderately active; the most important development bringing activity in that section which is becoming the center of the new woolen and worsted trades. A number of leases in Duane street indicate the intention of the shoe and rubber industry to remain located in that vicinity. With the spring building season at hand the lending market was stimulated by reports of good loans obtained on well located properties where apartment house construction is intended.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 26, as against 26 last week and 29 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 10, compared with 9 last week, and 5 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 16, as compared with 17 last week and 24 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 146, as against 180 last week, 17 having stated considerations totalling $519,950. Mortgages recorded this week numbered 95, involving $1,793,585, as against 101 last week, aggregating $2,103,619.

From the Bronx 17 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 19 last week, and 19 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $518,077, compared with $882,997 last week, making a total since January 1 of $11,620,524. The figure for the corresponding week last year was $1,389,000, and the total from January 1, 1913, to April 12, 1913, was $17,636,061.

Hennessy Estate Sale.

Builders and investors who look to the Bronx to lead the next big movement in real estate when the new subways are completed, just as when the present finished subway started the city's realty activity ten years ago, will be given their first oportunity of the spring to buy lots at a free for all public sale on April 28th. On that date, in the Vesey street salesroom, Joseph P. Day has been authorized to make public offering at absolute sale without reserve, by Michael Coleman, Forbes J. Hennessy and Mrs. Ellen M. Parker, executors of the estate of Ellen M. Hennessy, 134 well located building sites in the University Heights section.

The lots of the Hennessy Estate are adjacent to the University and are directly opposite Berkeley Oval, an athletic pleasure ground owned by the Gould family, and are admirably situated from the viewpoint of transit, and with their high-grade surroundings form one of the best collections of lots that have come to the auction block in recent years.

University avenue, a 150 foot thoroughfare, thoroughly improved and upon which is in operation a trolley line connecting with the subway at the 181st street station, runs through the property. Three blocks from the property is Jerome avenue.

"Since the announcement of the proposed liquidation of these lots by auction was made," said Mr. Day yesterday, "much interest has developed in the property, as it is regarded by well informed real estate men as an opportunity developed chiefly by adversities of the owners seldom given people who desire to buy, to build or to invest for future increment in a high grade neighborhood."

All the streets, with the exception of Hennessy and Oshorne Places, are sewered, graded and curbed, and the land lies high, and right for building, assuring occupants of whatever structures may be erected there untiring and unobstructed views of the Harlem River Valley and the surrounding country. The sale will be what the buyers make it, as there is no restriction whatever, the executors having ordered the disposal of the lots without reserve, for what they will bring in open competition.

Two-Million-Dollar Sale.

The Cleburne Apartments, occupying the block in the north side of 105th street from Broadway to West End avenue, 109.4x150x100.11x192.3 feet, and covering about eight lots, has been sold by L. J. Phillips & Co. for J. Clarence Davies as receiver for the West 82d Street Realty Co. to Lawrence C. Phipps, of Denver, formerly a vice-president and treasurer of the United States Steel Corporation, and the partner of Andrew Carnegie. The transaction marks the first New York real estate venture of the buyer, who is a nephew of Henry Phipps. He buys for investment, and paid about $1,500,000 for the property, giving in part payment properties in Pittsburgh held at $500,000. The sale of the property has been confirmed by the United States District Court, S. Stanwood Menken, of Beekman, Menken & Griscom, acting for Mr. Schiff. The ground upon which the Cleburne stands formerly contained the home of the late Isidor Straus. The Title Guarantee & Trust Co. will represent Mr. Phipps in closing title.

New Negro Church in Harlem.

Richard M. Bolden, Bishop of the Emanuel Church, has purchased the dwelling at 105 West 130th street, which he intends to convert into a church for his negro congregation. The announcement created a stir among residents of the block which is beyond what has been styled the negro district. No colored people had come south of 131st street. In the street are dwellings owned by the Astor estate, Jordan L. Mott, Little Sisters of the Ascension and several members of the newly-formed Harlem Property Owners' Association which has been seeking to restrict the negro residential section. The colored people are well supplied with church edifices in 134th street, 133d street and a new building in 132d street between Fifth and Lenox avenues which would be an ornament to any block.

New Park Avenue Operation.

The Swan-Brown Co. has purchased through Moore & Wycoff and the Cruikshank Co. the dwelling at 409 Park avenue from Almy G. Gallatin, and through the former firm the adjoining houses at 411 and 413 from Mrs. Fredericka Wetterau and Philip B. La Roche, on a combined plot 75x90 feet. With this purchase the Swan-Brown Co. represents the ownership of the entire block front on the east side of Park avenue, from 54th to 55th street. The recently acquired plot will be improved with a twelve story building, the facade of which will correspond with the 54th street property of the same owners.

"St. Thomas" Apartment in Trade.

Frederick Zittel & Sons and W. C. Woodburn & Son sold for the Ansonia Realty Co. the "St. Thomas," a six-story elevator apartment house, on plot 100x100 feet, at the northwest corner of Amsterdam avenue and 178th street, to the Queens Park Realty Co., which gave in part payment 500 lots at Queens Park, L. I. The apartment house was held at $250,000.

Mrs. Earle Buys Lofts.

M. L. & C. Ernst have sold the nine-story loft and store building at 11 West 20th street, on plot 28.6x92, to Mrs. Lillie J. Earle, widow of General Earle, who gave in part payment the former home of Ferdinand Pinney Earle, her son, at Monroe, Orange County, N. Y., a 123-acre estate, known as "Vinorholm," and held at about $100,000.

Oft-Sold House in Deal.

James A. Farley has resold 416 Madison avenue, a four-story dwelling, on lot 24.5x95, through Pease & Elliman. The property was held by Mr. Farley at $150,000. In December, 1910, it was sold by J. D. Slayback to the Swan-Brown Company, the latter reselling it to Charlotte Weatherly early in 1911 and in January, 1912, Mrs. Weatherly resold the property to Mr. Farley.

Welcome, secretary, are the officers of the newly-formed Frederick Douglass Bond & Mortgage Co. of Jamaica, which will carry mortgages on good properties owned by negroes in Jamaica. It is probably the first bond and mortgage company in the state exclusively controlled by negroes, and is associated with the Douglass Realty Co of 3 Standard place, Jamaica.

FRIEDMAN CONSTRUCTION CO. has obtained loans for apartment house construction from the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., of $175,000 on the southeast corner of 161st st and Fort Washington av, and $185,000 on the southeast corner of 162d st and Fort Washington av. The transactions were negotiated through the J. HOUGHTON COMPANY.—Frank R. Houghton and son, Herbert R., have associated themselves under the name Houghton Company for the transaction of a general real estate and insurance business, with offices at Broadway, southwest corner 72d street, telephone Columbus 280, and 156 Broadway, telephone Cortlandt 1540. The former has been engaged in the real estate business in New York for 40 years, and the latter for 10 years, the last two of which were with F. R. Wood and W. H. Dolson Co.

EUGENE WOLFSOHN AND WILLIAM G. AUGUST have opened an office at 1313 St. Nicholas av, near 176th st, under the firm name of Wolfsohn & August for the transaction of a general real estate and insurance business. Mr. Wolfsohn was formerly connected with the Real Estate Department of Curtis Mallet-Prevost & Colt, and Bing & Bing. Both Mr. Wolfsohn and Mr. August, until recently, were connected with the management of property owned by the Hoguet Estate and others.

LOUIS F. HAFFEN was elected president of The Bronx County Property Owners' Association at its recent meeting. Other officers are Alfred P. Schmitt, Thomas F. Goldman, Peter Barry, William S Smith and H. E. Astarita, vice-presidents; H. B. Tuttle, secretary; Simon M. Platt, financial secretary; Simon B. Arctander, treasurer, and Charles H. Baxter, chairman of Executive Board. Otto T. Smith, Constantine Wagner and Henry Schaefer were elected trustees and H. B. Tuttle, C. H. Baxter, Theodore Schrepper and Arthur B. Arctander directors. The association decided to hold a banquet on April 28 at the Bronx Opera House.

UPPER MANHATTAN PROPERTY OWNERS' ASSOCIATION will hold its first annual banquet on Thursday evening, April 30, at Ben Riley's Arrowhead Inn, Fort Washington av and 177th st. The organization, formed last year, comprises a number of large real estate owners, builders and real estate men, on the upper West Side, and has already done effective work in the way of protecting and furthering property interest in that section. The officers are Frank B. Lassette, president; William Picken, vice-president; John Robertson, treasurer; T. Ward Wasson, secretary, and Edwin C. Dillon, assistant secretary. John Knox McAfee is chairman of the executive committee, which also includes Harry Goodsteln, Thomas Dwyer, S. L. Murphy, H. A. Blumenthal, William Rankin and Alex. McDowell.

AUCTION SALES OF WEEK.

Except where otherwise stated, the properties offered were in foreclosure. Adjournments of legal sales to next week are noted under Advertised Legal Sales.

* Indicates that the property described was bid in for the plaintiff's account.

The Auction Market.

Wednesday was the only day this week, which produced outside buyers. Out of thirty-six offerings at the Manhattan and Bronx Exchange Salesrooms, parties in interest obtained twenty-six; seven were withdrawn or adjourned and outsiders purchased three. Aaron Zwerdling paid $32,100 for an Essex street tenement and Nathan Glassheim bid $15,800 for a similar building on Greenwich avenue, both offered at voluntary sale. The other buyer was Robert R. Heywood, who purchased 617 West 129th street for $22,250. The sale of the Hotel Langdon in 124th street was adjourned until next Tuesday.

For the coming week, most of the scheduled sales concern tenements and apartments, although several large holdings will be offered. Joseph P. Day will sell a 12-sty loft building at 29-33 West 35th street, besides valuable apartment houses in West 163d street and on Seventh avenue, and a number of East Side tenements. The M. Morgenthau, Jr., Company offers three apartment houses on Wadsworth avenue; Herbert A. Sherman, a Division street loft building and the other auctioneers a number of miscellaneous properties in various sections of the city.

Moving Day

Moving day discloses the fact that most of the moving vans are depositing their loads in front of buildings equipped for electric service.

Modern families demand electric light in their homes. They know its many advantages and conveniences and go where they may enjoy them.

The home electrically equipped rents more readily and sells at a higher price.

DEPARTMENTAL RULINGS.

New York State Department of Labor.

(New Factory Buildings.)

79a.—No factory shall be conducted in any building hereafter erected more than one story in height unless such building shall conform to the following requirements:

1. All buildings more than four stories in height shall be of fireproof construction. The roofs of all buildings shall be covered with incombustible material, or shall be of tar and slag or plastic cement supported by or applied to arches of fireproof material, and the cornices shall be constructed of incombustible material. All exterior walls within twenty-five feet of any non-fireproof building shall not be less than eight inches thick and shall extend three feet above the roof.

2. Floor area and required exits. The term floor area as used in this section signifies the entire space between fire walls, or between a fire wall and an exterior wall of a building, or between the exterior walls of the building where there is no intervening fire wall. From every floor area there shall not be less than two means of exit remote from each other, one of which on every floor above the ground floor shall be an interior enclosed fireproof stairway or an exterior enclosed fireproof stairway, and the other shall be such a stairway or a horizontal exit. No point in any floor area shall be more than one hundred feet distant from the entrance to one such means of exit. Whenever any floor area exceeds five thousand square feet there shall be provided at least one additional means of exit as hereinbefore described for each five thousand square feet or part thereof in excess of five thousand square feet. In every building over one hundred feet in height there shall be at least one exterior enclosed fireproof stairway which shall be accessible from any point in the building.

3. Stairways. All stairways shall be constructed of incombustible materials and shall have an unobstructed width of at least forty-four inches throughout their length, except that hand rails may project not more than three and one-half inches into such width. There shall be not more than twelve feet six inches in height between successive landings. The treads shall be not less than ten inches wide exclusive of nosings, and the rise shall be not more than seven and three-fourth inches. No stairway with "winders," shall be allowed except as a connection from one floor to another. The treads shall be constructed and maintained in such manner as to prevent persons from slipping thereon. Every stairway shall be enclosed on all sides by fireproof partitions extending continuously from the lowest story to which such stairway extends to three feet above the roof, and the roof of the enclosure shall be constructed of fireproof material at least four inches thick with a skylight at least three-fourths the area of the shaft. All stairways serving as required means of exit shall extend to the roof and shall lead continuously to the street or to a fireproof passageway independent of other means of exit from the building, opening on a road or street, or to an open area affording unobstructed passage to a road or street. All stairways that extend to the top story shall be continued to the roof. Provisions shall be made for the adequate lighting of all stairways by artificial light.

4. Door and doorways. All doors shall open outwardly. The width of the hallways and exit doors leading to the street, at the street-level, shall be not less than the aggregate width of all stairways leading to them. Every door leading to or opening on a stairway shall have an unobstructed width of at least forty-four inches.

5. Partitions. All partitions in the interior of buildings of fireproof construction shall be of incombustible material.

6. Openings to be enclosed. All elevators and dumbwaiter shafts, vent and light shafts, pipe and duct shafts, hoistways and all other vertical openings leading from one floor to another shall be enclosed throughout their height on all sides by enclosures of fireproof material. Every such enclosure shall have a roof of fireproof material, and if the enclosure extends to the top story it shall be continued to three feet above the roof of the building and shall have at the top a skylight in a metal frame at least three-fourths of the area of the shaft or exterior window with metal frame and sash. The bottom of the enclosure shall be of fireproof material unless the opening extends to the cellar buttom. All openings in such enclosures shall be provided with fireproof doors, except that opening in the enclosnres of vent and light shafts shall be provided either with fireproof doors or with windows having metal frames and sash and wired glass where glass is used. (Added by L. 1913, ch. 461.)

By 351 of the Insurance Law it is made the duty of the State fire marshal to enforce all laws relating to exits from factories outside of New York City. Similar duties in New York City are by 774 of the charter laid upon the fire commissioner.

BUREAU OF FIRE PREVENTION.

157 East 67th Street.

Hints to Building Owners and Managers

A little advance information as to what the inspectors of the Fire Prevention Bureau will look for on premises under surveillance by the Fire Commissioner will be sure to save, if heeded, vexatious orders when the fire inspector comes around. The Fire Commissioner has given out a list of the principal items that inspectors will look for. The Commissioner gives this information to real estate and building managing interests, believing in the axiom that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

The inspectors are ordered to obtain proper legal evidences where doors are found to be locked or bolted during business hours and where smoking is being done in violation of the law.

Inspectors are ordered to confine their inspections to the matters specifically mentioned, except any unusnal or dangerous conditions that may be discovered.

Inspectors will look for defects in standpipe equipment, such as defective siamese couplings on the outside of buildings or defective couplings on the inside; to replace missing or broken signs on standpipe lines and to remedy any misplacement of checked valves or improper connections to roof tanks.

To remove immediately and to keep the premises clear of all accumulations of rubbish, such as cloth and cotton goods clippings, broken boxes, excelsior, and inflammable waste of all kinds.

To refill water pails where such are found to be empty, and to have all such pails accessible and ready for instant use in case of fire.

To repair defective firedoors when broken or improperly hung.

To change doors opening inward and see that they open outward.

To change stovepipes where such pipes are not properly secured in passing through wooden partitions.

To unlock or have the bolts withdrawn where doors are found to be locked or bolted during business hours.

To clear aisles leading to fire-escapes where aisles are found to be obstructed, and to display conspicuously "No Smoking" signs in places where such signs are required; to discontinue smoking in all places where smoking is prohibited.

BUREAU OF BUILDINGS.

Borough of The Bronx.

Architects are advised that in filing plans for new buildings or alterations where it is proposed to raise, move or lower structures that an architect's survey conforming with the map of the city must be filed in every case. The survey must show the relation of the building to the established grades, street lines and sewers as shown on the City Map. And the grade figures appearing in the City Map must be checked up by the Topographical Bureau in the offices of the President of the Borough of The Bronx before any action by the department can be taken.

Architects are further advised that they will expedite action on plans submitted for building construction of any kind by obtaining prior approval of the plan by the Tenement House Department for tenement houses; the Department of Labor for factory buildings, stores and mercantile buildings; Department of Docks and Ferries, for buildings adjacent to the waterfront, and Park Department for all buildings within its jurisdiction. The order is signed by Robert W. Moorehead, Superintendent of Buildings.

Bulletins in Pamphlet Form.

Superintendent Rudolph P. Miller of the Bureau of Buildings, Manhattan, has issued in pamphlet form the bulletins issued by the bureau January 1, 1910, and October 23, 1913. The volume of 124 pages has been carefully indexed and contains a number of illustrations. The compilation was made for the convenience of architects and others having dealings with the bureau, and will serve a useful purpose. The bulletins contain rulings upon or modifications of provisions in the Building Code.

BUILDING MANAGEMENT

PROBLEMS TO BE FACED IN EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY*

By WALTER A. HUGHES, Vice-President Ritch-Hughes Co.

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager for the American Real Estate Co.

AFTER July 1 a new condition will exist in the insurance situation as applied to liability insurance for employers of labor. The subject in itself is so large that of necessity only the "high spots" can be dwelt upon. In the first place, it is important to obtain definite data as to the rates to be charged by the State Insurance Association and also what things will have to be done in order to comply with the requirements and obligations of the association. The insured should also know what rates are to be charged by mutual associations, the nature of the management, the experience of the men in charge, and what must be done to comply with the by-laws and requirements of the association of which he becomes a member.

Definite information should be had on the stock company's rates, the financial standing of the company, and its methods of handling business under the existing laws and its willingness to adjust cases outside of the policy contract where business reasons are involved.

The new law provides that after July 1 any employer of labor who has failed to provide for insurance protection of a nature acceptable to the Insurance Commission will be subject to a fine of the pro rata premium charged by the State Fund, for a period which he is without insurance. Employers of labor must advise the Insurance Commission before July 1 which methods of insurance have been accepted, and if a stock company has been decided upon or a mutual association, and the name of the company and a copy of the contract must be furnished.

Four Ways to Get Protection.

Four methods of protection insurance may be selected: Option 1, the insured may carry his own insurance, providing proper qualifications be made before the commission as to financial responsibility. In this case a deposit must be made in proportion to the size of the employer's operations. The security must be in the nature of United States bonds, New York State bonds, municipal bonds in New York State or guaranteed mortgages on improved realty in the State. The collateral must be deposited with the commission.

Option 2. A State insurance association may be formed, under the supervision of the five commissioners, who have power to appoint as many deputies, assistants and clerks as they require.

Option 3. Mutual associations may be formed. Any association composed of forty employers, employing not less than 2,500 people.

Option 4. Stock companies, if qualified as to their financial and moral standing, are privileged to issue insurance to employers.

Mutual insurance is attractive in theory, and many times have the large profits of these associations been placed before different realty owners and employers of labor, and many times have the companies gone to the wall. Liability or compensation insurance means a guarantee of protection against loss and inefficient service, to make recommendations to prevent accidents and to furnish legal advice. The mutual association must administer and furnish this if it is to be of practical value.

Supporters of State insurance in New York State when asked whether a policy with the State will cover actions for damages reply that it provides protection only against accidents that are squarely within the provisions of the act and that the employer must himself satisfy any judgments recovered in a court of law.

Limited Protection from State Fund.

In the beginning, the rates of the State Fund will be cheaper than those of stock companies. It is this way in Germany. However, as in Germany, where the rates have been increasing steadily for the last twenty years, the State Fund will in time be so high that no employer will accept this kind of protection. The employer must not forget that the rates of the State Fund contemplate only limited protection and do not protect against the following:

1. Claims or suits on account of accidents happening outside the State.
2. Claims or suits on account of accidents to employees who do not come within any one of the forty-two groups of employment.
3. Claims or suits on account of accidents that do not arise out of and in the course of employment.
4. Claims or suits if the law is declared unconstitutional.
5. Assessments on employers.
6. Damage suits that are improperly brought, such as where an employee comes squarely under the law but chooses to bring an action for damages.
7. Compensation payments under the statute of a sister State in a case where the employee is injured in such State.
8. Accidents to persons other than employees on elevators, scaffolds, hod hoists, in building or other premises under the control of the employer, or by reason of the operation of teams or automobiles.
9. Accidents to employees of sub-contractors who may be injured by the negligence of the principal employer or his employees.

A Question for Consideration.

The question to be considered is, can a mutual association furnish and administer insurance protection as efficiently and as securely as the stock companies can and are now doing? The contention is made that there still exists some mutual life and fire insurance companies and they must be able to comply with these requirements, otherwise they would go out of business. Comparison shows that the existing rates of the mutual life companies and the stock companies are practically the same, proving that the mutual companies found it necessary to charge these rates in order to continue business.

Life insurance, fire insurance and liability and compensation insurance cannot be placed in the same class. The mortality tables, from years of experience, show almost accurately the percentage of deaths at a given age. So a substantial basis for rates exists. The law of averages also applies to fire insurance companies, and a fairly accurate estimate can be obtained. Losses are minimized by limiting the amount insured in a given locality. Compensation insurance is, however, in its infancy in our country. We have no extensive experience to guide us and there is no good basis on which to figure rates, excepting the use of the stock companies' experience under old law conditions. That is not a good basis because conditions have entirely changed. Employees are better posted as to what they are entitled to. The labor unions play an important part in the adjustment of losses and have given the workmen instructions to enable them to make advantageous settlements.

Under the Compensation Law there is no limit of liability. The State law is such that it will not permit an insurance carrier to limit its liability and there is a very indefinite limit under the liability policy. Each man injured or killed is entitled to full compensation allowed by law so there is no way of figuring the employers' total specific liability.

Hazardous Employments.

The new law states: "Compensation shall be paid for injuries sustained or death incurred in certain hazardous employments." These employments have been grouped according to the judgment of the framers of the law. For example, group No. 42 contains the sweeping description which covers construction, repair and demolition of buildings and bridges, which would mean that every one engaged in the building industry would come under the law. By injury is meant only accidental injury arising out of and in the course of employment and disease and infection, naturally and unavoidably arising therefrom. Investigating these cases on their merit and the average weekly basis on which compensation is to be paid injured employees requires efficient organization and will mean expense to mutual associations.

The law states that an injured employee is entitled to compensation while in his occupation, except when injured through his own wilful intentions or intoxication, or wilful intention to bring about an injury to another employee. Many other stipulations are made along these lines in the law and it is fair to ask the question, "Will the Mutual's Association organization be large enough to handle these cases promptly?"

The question of mutual insurance comes up again and it is my opinion that people who are unable to get insurance in stock companies on account of their risk being bad, either morally or physically, will be the first in line to take up insurance in the Mutual Association, or State Fund.

Germany and Austria, where compensation is probably the oldest, have a uniform compensation insurance law for the entire empire. The rates in those countries have been increased for the last 25 years and from present indications will continue to increase. Where premiums received from employees are not sufficient to meet the requirements of losses to be paid, the empire is called upon to make up the deficiency. This notwithstanding the fact that it is compulsory for employers to insure with the empire.

Section No. 53 provides that the employer is not relieved from liability in the event of the insolvency or bankruptcy of the Mutual Company or State Fund. If the insurance carrier is unable to pay, then the employer must pay. Thus it appears that the personal estate of the employer must guarantee the insurance carrier, an absurd relation. The possibility of being called upon to contribute to stock companies is very remote owing to their many millions of assets.

Finally, the rates to be charged by stock companies and mutual associations will be under the supervision and approval of the State Superintendent of Insurance. He has sent a letter of instruction to the effect the schedule of rates to be charged after July 1, 1914, must be filed at his office before May 1, next.

SYSTEM IN MANAGEMENT.

Tabulating Items of Cost—What the Monthly Report Sheet Should Show.

By Spear & Company.

THE progressive business man is constantly seeking to reduce his business in terms of figures. Costs of material, labor, and every possible expenditure that enter in the overhead charges are carefully tabulated so that he can lay his finger at any moment of the day on any phase of his business.

This same principle is extended in our office to arrive at a detailed cost of management of each building.

Necessity of an Efficient Head for Management Department.

As the care of business property is the very foundation of our business and not a mere side issue, the management department is the most important. Here all supplies and repairs are ordered and help engaged. It is apparent that the head of this department calls for an individual who is thoroughly conversant with every branch of the building trades; he must have a complete knowledge as to the value of the various supplies that are required in and about a building. His ability at arriving at a just estimate on contracts for repairs is a means of saving thousands for our clients every year. He makes the purchases for the office, and because these purchases are made in large quantities the individual owner receives the benefit of the lower prices that are obtained.

Monthly Report Sheet Keeps Building Manager Informed.

The system that is followed in our office when supplies or repairs are ordered for any particular building is as follows:

A monthly report sheet is left at each building, which must be ready on the first of every month, signed by the engineer. This report, carefully kept during the month by the engineer, tells the building manager what supplies have been received and what are required; what repairs have been made, which mechanic did the work, how long it took him and what further repairs are needed; the amount of coal received, the amount burned, and the amount on hand; the readings of all meters, electricity, gas, and water.

Economy in Repairs.

The repairs which the engineer believes are required are passed upon by the building manager as to their absolute necessity. The letting out of the work must be done with an eye to economy; the building manager must see that the job is done properly and the right quality of material used. He must be careful to notice that no time is wasted by the mechanics doing a "time and material" job.

The monthly sheet keeps the building manager informed as to the amount of coal consumed during the month, and if this amount varies to any extent from the average of previous months he immediately investigates the cause.

The readings of the various meters, electricity, gas, and water, carefully tabulated on the monthly sheet, must tally with the reports of the Edison Company, gas company, and Department of Water Supply.

All bills are checked by three different department heads to see that they are absolutely correct before payment is made.

Every item of overhead charges is then entered on a card reserved for each building, so that each owner may know at any time what the expenditures for the year have been.

An Effective Fire Drill for Factories.

A simple, though effective, set of regulations for fire drills for factories and similar structures has been adopted by the Fire Prevention Bureau of the New York Fire Department. They can well be applied in any city where no specific fire drill regulations are being enforced by the local authorities.

The regulations are as follows:

1. An employe shall be designated to transmit the alarm to the City Fire Department from the nearest street fire alarm box.

2. All employes shall be formed into squads or companies and a monitor or captain designated to take charge of each squad for the purpose of conducting same from the premises; a monitor or captain shall also be designated to take charge of each squad assigned to operate auxiliary fire appliances installed for the purpose of retarding or extinguishing fires.

3. Upon the receipt of an alarm of fire all employes shall assemble upon their respective floors at such points and in such manner as shall be designated by the monitor or captain in charge of that floor; and remove all portable articles from aisles; form couples with arms linked, and when ordered to, march from the floor in a rapid, but orderly manner to such exit as may be designated by said monitor or captain.

4. There shall be a sufficient number of employes designated by the owner, tenant or lessee of the premises to take charge of the drill and to operate properly the auxiliary fire appliances.

5. Guards shall be stationed at the head and foot of each flight of stairs to preserve order, to keep the line in motion or to retard the same, as may be necessary.

6. Squads shall be designated to search for those who may have fainted or fallen.

7. All drills shall be conducted in silence save for the orders issued by those in authority.

SHOP FRONTS.

Large Windows of First Importance for Renting Value of the Premises.

Like every other question, there are two points of view to the one of shop fronts. The architect's view—and, generally speaking, the landlord's—is that large panes of glass are objectionable. That no building ought to be allowed to "stand on glass" is a dictum of the profession, and this is confirmed by the public, who are only concerned with abstract ideals.

The Retail Trader's View.

The other is the retail trader's view—that every foot of window frontage represents to his business so many commercial travellers engaged in selling his goods. He has obtained a lease from his landlord at a maximum rent to erect a building suitable in every way to carry on his business and make a reasonable return on his capital, and to be told that he must devote a large part of his frontage to solid masonry in order to please the taste of those in a position to dictate to him is, in his opinion, contrary to all rules of commercial morality and business equity. If a landlord or community wants a sacrifice of this kind they should be prepared to pay for their whims.

The shop front, like the binding of a good book, is the first invitation to look inside, and retailers, in the belief that this sentiment pays, do not hesitate to spend large sums, that in other days would have sufficed for an entire building, on the ornamentation and furnishing of shop fronts. This tendency has been developed by the architect artists and the skilled craftsman of the shopfitter, who have moved with the times in providing ideas for the embellishment of our shops and beautifying our otherwise sombre streets.

From a trader's standpoint in certain localities large and suitable shop windows are of paramount importance. Shopping thoroughfares are daily visited by thousands of intending purchasers, who make a practice of studying the window displays before determining what and where they shall purchase, and much therefore depends on such displays, which may be taken as a general index of the goods kept and sold within.

A London Merchant's Opinion.

Cities differ in many ways of conducting their business; in New York we have long been wedded to glass fronts, but in London traders have only recently awakened to the fact that good windows "well dressed" mean good business. One of the principal retail merchants there. H. Gordon Selfridge, an American, says many London architects fail to recognize the growing need of a continuous and unbroken line of glass, and the letting values of many important shop properties are very much depreciated in rental value in consequence of the heavy stone columns and recessments of the windows, which militates against the trader's selling possibilities.

Mr. Selfridge refers as an instance of this to a case in Regent street. When the first design of the Piccadilly Hotel was prepared the letting values of the shops beneath the hotel were estimated by Messrs. May & Rowden to have a rental value of some £32,000 per annum. The original plans, however, were rejected, and heavy stone columns and recessed windows were substituted in place of what would be considered normal windows. Result: When the present elevation was decided on Messrs. May & Rowden promptly withdrew their valuation. It was at once found that tenants were not forthcoming who would pay for stone columns instead of windows, consequently the shops remained empty for several years, and were ultimately let for less than half the rent they would have produced had proper consideration been given to the trading requirements.

Merchant or Shopkeeper.

Mr. Selfridge was asked for his opinion in respect to shop fronts by the London Builder, and he wrote in reply that it was his judgment that the edifice which holds the large department store should carry with it a dignity consistent with the business which it is to house.

"I think the art of architecture is too often forgotten by the merchant, who, by only striving for one thing (and that is plate glass), makes himself a shopkeeper instead of a merchant. No building should be constructed which denies the general principles of architecture. For example, that building which is all plate glass, and which has no evident means of support, is one which is totally opposed to those general principles of architecture, which require ample evident means of support for all superstructures. The building in which the piers are all hidden by mirrors are all wrong, and are quite inexcusable from every standpoint except that simple one of selling goods.

"Business should make the arts its servants rather than oppose them entirely."

Our Old Dutch Names.

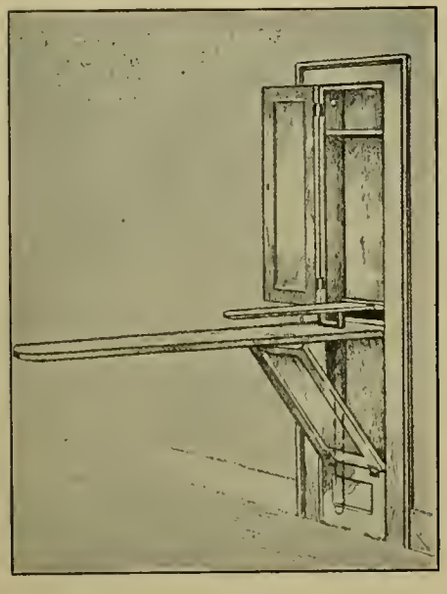
All authorities agree that the streets below Wall street, and some beyond, were laid out by the Dutch authorities, says Hopper Striker Mott. Some of them still retain the original names, somewhat altered, like Pearl, Beaver and Bridge in the lower city and Maiden Lane and the Bowery. Broadway was known by the first settlers by a number of designations, as: de Heere Wegh, de Groot Wagen Wegh; that is, the High Way, the Great Wagon Way. It became de Heere Straat as far as Wall street when well built upon, and at as early a date as 1665, at any rate, it was de Breede Wegh. Even after the English conquest it was so dominated by Domine Selyns in 1686, on the list of church members, enrolled according to residence. Now the exact meaning of de Breede Wegh is the Broad Way, so that to a literal translation of this term we are indebted for the name of the great thoroughfare.

Sewel's Dutch-English Dictionary, printed in Amsterdam in 1707, is referred to for the derivation of the words cited above.

New street was the last and consequently the newest laid out below Wall street. It was ordered "staked out" by Governor Andros, May 5, 1679. Twenty years later an innkeeper "on one of the worst places in New York, viz: New street," petitioned relative to the excise. Many still hold to the opinion that this street, as synonymous with Wall street, is yet a wicked resort.

USEFUL APPLIANCES

Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration.



A Wire Shovel Ash Sifter.

HERE is a new device that will interest many who have ashes to sift, whether it be a janitor or an occupant of a suburban home. The shovel is manufactured by the American Wire Shovel Co., of Boston, and consists of a sawed, curved, modern handle, split at the top, forming a substantial grip. It is braced on both back and front with steel plates. Wires run through the handle, and are attached at the bottom of the plate made of compressed steel wire. The shovels are from 9 to 14 inches in size, and when in operation sift the ashes under the ash pit of the furnace and the unburned coal may thus be immediately lifted out and returned to the firing furnace. The device is said to save time and labor as well as to increase the service of the fuel.

Kitchenette Novelty.

A NOVELTY that is almost sure to please the flat dweller is an ironing board cabinet located in the kitchen. This ironing board is compact and convenient. It is inexpensive, but has the ability to attract prospective tenants, because of the apparent thoughtfulness that the owner has exercised in saving the woman of the house from unnecessary lifting and the care of an extra implement. It consists of a disappearing ironing board, which is built into a recess in the wall as shown. It also serves as a kitchen table. It is manufactured by the Peerless Ironing Board Co., of San Francisco.

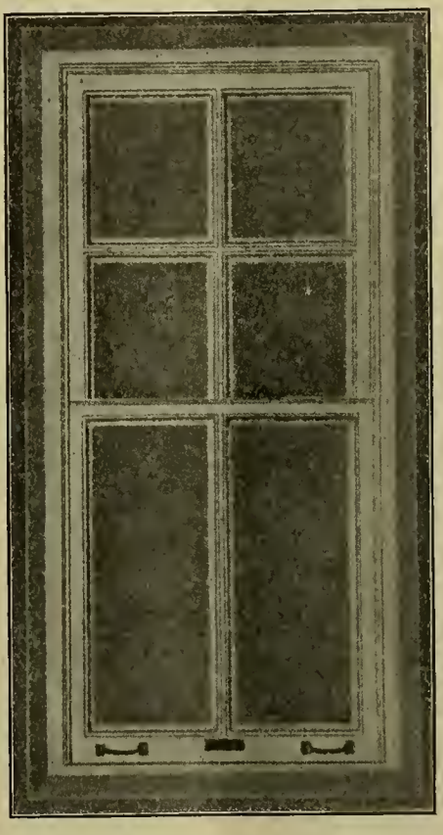
A Substitute for Cement.



ACCORDING to a consulate report, experiments looking toward the substitution of some other admixture for Portland cement have proved remarkably successful in Harput, Turkey, where Portland cement is not generally known to the average builder. The mixture is equally satisfactory in water as in places exposed to the weather. The mixture is slaked lime, linseed oil and cotton fibre. The process is started by pouring the oil on a handful of cotton, after which the lime is dusted in. It is then kneaded until the whole is thoroughly mixed and about the consistency of dough. The more it is kneaded the better the mixture becomes. It is then placed in position and allowed to thoroughly dry.

According to the report, this compound has undergone a severe endurance test at the American consulate at Harput. Two years ago the stone floor in the balcony on the north side of the consulate leaked in several places and rotted the woodwork supporting the balcony. The floor was finally taken up, new timber added and the stone flags again put down. Between each stone this mixture was forced in and smoothed over the joint.

The oil spread out on the stone for about half an inch from each joint, leaving a slight mark; but the compound soon hardened like cement, and now the surface over the part where the stones are joined is said to be as hard and smooth and watertight as if rich cement had been used.

A Fireproof Window.

IN conversation with one of the leading fireproof experts of the country the other day, a reporter of the Record and Guide staff learned that the fire insurance underwriters, architects, and building experts throughout the country have made exhaustive efforts to produce a window that is absolutely fire resisting. As a matter of fact, the window is one of the weakest spots in latter-day construction.

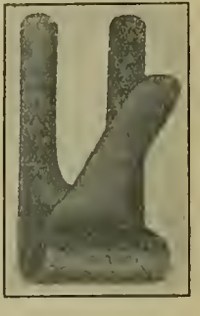
With this in mind it may be of interest to our readers to know that a window manufactured by the Foster Sheet Metal Works, of Springfield, Ill., which is illustrated herewith, has been put under test by the Underwriters' Laboratories, and has been found to have exceptional resisting virtue. This is manufactured of metal frame and wire glass. The glass in the window is of special roll over a perfectly taut wire mesh, which is strong enough to withstand the action of heat, but not so heavy as to make conspicuous the wire buried in the plate.

Fire-Killed Timber.

THE prejudice against the use of fire-killed material is a mistaken one, says the Department of Agriculture, for there is no inherent difference in wood seasoned on the stump and wood cut when green and then seasoned. On many areas such material remains entirely sound for a number of years after the fire which killed it and besides is thoroughly seasoned and thus ready for preservative treatment as soon as cut. It has a particular field in interior weathered wood decoration.

An Automatic Light Saver.



ONE of the most startling novelties introduced in the electric field of late is an automatic reminder of the present high cost of living. It consists of a switch, controlled by a door bolt, so that as the door of a room or apartment closes the lights are automatically switched off. This is controlled from the corridor side of the door by an electric contact between the switch, the bolt and the lights within. The lights inside are controlled by a push button switch, the lock bolt having no effect when operated from the room inside of the door. The device illustrated shows the locations of the shutoff switch. It is particularly applicable in hotels and public rooms where occupants are likely to be careless regarding the amount of unnecessary current consumed for lighting purposes. The Hart Manufacturing Co., of 203 Broadway, makes them.

Prevents Rattling of Windows.

THIS little device which is manufactured by the Angell Co., of Boston, is designed to prevent the rattling of windows in tall buildings where panes are exposed to varying wind pressures. The device consists of stamped out plates of tempered steel, which are secured to the runway of the casement. The lip shown in the illustration rests against the window with a pressure sufficient to prevent rattling, yet does not interfere in any way with the raising or lowering of the sash. The second illustration shows the anti-sash rattler in position on the sash. The device is very simple in itself. The efficiency of the device rests in its peculiar form. The idea being to give as little bearing surface as possible upon moving parts of the sash. In consequence it offers little friction. The contact point is made of extremely highly tempered steel so as to conduce as far as possible to the longevity of the device. They are made of an anti-rusting steel so that once installed they are said to be permanently efficient.

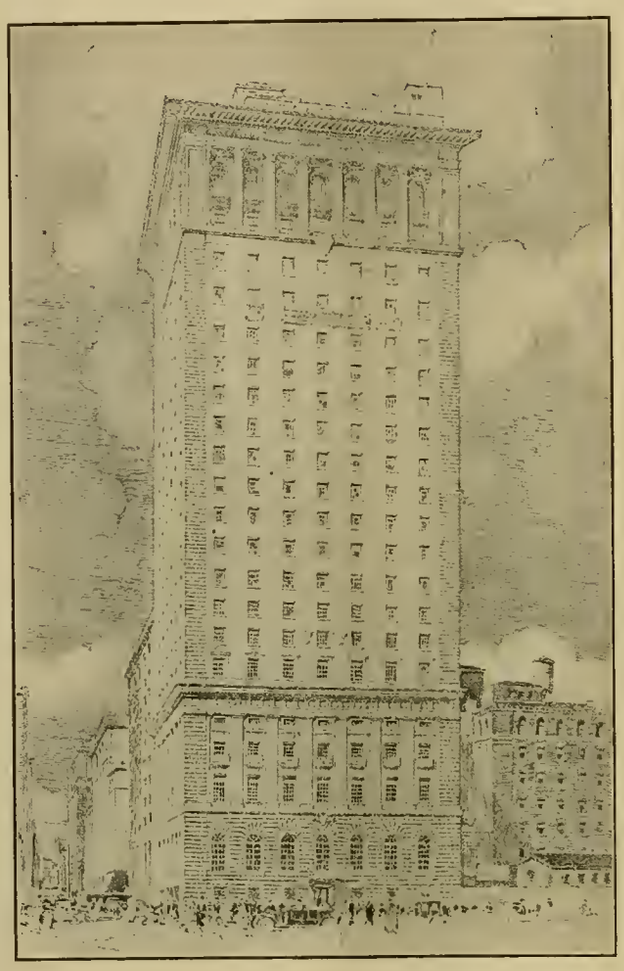
NOTABLE IMPROVEMENTS IN TERMINAL ZONE

New Structure For Yale Club and Office Building Adjoining Will Complete Development of Vanderbilt Avenue Block Front.

IF the present rate of progress is maintained it will not be long before the improvement of the Grand Central Terminal zone is completed. The two most recent projects will cover the block front on the west side of Vanderbilt avenue, between 44th and 45th streets. On the northwest corner of 45th street and Vanderbilt avenue the 20-sty. Yale Club is being erected, and plans have been completed for a modern office building of approximately the same height to cover the adjoining 100-foot plot on the north. This latter structure will be known as the Vanderbilt Concourse Building. Both buildings have been designed in a modified Renaissance style and will be complimentary to the other buildings in the zone, particularly the recently completed Biltmore Hotel.



Owing to the fact that these buildings are to be erected above two levels of railroad tracks, the engineers of the Grand Central Terminal station have taken entire charge of placing the foundations for them. The contractors for the super-structure, starting operations at the basement level; all work below this being performed by the railroad company, although under the supervision of the architects. These buildings will be supported by steel columns passing through two levels of tracks and resting on steel grillage at bed rock.

The distance from the basement level to the top of grillage is approximately 45 feet. On account of the extreme length of these columns they are braced at the express or upper deck level. They are entirely independent of the track steel and follow the system used in the construction of the Biltmore Hotel. Previously the track steel was designed to carry a load equal to the weight of a 20-story building, and it was proposed originally that all buildings would be supported on it, but the company's engineers have decided that independent columns through both track levels to bed rock would be more economical as well as more efficient.

A slight variation of arrangement was found necessary for the Vanderbilt Concourse Building, however, than was used in the Yale Club, although the principles are identical. Under this building the tracks expand in such a manner that the regular spacing of columns was not possible, so a cantilever girder system at the first floor level was resorted to. These girders, which are about 54 feet in length, are supported on 18 columns which rest on bedrock. The girders in turn support the majority of the columns necessary to complete the building.

The Yale Club plans which were prepared by J. Gamble Rogers, architect, 470 Fourth avenue, and which is being erected by Marc Eidlitz & Sons, general contractors, will be, on completion, the largest club house in the world. Brick, Indiana limestone, and terra cotta are the materials used in the construction, and the building will be as near fireproof as is possible to make it. It will cover a plot 100x90 feet, and it will cost about $1,000,000, exclusive of decorations and furnishings.

The first floor will have the main entrance from Vanderbilt avenue with vestibule and lobby. A reception room to the left and offices to the right with the main stairway opposite the entrance. On this floor also will be located the cloakroom, toilet-rooms, telephone central station and booths, and the cigar-stand. The service entrance is from 44th street and leads directly to three freight elevators and the service stairs.

J. Gamble Rogers, Architect.
NEW CLUBHOUSE FOR YALE MEN.

The second floor will consist of a large social hall decorated in the Colonial manner. Back of this will be a lounging lobby with a cafe at one end and a short flight of stairs at the other end, which leads to the grillroom on the mezzanine floor above. The grill room will be 22 feet in height, and is designed in the manner of an ancient dining-hall. This room is placed at mid-level between the billiard room and social hall, providing easy access to both.

The third floor will be devoted to a large billiard room with alcoves for the enjoyment of other games. The library and cardrooms will be located on the fourth floor. It is proposed to make the library one of the most attractive rooms in the building. It will be decorated in Colonial style, with alcoves for reading and writing and with a large open fireplace at one end. On this floor as well as upon every floor are located the necessary service rooms, lavatories and telephone conveniences.

The fifth and sixth floors form in themselves a distinct unit. On the fifth floor will be the Turkish bath, swimming pool, and locker rooms, while on the sixth will be located the gymnasium and five squash courts. Much thought in planning has made communication between the various parts of these floors simple and easy.

Bedrocms, arranged singly or in suites, will make up the layout of the floors from the seventh to seventeenth inclusive. Each bedroom will have private bath and ample closet space. It is proposed to decorate and furnish these rooms in an individual manner which will be decidedly more attractive than those in a regular hotel.

The dining-rooms will be on the eighteenth and twentieth floors, with kitchens, pantries, and serving-rooms upon the nineteenth. The eighteenth floor will be devoted to large and small private dining-rooms and on the twentieth floor will be the main dining-room, all of which will be decorated in the Colonial style. The kitchen and pantries will be equipped with the most modern appliances for cooking and ventilation.

Upon the roof there will be a garden with view in all directions and in the pent house will be located apartments for the superintendent, storage, wine and supply rooms. The service department of the club has received careful attention on the part of the architect. Four dining-rooms, smoking-room, locker rooms and lavatories have been provided for thec lubs help.

The building which will occupy the north half of this block has been designed by the Grand Central Station architects, Warren & Wetmore, for the Vanderbilt Concourse Corporation of 103 Park avenue, David R. Todd, president. This building will be practically the same as the Yale Club, which adjoins, the level of the stone-work corresponding. In construction approximately the same materials will be used for the facade. The building will cost about $600,000.

Steam for heating and power purposes as well as electricity and water supply for both buildings will be obtained from the service station of the Grand Central Terminal. The property upon which both these buildings are to be erected is owned by the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company and has been leased to the owners of the buildings for long terms.

—Seven thousand men are now working on subway construction.

DEPARTMENT OF ARCHITECTURE.

Lewis F. Pilcher Designated State Architect with New Powers.

The McDonald-Frawley bill which designates Lewis F. Pilcher, of Brooklyn, as State architect for a term of six years at a salary of $10,000 a year, has received the Governor's signature.

The bill establishes a new State Department of Architecture. The plan had the support of the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Architects. Under its terms Prof. Pilcher may appoint three deputies, secretary and assistants. The bill reappropriates $110,-441.56 for the conduct of the State Architect's office.

Lewis Frederick Pilcher was professor of architecture in the University of Pennsylvania for five years and for eleven years he held a similar position in Vassar College.

He was a member of the firm of Pilcher & Tachau, architects, of 109 Lexington avenue, Manhattan, is 43 years old, and is the son of Dr. Lewis S. Pilcher of Brooklyn.

"There is a big proposition before the Department of Architecture," said Mr. Pilcher, "in the construction of public buildings. The work as now contemplated ought to save millions of dollars to the State. There are hospitals, reformatories, office buildings and parks to construct and it naturally follows if this work is done under one system it can be done better and more economically.

"The entire plans can now be worked out from beginning to end before any appropriation at all is made for a building. Then it will be known just what that building is to cost. Under the old method one never knew what a building was going to cost. There is no more reason for this uncertainty in the construction of public buildings than there is in the construction of private buildings.

"Another important point is that the work of the contractor will be under the direct supervision of men who know just the sort of work that should be done and just the sort of material that should be used. In other words, the State will have men working for it instead of against it."

Uniformity of Style.

"To my mind one of the most essential things in State buildings is uniformity in the style of architecture and the construction of State buildings. That doesn't necessarily mean carrying out the same designs for all buildings, but a uniform, appropriate and impressive architectural plan which the buildings now lack, and which would be a guide to the members of the Legislature in voting appropriations. By following this procedure much that is now waste would be eliminated."

Another Hospital for Brooklyn.

The Brownsville & East New York Hospital Society (Louis Jaffe, 1922 Prospect place, president) has retained E. M. Adelsohn, architect, 1776 Pitkin avenue, to prepare plans and specifications for the hospital to be erected by the society. About $100,000 will be expended on the building, which will stand at the corner of East 98th street and Rockaway Parkway. Brick and limestone will be used in construction. The hospital will be four stories in height, absolutely fireproof and cover a plot 100 by 100 feet. The most up-to-date equipment and conveniences for the care and comfort of patients will be installed. Work will probably be started during the coming summer.

Exhibition of Mural Paintings.

An exhibition of mural paintings which should be of great interest to artists and architects, as well as to others interested in the building trades, was opened Tuesday, April 7, in the auditorium of the Washington Irving High School, corner 16th street and Irving place. The paintings shown are the decorations for the auditorium of the Carnegie Institute of Technology at Pittsburgh, and were executed by James Monroe Hewlett, Charles Basing and Arthur T. Hewlett, under the general direction of Henry Hornbostel, architect for the building. The works consist of the drop curtain and two series of three panels which will be placed at each side of the proscenium arch. The entire collection is an exact representation of the progress of architecture and art through the ages. The curtain is a grouping of fragments of the best in the architecture of the Romans; having as its central motif the colonnade of the Corinthian order from the Temple of Vesta, Rome, about which various interesting details have been included. The six panels portray the art and architecture of Egypt, Assyria, Greece, Byzantium, Middle Ages and the Renaissance, and include examples of the best that has been handed down by history and archaeology. The exhibition is open to the public, without charge, until April 15.
